Record—Elsewhere we publish an extract from the United States Government Blue Book, 1847, that was copied by Mr. Wm. F. Goerner of Edgewood, R. I., which as he says would seem to indicate why covers from Canada are found bearing copies of the 1847 issue. As late as 1859, a paragraph of the postal regulations of the United States read: "Letters received from Canada, to which are affixed United States postage stamps of sufficient value to prepay the full postage chargeable thereon, should be delivered without charge by the United States offices." In Mr. Goerner's quotation, the names of several agents in the British provinces are given, toge with their compensation for a ge period of time. Before the estab ment of a postal union of the coun throughout the world, the United S was under the necessity of entering working agreements directly with other countries. Under such condit postage rates were various and it a matter not to be lightly dismisse send a letter out of this country.

STAMPS OF THE UNION OF SO. AFRICA.

By STEPHEN G. RICH.

CHAPTER XVII.

Telegraph Use of Postage Stamps.

The telegraphs of the Union of South Africa are part of the postal system. All telegrams are paid for, whether prepaid or sent collect, by means of stamps attached to the original message or to a receipt for the delivered message, that stays in the post office. The ordinary stamps are used. I am informed by Mr. Sidney Clarke, of the Natal Witness, that even press telegraph accounts are kept by means of the use of stamps cancelled on payment of the account.

In all except the larger offices, the ordinary cancelling stamp is used for telegraphic and postal service alike. A few, such as Maritzburg, in Natal, among the larger offices, have an old cancelling stamp, no longer fit for active work on hundreds of letters, in use for telegraph purposes. Durban, the most important seaport of the country since the War is unique in having had for years two distinctive telegraphic cancellations. These consist of the large block numbers 1 and 2, each enclosed in a heavy circle about an inch in diameter. I have seen this cancellation on the 2s 6d and the 10s, of the last Transvaal issue also; I have not listed it under the "interprovincials," as it is not a postal cancellation.

The disposition to consider that any block of four or six, making up to eight or ten shillings face value, and showing a clear cancellation, is telegraphically used, is not borne out by the facts. Such blocks are common in parcel post use; up to a face value of 12s 6d the probabilities are in favor of their being parcel post blocks. In South Africa there is no special parcel and printed matter cancellation, as in the U. S., except for the cities of Bloemfontein, Pretoria and Durban.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Railway Stamps.

The stamps of the Union of South Africa are not known either surcharged for rail use, as is the case with the later issues of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, nor perforated with special initials for this use, as with the last issue of Natal. The railways, owned and operated by the government, use the regulation official penalty envelopes.

Brief mention should, however, be made of a series of stamps from 1d up to 2s 6d, bearing the legend "S. A. R." at the top, "Parcels Stamp" at the bottom, and the large figure of value in white on a background of the words "South African Railways" in small white letters, repeated many times, on a colored ground. These are attached to the way-bills for express and freight; they are never used by the public. The current series is printed in flesh color on unwatermarked white wove paper, perforated 12 or rouletted, and surcharged with initials of stations where used.

In view of the inclusion of the Belgian "Parcel Post" stamps, which bear the word for railway in Flemish and in French, among the philatelically recognized issues, I mention these South African stamps merely as possible candidates for like recognition.

BOOK REVIEW.

We have received from Messrs. Yvert and Tellier a brochure entitled "The Stamps of France, 1849-1872: Their Cancellations, Shades, Varieties, Price." Though produced in French, of course, from the pen of Victor Robert, it will be welcomed by all who collect these "classical issues" of France, even by many of those who are not well acquainted with the language itself, as it is superbly illustrated with enlargements of the stamps, illustrations of varieties, of cancellations and of postmarks of various kinds. The preface states that the book is "dedicated to modest collectors, to those whose purse does not allow great acquisitions; it is dedicated to those who love stamps for themselves and for the pleasure that they give."

Each issue is treated historically and philatelically with enlarged illustrations. In each case it is followed by "commentaries" or notes which deal principally with the cancellations and postmarks to be found upon the stamps, all fully illustrated in proper size. This again is followed by a classified list of cancellations, each stamp being treated separately with the commonest cancellation numbered "1" and the rarest with the highest number. Next comes a numbered and priced catalogue of cancellations, each one being given with the values and shades upon which it has been found. Concerning the former list, the preface states: "It is not only the experience acquired through nearly forty years of handling stamps, it is our very fine stock of the stamps of France which has enabled us to establish the solid foundations of this catalogue; better yet, we have had other stocks than ours at our disposal as well as beautiful collections belonging to our friends; and we can say emphatically that our classification of cancellations has solid foundations." Concerning prices, no claim is made for absolute accuracy: "We fix the prices of what we have, what we see, and what is found and passed through our hands. . . . As a general rule, one cannot take as absolute all the prices of any catalogue, not even of ours. . . . The prices which we give are starting points, subject to variation—prices to assist you in understanding the rarity of certain varieties which you can therefore ignore."

Chapters on Levant and other foreign cancellations, those of the Expeditionary Corps, Packet-boats, Paris Postal Bureaux and Railway Post Offices and a final chapter on the unpaid stamps of the first type complete a most interesting and exhaustive work. The illustrations which embellish it are due to the engraver, M. Henri Voisin, who presents a technical study of the issue of 1849, as the opening chapter.

The book is octavo in form, of 153 pages and contains more than 200 illustrations, being printed upon a calendered paper which shows them up to proper advantage. Its price is most moderate, being but 10 francs or fr. 11.30 post free to foreign countries. Published by Messrs. Yvert & Tellier, 37 Rue des Jacobins, Amiens, France.

J. R. BARKER, TORONTO, CANADA.

I notice with interest the comment of Mr. Mason in regard to Mr. Barker. I knew this man personally in Toronto and always thought he was all right. He requested a selection of stamps some time ago, and we sent him a lot valued at $32.80. A short time afterward he appeared in a highly intoxicated condition at our office in Montreal, and wanted to sell us some stamps. He was in a sorrowful state and begged for fare back to Toronto. Knowing him, I came across with $12 in cash to take him home. This was on February 25. Since that time, two letters have been returned to us unclaimed, and the Dominion Bank, Toronto, tells us the same thing that Mr. Mason got.—ARTHUR BARGER.

COMPETITION

A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.

I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.

Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

United States Provisional Envelopes

Of all of the main types of provisional 2c on 3c envelopes issued the variety overprinted in Daytona is positively the scarcest. If you collect envelopes you should have this for it is not a minor variety and is one that will increase as years go on. This is Scott's No. 2708 originally priced at $4.50, which price was raised to $7.00 in the errata of the 1922 catalogue. It is much scarcer than No. 2704, which lists at $8.50.

Just around a hundred in all were ever saved and this covered the several sizes. I personally obtained about 80 and most of them are gone. When the few left are sold it will be a $10-15 variety, for there are less of them than the black error No. 2667a or the red error on blue No. 2678, which list at $20.

The cut square collector must have this and there will be a place for it in the album. While ten copies last you may have one entire so that you can cut it to suit yourself at $5.00.

I can also furnish all of the other provisional envelopes. What do you require? (Please remember, however, that I do not deal in any of the envelopes except the provisionals.)

Information regarding new issues and varieties will be gratefully received. We cannot give the addresses of correspondents.

The chronicle of United States is edited by PHILIP H. WARD, JR., Box 4216, Germantown, Phila., Pa. The foreign chronicle is edited by PERCY C. SMITH, 40 Packard Ave., West Somerville, Mass. Correspondents will please be careful to send their matter to the right address.

UNITED STATES.—From information received from Washington we are informed that the Philatelic Stamp Agency recently established by the Postmaster General has proven to the satisfaction of the Department that its establishment is justified in view of the many requests for postage stamps and stamped paper.

We are now informed that they have on sale the stamps mentioned recently in this column in addition to the 50c and 75c Parcel Post, the imperforate 1c, 2c and 3c (they do not mention if engraved or surface print), the 1c and 2c flat plate imperforated coils and the recently issued 10c coil all in complete coils of 500, the 1c and 2c compounds in sheets of 170 in addition to the revalued envelopes and postal cards. They also have on sale for the first time the United States stamps surcharged "China" for use in Shanghai. They distinctly call attention to the fact that these are for philatelic purposes only and that they are not available for postage in the United States.

For the benefit of those living in Washington or contemplate being in that city I would advise that the Philatelic Stamp Agency is located in Room 217 of the new City Post Office which is next to the Union Station at North Capitol and Massachusetts Avenue.

Mr. Stanley B. Ashbrook has issued a very attractive little booklet which we will be glad to review at an early date, on types of the 1c stamp of the 1851-1857 issue. It is quite profusely illustrated, the different types being shown by large cuts. I imagine it was privately issued for distribution to Mr. Ashbrook's friends but anyone interested will find the complete article in the last issue of the American Philatelist.

During the last several weeks, I have had quite a number of the 3c 1869 used, submitted with the request that I inform the writer if the stamp is the variety without grill. For the benefit of those who have not made a study of the subject I would advise that quite often the grill on the 1869 issue is so light that on mint specimens it just about cuts the stamp. When they are soaked, no trace of the grill is left. On other copies the grill is so light that it can be ironed out. As a result the advanced specialist insists that this variety be mint and consequently used copies are of little value for the larger percentage fall in the first group where the grill is not noticeable. The only value that I can recall that could be definitely told in such a case is the 30c, which always comes in a deeper shade. The 30c must have all been from one sheet and judging by the color this must have been a special printing and not simply one sheet that missed the grill roller.

Mr. Albert S. Faught has shown me a couple dozen of the 1c and 2c metered mail envelopes that he has received in the course of the last several weeks. An increased interest is being taken in these covers and I would advise our readers holding on to those coming their way for there is likely to be a brisk demand later on for these early copies.

We wish to thank Messrs. S. G. Rich, L. J. Ragatz, Eugene DeMent and H. W. Boers for information of interest.

AUSTRIA.—Mr. J. L. Riedel has submitted to us for chronicle the 4k lilac, 5k grey green and 10k red lilac of the recently mentioned type.

BARBADOS.—Dr. H. B. Renton, of Gosforth, is good enough to send for our inspection a mint copy of the latest 3d with bottom margin attached, from which it would seem that the original colour of the paper is pale canary yellow (as seen on the reverse side of the margin where there is no gum). Just above this place the gum commences, and the colour changes to a distinctly darker shade: and the reverse of the stamp itself is still darker—presumably due to the colour of the stamp showing through.

The face of the margin is quite different in colour from the reverse, and his idea is that this is due not only to the colour of the gum showing through, but also to the yellow paper being tinted by the ink with which the stamp design is printed.

This latter should not be overlooked, when trying to arrive at the solution of the so-called "orange yellow" paper problem.

Our correspondent remarks that unfortunately he hasn't another copy of this stamp, or he would try the effect of washing the gum off! He hasn't attempted anything yet with chalky yellow paper; the very thought appals him, which prospect we can fully appreciate.

Dr. Renton sends, for purposes of comparison, a bottom marginal copy of the 3d, the yellow of which is, of course, very distinct from the other.—Stamp Collecting.

CANADA.—W. Randall submits a specimen of the new 5c purple. It was first issued in February. The 10c was also issued last month in blue. The 1c will be changed to straw and the 2c from red to green.

Mr. Joseph B. Parker informs us that the 1c post card is now printed in orange and also the 1c envelope stamp, the 2c envelope stamp being of a green color.

CHINA.—Our correspondent at Shanghai writes:—

"There has been a lot of ink spilled over the description of a new set of stamps for the Republic of China, correspondents going so far as to give detailed descriptions of the designs, etc. I am informed today by the Co-Director General of Posts, Peking, that no such or any other new issue is contemplat just where they got their dope would interesting. New issue services, the fore, who have sent remittances parcels will have same returned."

The 1c orange, 3c green, 6c grey 10c blue commemoratives, chronicled described in our December 10th is have been overprinted SINKIANG, native characters, for use in Chin Turkestan.—Stamp Collecting.

COLOMBIAN REPUBLIC.—Mr. Boyd Lewis advises that a new set of sta has been placed on sale, the 1c of wh he has received. It has a design c circle enclosing the arms of the cou with "Republica de Colombia" in a p el above, in smaller letters "timbre cional" and "Un Centavo" below the figure "1" on either side at the b It is a dark green color. The Ecc mist Stamp Co. submit a copy of th of the 1917 issue surcharged "J vicional $ 003" in two lines in red. a 2c provisional of the type A120 in and a 3c green stamp of the new i with the "Provicional" across it in same manner as the 2c before descri

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.—The Economist Stamp Co. send for chronicle the 3h violet of the 1918-19 issue, No. 1, surcharged "20 Doplatit" in two lines in black.

EASTERN SIBERIA.—Bright & Son give us the particulars of some provisional stamps used between two cities referred to below. We quote from the Bright letter:—

"I am sending you a set of the new cities of Eastern Siberia, so called 'Nikolaevsk' stamps containing 17 varieties. To convince you that these stamps are genuine ones, I enclose a cover with these stamps, overprinted in Vladivostock. These stamps were used only between Nikolaevsk (Amur) and Vladivostock during several days after the stroying of the town by the Bolshevists and Japanese. The Provisional Government of the Priamur District appointed a Governor to Nikolaevsk to rebuild the town and to restore the post-office. He found a very small stock of the Russian issues of the years 1909 and 1917 there, which he surcharged the initials of the town and of the provisional Government of the Priamur District N-na-A P. V. P. (Nikolaevsk na Amurye Priamurskoe Vremmenoe Pravitelstvo)".

GERMANY.—Mr. J. L. Riedel advises that from May to October an industrial exhibition will be held at Munich and a set of four stamps will be issued on the occasion, which will be sold at the Post Offices throughout Germany.

IRELAND.—Mr. O. F. F. Pollitz of the Frank P. Brown Co. submits to us for chronicle the following values of the current set of Great Britain surcharged with four lines of Gaelic and the date "'22" in black: ½d, 1d, 1½d, 2d, 2½d 3d, 4d, 5d, 6d, 9d, 10d, 1sh, 2sh 6d, 5sh, 10sh.

ICELAND.—Mr. W. T. Wilson advises that the 16a, King Christian type, has been surcharged "5 aur" in two lines in black.

IVORY COAST.—Mr. Benj. Mitchell advises that he has No. 45, No. 46 and No. 51 surcharged "Valeurd' echange Ofr. 10" and "Valeurd' echange Ofr. 25" respectively. The overprints are in two lines. Mr. Mitchell further adds that these were used at the Post Office at Grand Bassam to supply a shortage of small silver until fractional paper money arrived. While at the town in the summer of 1920, the postmaster informed Mr. Mitchell that these surcharged stamps were also available for postage and some had been used for that purpose locally.

JAPAN.—From our esteemed Special Correspondent at Tokyo, Mr. Ichico Yoshida, we have the following:—

"As I have already reported you as to the new issue stamps of Japan, the new revised rates for foreign postage of Japan came in force on January 1st, 1922, when the new stamps were brought out. The new stamps consist of three values, 4 sen, 8 sen and 20 sen. These stamps were put on sale in small quantities only in Yokohama, Kobe, and Nagasaki, on trial.

The Government has still a great deal of the previous issues on hand, so the Postal Authorities say they cannot sell the new stamps until they sell out the previous ones; therefore, I could not get them at all in Tokio.

Postal authorities say there will not be issued other new stamps except these three values.

The picture shows the sacred Mt. Fuji at the left and a stag and hind at the right. The noted place of the deer in this country is the Kasuga Shrine of Nara, very near Osaka, where thousands of the 'sacred deer' are to be found."—Stamp Collecting.

KARELIA.—In our Finnish contemporary we find illustrations of an alleged set of postage stamps for this province of Finland, in which the district and fortress-town of Viborg is situated. We are not conversant with Suomi, but happily the Stamp Lover comes to our help with the following:—

"First issue. Uniform design (22 mm. square) showing Arms of the district surmounted by the inscription "KARJALA" and with numerals of value in each of the lower corners. White wove paper. No wmk. Perf. 11½. Lithographed 1922.

1 mark pink and deep brown.

Mr. G. A. Fereday, in sending us specimens of the above issue, reports that the stamps are actually in use. He encloses a cutting from a local newspaper, from which it would appear that part of Karjala has been cleared of the Bolshevists and an independent Administration established. Some post offices have already been opened, with the hope of more to follow."—Stamp Collecting.

LUXEMBURG.—Mr. Henry Hooreman and Mr. W. T. Wilson send us copies of the 62½c stamp overprinted "75" in red and the 87½c surcharged "80" in black, both stamps being the Grand Duchess Adelaide type. Also a 20c in the Grand Duchess Charlotte type in orange red color. Mr. Wilson adds that these were issued the 15th of February.

SAAR.—Mr. P. J. Kranz advises that a new set of stamps is announced for the Saargebiet and he sends us a copy of the 15c which is of a brown shade. The stamp is somewhat larger than the recent issue and shows a view of the river. At the top are the usual words of the country and in the centre at the base are the figures of value.

A CONFEDERATE STATES CANCELLATION WHICH PRESENTS AN INTERESTING PROBLEM.

"Chattanooga, Tenn.," AFTER Sept. 8, on the Late 10c.

By EDWARD S. KNAPP.

History tells us that Chattanooga, Tenn., was abandoned by the Confederates on September 8, 1863, and remained in the possession of the Northern forces after that date. General Bragg, however, held the lines of supply, and the city was besieged until late in November, 1863, when Grant won the Battle of Missionary Ridge and drove the Confederate Army out of Tennessee.

I have three cancels of "Chattanooga, Ten."—"OCT 25",—"DEC 25", and "JAN 22" and unquestionably genuine postmarks that are on covers of no apparent value, bearing late issue 10c stamps (Confederate States, No. 210) which cost practically nothing. Yet these covers present an interesting "Problem". Here it is: The year-date couldn't have been "1862", as these stamps weren't issued until May or June, 1863. Therefore, the year-date must be 1863 or later. But, Chattanooga was abandoned on September 8, 1863.

The "Answer" is this (at least, I'm certain it is): When the Confederate forces abandoned Chattanooga, they carried with them the cancelling devices from the Chattanooga Post Office, and they subsequently used these devices to cancel army mail. These may be considered "Army of Tennessee Cancellations."

I would advise collectors to look over their late issue covers for these cancellations. They should be of decided interest to the specialist in Confederate States.

NEW ORLEANS ORGANIZES.

It might interest you to know that on February 2, a number of the philatelists of New Orleans and vicinity, were brought together through the efforts of Arthur W. Van Pelt, secretary of the Tourist Bureau of The New Orleans Association of Commerce, and to an extent by the writer, for the purpose of forming a philatelic club. We organized on the above date with twenty members, this number has since increased considerably. We have, also, quite a number of applications for membership to be acted on.

Mr. Van Pelt was elected president of the club, Mr. John D. Schmidt, vice-president; Mr. Robert M. Mordecai, secretary and treasurer. As a name, The New Orleans Philatelic Club was decided upon.

There have been several attempts to organize clubs of this nature in New Orleans, but for various reasons they appear to have met with failure. That there is a great need for a philatelic club in this section, where there are so many collectors, is obvious.—ROBERT M. MORDECAI.

CHAPTER IX.

The De La Rue Designs.

The plates for the line engraved stamps having become so badly worn that they could no longer be used, and this process of stamp production having proved somewhat costly as well as tedious, rather than have new plates made from the existing dies the government decided on an entirely new series to be printed by typography. Having decided on the change the next step was to find a suitable design. Usually postal administrations, who do not employ their own skilled engravers, patronise one individual or firm, and in his (or their) ateliers its designs are mysteriously worked out and only when the stamps are on the point of appearing is the public informed that a change in type is contemplated. Following this usual plan, as Mr. Wiener had been the source of supply for the types of 1849 and 1850, he was asked by the government to submit designs. He prepared several and though some seem to have been eminently suitable none were acceptable to the administration.

Next it was decided to open a competition in which engravers everywhere were invited to take part. On February 3rd, 1864, the Minister of Public Works issued a circular stating the object of the competition and giving hints as to the style of design which would be acceptable. The length and breadth of the stamps was prescribed, and it was stipulated that the main portion of the design should be a portrait of the king to be shown within a circle. It was also announced that the value should be shown in numerals in the lower angles and that the inscriptions should consist of the words "BELGIQUE" and "POSTES" to be placed above and below the portrait respectively. Finally, and probably most important of all, a prize of 5000 francs (nominally $1000) was to be awarded to the successful competitor. Competitions of this sort have rarely been productive of satisfactory results for, as Mr. Moens aptly observed, "men of first rate ability will not enter into such competitions, as, if they do not win the prize, they lose entirely the result of months of labor, and are wounded in their amour propre by the success of some, perhaps, inferior artist."

This competition was entirely abortive, for though designs were submitted by eleven different artists only one was in any degree worthy of acceptance, and this the administration was not wholly satisfied with.

Finally the government decided to negotiate with that well-known firm of stamp manufacturers, Messrs. De La Rue & Co., of London,—a firm without a peer so far as the production of stamps by the surface-printed method is corncerned—and arrangements were soon made for them to supply a suitable design together with the dies and plates needed for the new series.

When all preparatory measures had been satisfactorily completed and some of the stamps were in actual process of being manufactured the public were informed of the forthcoming issue in a decree published on September 25, 1865, viz.:—

postage stamps, and shall fix the date of issue of the different values, etc.

DECREES:

I.—The colors of the stamps which are to be used for the prepayment of all articles transported by the postal service shall be as follows:—

Stamps of 1 centime grey.
Stamps of 2 centimes blue.
Stamps of 5 centimes bistre.
Stamps of 10 centimes grey.
Stamps of 20 centimes blue.
Stamps of 30 centimes bistre.
Stamps of 40 centimes carmine.
Stamps of 1 franc lilac.

II.—The date of issue of the postage stamps of 30 centimes and of 1 franc is fixed for November 1st, 1865.

BRUSSELS, October 7th, 1865.

(Signed) JULES VAN DER STICHELEN."

It will be noted from the above that provision was made for stamps of the denominations of 1, 2 and 5 centimes and while these were not issued until all the portrait stamps appeared they really belong to this series as complementary values. As, however, they were not De La Rue productions, we have considered it best to follow the lead of the catalogues and treat them separately. It should also be noted that while the Royal decree specificaliy states, article 3, that each value shall have a distinctive color yet the same colors were chosen for the 1, 2 and 5 centimes as were used for the 10, 20 and 30 centimes. However, as the designs were so entirely different there was no danger of confusion.

The design consists of a profile bust of King Leopold I on a ground of fine horizontal lines within a rectangular frame. While the portrait is the same on all denominations and rests on a circular medallion in all except the 10 centimes, where it is oval, the frame work is distinctive for each value. But while the details are different the general motif is the same except for the 40c where the word "POSTES" at top is in graduated letters and the numerals in the lower corners are unduly large. It is hardly necessary to enter into a detailed description of the designs of stamps which are so well known and which, with the exception of the 1 franc, are still so cheap as to be within the means of the most modest collector, but it is interesting to note that one of the most important stipulations made in the government competition, i. e., that the name "BELGIQUE" should form part of the design, has been entirely ignored, and like the preceding issues these stamps give no indication of the country of origin.

The dies were engraved on steel in relief and the plates were made by the electrotype process. These, like the last plates of the line-engraved stamps, contained 300 impressions. All the plates were made in London but only one value, the 1 franc, was printed in England. As the process of surface-printing was entirely new to the Belgian workman, pressmen were sent from England to instruct them; and as the inks and paper for the earlier impressions of all the values were imported from England, it gave rise to the erroneous notion that the early printing of the 10c, 20c, 30c and 40c was also executed in England. This was not the case, however, for though the early printings are far superior in execution to the later ones it is entirely due to the fact that these were turned out under the tutelage of the skilled English workmen. When the plates, dies, paper, ink, etc., were sent to Belgium a supply of 1 franc stamps ready for immediate use, if desired, was also shipped. According to Mr. Bouvez the supply consisted of only 100 sheets, but Mr. Westoby states there were 1500 sheets, or 450,000 stamps, and judging by the relative rarity of the London and locally produced franc stamps the latter seems much the more probable figure. Apart from the fineness of the impression the London printed 1 franc stamps may be immediately recognised by the perforation which gauges exactly 14 on all four sides.

The ministerial decree quoted above fixed the date of issue of the 30c and 1 franc stamps, which were entirely new denominations for Belgium, as November 1st, 1865, and a further notice dated November 24th, 1865, announced that the new 10c, 20c and 40c values would be placed in circulation on January 1st, 1866, so that there is no room for discussion as to the actual dates of issue of the stamps of this series.

The perforation was done, as before, by Gouweloos Freres under contract with the government and all the stamps perforated by this firm have a gauge of 14½ by 14. The first named always used for the horizontal lines of perforation, was the work of the same machine as was employed for the later printings of the line-engraved series. The 14 gauge evidently represented a new set of punches for the machine used in perforating the vertical rows. Or, it may be, as one writer has suggested, that Gouweloos Freres had an entirely new machine of the "comb" variety which would perforate three sides of each row of stamps at the same operation. This point could easily be proved by the examination of a few blocks but, at the time of writing, we have none to which we can refer. An interesting variety is known in this series in which the horizontal perforations of the 30c are entirely omitted. Mr. Overy Taylor says "the first sheets of the 30c were only perforated down the sides—such was the haste with which they were gotten ready."

AUSTRIA THE REPUBLIC.

By A. E. Mollari.

Austria, in the Middle Ages, the center of the mightiest empire, under Francis Joseph, a world-power, has shrunk into one of the smallest countries. This fact alone is apt to attract the attention of all philatelists.

Once it was said of that empire: "Austria erit in orbe ultima" which means: "Austria will stay forever." It was a standing phrase and used as epitheton, but as we have seen, was devoid of truth. And from an empire it has turned into a republic. Thus the new stamps had to be different; the banknotes had to show some distinguishing mark from the former ones. The majority expected this to happen in the time of transformation. Some interested stamp-collectors, who were far-sighted enough, bought Austrian stamps, paper-money, and coins for ridiculously low prices owing to the low rate of exchange.

Austria's old stamps were, indeed, the model of artistic stamps—and so was the paper-money. A great many of those stamps were bought up by the Germans and Swiss, so that the scarcity of stamps with a lower face-value will soon be felt. And most probably despite the low exchange of Austrian money they cannot be bought any more for little money.

Apart from this it may be very interesting to know that in 1919 and 1920, stamps were used as change on a very large scale. Up to that time such a thing was unknown. It came about this way. The Italians in the occupied part of Tyrol, once of Austria, cashed the Austrian 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 heller coins and paid for them in centesimi, equalling centesimi and heller. If one considers that the Italians paid one lira for two and a half kronen, it is clear that a great many did not hesitate to take advantage of that.

Thus hundreds and thousands of pounds of smaller coins, representing the above-mentioned figures were smuggled into the occupied South-Tyrol. Soon the republic of Austria was almost without small coins, and consequently had no change. And it became a problem in that country how to provide change. But before the government ever undertook anything in that matter, people helped themselves—by using stamps. Thousands and hundred thousands were used in that way. Most of them soon became soiled, they stuck together, stuck to one's hands; in short, it was a dirty work to handle them, and the majority of the Austrians was fretting for having to handle them.

After a few months, physicians voiced their conviction, and said that those stamps were greatly responsible for spreading diseases. On that the authorities were urgently requested to issue paper-money to be used as change. What between the warnings of doctors and the crying need of change, and between the government hesitating to grant the petition, it led several municipalities to issue paper-money or scrip. Some scrips are very interesting as to their design. There are a great many varieties of them. Taken all together they tell a very interesting story of that unfortunate country. In those days the land as a whole suffered the throes of birth to a new life. The strong convulsions are, truly, pictured and represented by those designs.

It shows that some still clung to the monarchic regime, that they knew nothing of the new era; others contended, that a republic was the proper thing; others again expressed no faith in any kind of government and considered only either industry or agriculture as the only salvation of the country.

Those scrips further tell that the Austrains still are lovers of art, and this because of artistic designs, which must have cost money; some of the notes are of poor material and evinces that the poverty of the respective community must have been very great.

After the government of Vienna questioned the rights of a community to issue scrip, and found it necessary to prohibit further issuances all those notes were collected with the greatest eagerness. Austria's neighboring countries became the heaviest buyers, but also England dropped in on the market. One of the largest collections consists of 300 series, i.e., series of notes or scrip of different values issued by as many cities or towns. Such a collection sold in Switzerland for 8,000 frs. In our day only a few such collections can be bought; most of them have been sold.

Quite a few philatelists realize the great value of stamp collecting, because the knowledge of the respecting countries broadens the vision—and at times is very helpful in making an intelligent, loyal citizen.

A BINDER FOR THE "WEEKLY".

The long-desire is about to become a reality, and in this, many of our subscribers will rejoice. Our Beverly office has recently been favored with a visit from Joseph Hoffman of the Elbe File and Binder Co., N. Y. City. Mr. Hoffman is the secretary of the New York Stamp Society and also has various other philatelic activities. Connected with the Elbe Co., he has taken charge of the firm's department of philatelic supplies and has produced some excellent albums and stock books.

The Managing Editor was pleased to inspect the various specimens Mr. Hoffman had with him but was especially interested in a spring-back binder for the Weekly. This binder is all that the name implies and is handsomely made with the name Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News in gold lettering on the cover. This spring-back binder will enable dealer and collector to insert week by week the paper as it arrives and thus they will remain flat during the entire year. The binder will have permanent value and can be used during subsequent years unless it is considered desirable to keep the volume for the current year in the binder that holds it.

We offer this binder at cost, $1.50, and it will be mailed direct from New York post free. Will those of our readers who would like one of these binders write us to that effect? No money need be send with order, but if we can get a hundred orders the binder will be an assured fact.

In the years gone by there has been a persistent call for a binder for the Weekly, but all plans suggested have meant not only the disfiguring of the paper but the consuming of time in adjusting the paper in the binder. This problem has been solved in the heavy spring-back binder that Mr. Hoffman now offers the philatelic public.

What is your answer?

A FINE PHILATELIC FEATURE.

The Springfield Union of Sunday, March 5, contained an article by George W. Angers of Springfield, Mass., entitled "$24 Worth of Stamps Bring $1,500", the article having special reference to the aero-mail service issues of the world. The article takes nearly a page and eight air-mail covers are illustrated. The entire article is a fine piece of publicity work and we congratulate Mr. Angers upon the distinct service that he has rendered philately.

BRITISH CENTRAL AFRICA AND NYASALAND PROTECTORATE.

By FRED. J. MELVILLE.

FOREWORD.

We have to acknowledge our indebtedness to the Controller of His Majesty's Stationery Office for permission to publish the map of the recently formed Nyasaland Protectorate, and to the Hon. Secretary (Mr. R. W. Hatswell) of St. Martins le Grand Magazine for some of the interesting postal subjects and the postal organisation map of British Central Africa, as well as for the free use of much interesting material from the pages of the Magazine. Our thanks are also due to the Secretary of the British South Africa Company, and to Messrs. Bradbury, Wilkinson & Co., for information they have courteously rendered to us; and to Mr. W. H. Peckitt for the loan of many of the rarer stamps illustrated. Mr. S. R. Turner has contributed several useful diagrams, Mr. G. T. Turner has placed his collection of "specimen" stamps at our disposal, and Mr. D. B. Armstrong has supplied some interesting notes.

The proofs have been revised by Mr. P. L. Pemberton and Mr. H. H. Harland.

Post Office, Tshiromo (1894).

Postal Arrangements

The Protectorate of British Central Africa (now the Nyasaland Protectorate) and the Sphere of Influence of the British South Africa Company in Central Africa lay north of the Zambesi, in the South Central portion of the African continent. The territories brought under British Influence, chiefly under the direction of Sir Harry Johnston, K.C.B., were bounded on the north by Lake Tanganyika and the Congo Free State; on the north-east by the former German East Africa, and on the east, south-east and west by Portuguese possessions.

Sir Harry Johnston, in his "British Central Africa" (London: 1897) says that the Sphere of Influence is much larger than the actual Protectorate, which is chiefly confined to the districts bordering on Lake Nyasa and on the river Shiré. The Sphere of Influence is administered under the Charter of the British South Africa Company; the Protectorate has always been administered directly under the Imperial Government from the time of its inception (1891). The Protectorate was formally declared May 14, 1891, and the designation suggested by Sir Harry Johnston, of the British Central Africa Protectorate, was officially adopted February 22, 1893.

In the early part of 1891, there was no organised postal service in the new Protectorate, and letters for Europeans were usually conveyed by the African Lakes Company's steamers to the Vice-Consul at Quelimane, accompanied with the money for postage stamps, to be affixed by that official. Thus the letters were sent home or received through the agency of the Portuguese Post Office, franked with Portuguese stamps.

Sir Harry Johnston has informed my

TESTIMONIALS

New Order enclosed. I "cleaned up" on last packet I received from you (1000 variety) already realizing more than I paid after securing 400 varieties for myself.—B. Buchanan, Liverpool, Ohio.

Well satisfied with 2000 packet. Secured 900 stamps for my collection, selling the rest to my friends. Have already cleared over $5.00.—A. Wahlberg, Oakland, Calif.

Very much pleased with 1000 packet. Order enclosed for a 2000. I was greatly surprised at the quality of the stamps in the packet.—F. C. Elmes, Berwick, Pa.

Use bonds sent as payment for 10,000 variety packet. The packet proved highly satisfactory as a basis for a general collection.—F. M. Bigelow, Chicago, Ill.

Received 1000 packet some days ago and have had a fine time looking them over. Secured 250 new stamps for my collection of 3700, traded 43 for other new varieties and replaced 100 that were better specimens than mine. I never saw any stamps in such good condition, not a poor one in the lot. Order for 2000 packet enclosed.—T. Herrick, City Treasurer, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

friend, Mr. W. A. Town, that they had a postal service connecting Zomba and Blantyre with the outside world, either from July, 1891, or very soon after, a statement which is confirmed by an interesting cover in Mr. Town's collection postmarked "ROU Sep 17, '91", bearing a 1s stamp of the first issue, and addressed to London.

The institution of a proper postal service began in earnest in 1893, when the Postmaster-General of Cape Town (Sir Somerset French) was applied to for the loan of an officer of his department to organise the posts of the Protectorate. Mr. H. H. Harrhy, of the Cape Town Post Office, was "lent", and left Cape Town on May 11 for Tshiromo. He established, shortly after his arrival, a service of mail runners from Port Herald to Mpimbi on the Upper Shiré river (via Tshiromo, Tshikwawa and Blantyre), with numerous intermediate connections, and regular weekly mails in each direction between Tshiromo and Blantyre, a three-times-a-week service between Blantyre and Zomba, each way, and a once-a-week service between Blantyre, Mlanje, Mpimbi and Fort Johnston.

Post offices were established in 1893-4 at Blantyre, Fife, Fort Anderson, Fort Johnston, Fort Lister, Fort Maguire, Kalungwizi, Karonga, Mlanje, Port Herald, Rhodesia, Tanganyika, Tshikwawa, Tschinde, Tshiromo, Mpimbi, Zomba, Johnston Falls, Abercorn, Deep Bay, Likoma, Leopard Bay, Fort Liwonde and Fort Rosebery.

The details of the early organisation of the post in the Protectorate are best given in Mr. Harrhy's own words:—

"Zomba, owing to the unsettled state of the country in the northern portion of the territory, is in special communication with Fort Johnston and beyond. Mails from the United Kingdom and foreign countries are landed at the Tschinde mouth of the Zambesi—the port of entry for British Central Africa—are sorted at the Office of Exchange there, and are forwarded by steamer up the Zambesi and Shiré to Port Herald or Tshiromo, as opportunities offer.

During the dry season the Lower Shiré is rarely navigable above Pinda or Port Herald, and runners have, accordingly to be utilised for carrying the bags on to Tshiromo; between Tshiromo, Tshikwawa, Blantyre, Zomba and Mpimbi runners are used exclusively, while from Mpimbi to Fort Johnston the gunboat, 'Dove,' and houseboats manned by natives are available. Mails are conveyed from Fort Johnston to the various ports on Lake Nyasa by the German Government steamer, "Wissmann," and the African Lakes Company steamers, "Domira" and "Allala," and from Karonga to the south end of Lake Tanganyika and across to Lake Mwero and Johnston Falls by runners. is the claim we make for the STANLEY GIBBONS PRICED CATALOGUE OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES (Part 2), for 1922. This catalog will be a special edition for the United States, without illustrations of United States stamps, and will be ready about April 15.

Price $2.40 Post-free

The exceedingly interesting issues of the United States from 1847 to 1882 have been profoundly studied during the past few years by some of the most brilliant philatelists of the day and numerous articles have appeared in the philatelic press of America, but the publishers have hitherto failed to use this material.

As we think it is to the interest of all concerned, both collectors and the trade, we have made an attempt to write a list of these stamps more in accordance with their importance than any priced list that has hitherto appeared.

We have included a great number of types, retouches, plate varieties, shades, and paper varieties, and have priced the bulk of them at what we believe to be their current market value, most prices being based upon our own somewhat considerable stock.

If American collectors appreciate such a catalogue of their own stamps, we shall be glad if they will send us any corrections to this list, and also any suggestions for extending and improving it.

Other countries, such as France, Sicily, etc., etc., have been entirely re-written, the prices have been revised throughout, and hundreds of rarities are now priced for the first time.

We think collectors will find this the best and most accurate priced catalogue that has ever appeared. [34

Old Calabar is in charge, are manned by Englishmen, and the methodical way in which the work is performed by them—very often under most trying conditions—is worthy of the highest praise.

Our mail carriers, clad in long frock coats, knickers and fez—minus boots and stockings—present a picturesque appearance. They are always armed when on service, and appear to be very proud of their Snider rifles.

An amusing—though at the same time regrettable—case occurred some months ago near Blantyre, in which a carrier lost a mail bag containing nothing but a supply of postage stamps for the Postmaster of Mpimbi. After giving a truly pathetic account of the rainy weather met with, he stated that he tried to cross a swollen stream, and found, when the middle was reached, that he must either sacrifice his bag or rifle, or face destruction in the shape of being washed away. Upon scant deliberation the bag was allowed to go in order that his cherished fire-arm might be saved. So far as I am aware, it has not yet been recovered.

During the rains the low-lying portions of Central Africa are flooded for many miles, and at that season of the year a poor carrier's lot is not a happy one. In February last [1894] two carriers carrying mail bags between Mpimbi and Zomba were confronted by several lions. Deeming discretion to be the better part of valour, they sought safety in the high branches of a friendly tree, and waited until their leonine majesties condescended to move on to pastures new.

The runners are selected from various tribes, among them being Chikunder, Man'Ganja, Atonga, Angoni, Yao and Makua.

The work of our Postal Department is increasing by leaps and bounds, and in the near future its operations will have to be considerably extended. We have now [1894] a direct service to Katanga, in the Congo Free State, via Lake Mwero, and serve as intermediary for the conveyance of German Nyasaland mails * to the coast."

Between November 19 and December 28, 1893, Mr. Harrhy was in Chinde establishing a Post Office of Exchange on the British Concession there. At this office mails are landed from or transferred to the ocean-going steamers.

Sir Harry Johnston defies the functions of this Post Office of Exchange:—

"Letters or other material arriving from the outer world at Chinde are sorted at this Post Office of Exchange into bags for the various postal districts in British Central Africa, and into bags for the German territories and for the Congo Free State, and are then shipped up river by the various steamers plying between Chinde and Chiromo. At Chiromo the bags are sent overland to the different Post Offices of distribution between the Lower Shiré and Lake Nyasa, being carried by native postmen who wear a special uniform of scarlet and white. These men travel at the rate of 25 miles a day, and are wonderfully faithful and careful in the delivery of their precious charges. Cases have been known where postal carriers have been drowned in the crossing of flooded rivers by their obstinacy in not parting from their mail bags, and where they have fought bravely and successfully against odds in an attack by highway robbers. The negro of Central Africa has genuine respect for the written word. Of course, the time will come when, attendant on the growth of civilisation, native postmen will probably commit robberies of registered letters, as is occasionally done by their European colleagues; but, at the present time our mails are perfectly safe in their hands."

Mr. Harrhy, who was "lent" for one year to the British Central Africa authorities, returned to Cape Town in 1894, and was succeeded by Mr. J. E. McMaster as Postmaster-General of the young Protectorate. Later Mr. McMaster * became Vice-Consul at Chinde, Mr. J. T. Gosling following in the control of the Post Office Department.

Mr. Gosling has left some interesting records of postal work in British Central Africa, and was, we believe, the introducer of the first postal guide issued in the Protectorate, set up and printed by native Africans at the Blantyre Mission Press in 1899. This publication is now issued annually, and we quote from it the Queen's Regulations respecting the Mail Service made under the provisions of the "Africa Orders in Council, 1889 and 1893," by Her Majesty's Commissioner and Consul General for the British Central Africa Protectorate.

"QUEEN'S REGULATIONS.

1. It is unlawful for any person, unless employed in the Postal Service of the Protectorate, to send or convey any letter from any place within to any place without, or from any place without to any place within the Protectorate, or from place to place within the Protectorate, except the following:—

(a) Letters to or from any place not being on the route along which the post travels.

(b) Letters concerning goods or other property to be delivered, such letters being sent with, or for, the purpose of being delivered at the same time as the property they concern, without hire or reward for delivering the same.

(c) Letters sent by any private friend in his way, journey, or travel, so as that such letters shall be delivered by such friend to the party to whom they may be directed, or by any messenger sent on purpose concerning the private affairs of the sender or receiver thereof. But no person shall make a collection of such letters hereby excepted, for the purpose of sending them in the manner hereby authorised.

2. The following persons are expressly forbidden to carry a letter, or to receive or collect or deliver a letter within the Protectorate, although they shall not receive, hire or reward for the same, that is to say—

(a) Common carriers of passengers or goods, their drivers, servants, or agents, except a letter concerning goods in their custody for carriage.

(b) Owners and masters of ships and their servants and agents, except letters solely concerning goods on board, and to be delivered with such goods.

(c) Officers and servants employed in the postal service of the Protector-

* Sir Harry Johnston states that, in return for this service, the B.C.A. correspondence between Chinde and Zanzibar was carried by the German subsidised steamers.

* We are informed that Mr. McMaster was assassinated shortly after taking up a new position as British Consul at Beira.

ate, except letters received, conveyed, or delivered by them in course of post.

3. The importation or exportation of books, newspapers, or parcels passing through the post and not yet delivered by the recognised postal service of the Protectorate to the persons to whom the said books, newspapers, or parcels are addressed is strictly prohibited.

4. Every person sending, despatching, carrying, collecting, receiving, or delivering any letter, book, newspaper, or parcel contrary to these Regulations, shall be guilty of an offence, and liable to a fine not exceeding £1, in respect of every letter, book, newspaper, or postal parcel.

5. In these Regulations, "letter" includes "postcards," and "ship" includes every description of vessel used in navigation."

A curious development of the letter-box is one of the features announced in the Postal Guide.

"POSTING OF LETTERS IN MAIL CARRIERS' LETTER BOXES.

1. In districts where there is a considerable population residing on or near the mail routes, the mail men are equipped with light metal boxes having a suitable aperture in the top, to permit of the posting of letters.

2. Persons desiring to post correspondence by this means must meet the mail man in the roadway at some point on his journey.

3. The aggregate weight of letters, etc., posted by any one person, or from any one house, estate, or mission must not exceed 8 oz.

4. Neither parcels nor registered letters can be posted in these boxes.

5. The boxes may not be used for the purpose of posting letters in townships (except where an organised collection of letters may be made), or in the vicinity of a Post Office.

6. If the mail men are detained or taken from their route, or if the boxes are used in any way contrary to the regulations, their employment will be discontinued on the particular route upon which this occurs."

SWEDEN AIR MAIL.

The bi-weekly air mail service between Stockholm and Reval, run by the Svenska Lufttrafik Aktiebolaget during the months of July, August and September, was suspended on October 1st. The American Minister, Ira N. Norris at Stockholm, reports that from a technical point of view the service was very successful, but the infrequency of passengers made it a non-paying enterprise.

The Postmaster General paid a subsidy for the carrying of mail but this was not large enough to cover even working expenses. Of 21 round trips promised, 19 were carried out. The distance was covered in 2 hours and 20 minutes, on an average, while the steamers take 24 hours. Only 21 passengers were carried altogether, and 800 kilos of mail were transportd from Stockholm to Reval.

This service has shown that aerial transportation over the Baltic is not only practicable but is likely to fill a real need when Russia again revives. The regular present air mail stamps with several new values will be used.

PHILATELY A MATTER OF FANCY.

By L. WEBSTER WICKES.

If a person wants to collect anything there is no law, rule or regulation requiring him to choose between rugs, pictures or stamps and he or she could as well collect yellow dogs, cooties or trained fleas if that is what gives pleasure and one is so inclined. When it comes to collecting stamps the only thing that I have found that actually limits a person is the number of piasters and pesetas available. Though I have only been interested in philately a short while, there are two things that I am continually running against and on which I have been unable to get the philatelist's point of view. I am certain I am not alone in my ignorance and thought you might care to run a short editorial some time to enlighten us.

The first point is—Why the apparent inconsistency in collecting "varieties"? (There is none.—Ed.) As an example, what is the reasoning of a stamp collector that gives an honored place in his album, collection or catalogue to a British Colonial stamp that is overprinted in black ink with "O S" and at the same time will throw into the scrap pile the same stamp with the same letters added and added for the same purpose, but in the second case the letters having been punched with a perforating machine. New South Wales, No. 379, for example, is cataloged 10c used but No. 80 perforated "O S" is valueless, or so I am told by an acknowledged authority. Personally I prefer the latter if it came to a choice as it is a neater, cleaner job and one less likely to be a fraud. If the "O S", "O H M S" etc., are given a rate, why not the "O B" of the Philippines?

The other point is that I fail to understand the reason for the continual harping on the profit to be made in collecting stamps. (It makes smooth the philatelic pathway with the lady of the house.—Ed.) For the collector, stamps are a hobby and generally an expensive one and always some drain on one's poke, I believe it is fair to say that the increase of the catalog price is hardly 10% a year. Assume that it is. In purchasing stamps, the general price paid by the collector is one-half catalog. A dealer must have a profit to stay in business and of all collectors, the philatelist is the most dependent on the dealer. The result is that one cannot expect to sell the general run of stamps for a fifth or a quarter of catalog. In other words, a stamp is purchased today for 50c which catalogs $1.00. Its selling price in hardly 20c. If the catalog price increases 10c a year it will be fifteen years before the stamp can be sold at a fifth catalog and get the original money back, to say nothing of interest. Most people find this out but do not just see the reason and immediately curse the dealers when they find they cannot sell out at the profit they thought they could when they started collecting.

Philately would be a sad sport if it were not for the dealers and those who are in the game as business. It seems to me much harm is done by the harping on the profits to be made in stamp collecting. The same energy and publicity expended on telling of the joys and fascination of the game would be much more worth while. If you would care to give a real philatelist's point of view or some enlightenment as to the method of reasoning, I am sure it would be read with interest.

. S. POSTAGE, 24 CENT, 1861-66.

By C. D. ALLISON.

There is no other stamp issued by the leral Government that offers such an eresting field for investigation to the cialist as this stamp, and for wide ergence of color, and unnumbered des, it has all others so badly outanced that they are not in the race. is stamp also reflects the material ditions of the States during the war. first the colors were bright and the ss work well done. Then, as the con- increased in intensity, the colors be- ne dull and showed both carelessness mixing and lack of proper materials. these reasons and a certain modicum indifference the printers never seem ave duplicated any one shade. When atch of ink was exhausted that meant new shade at the next printing. nce a specialist can easily accumulate hundred different shades.

t one time a mixture of green and k was used, some printings of which w a strong predominance of the en, in others the green is only dis- ed by very careful examination and n a mere trace. A larger part of the s used were easily effected by at- spheric conditions and as a result, a ater part of the stamps issued in this omination from 1863 to 66 are faded, ne being complete changelings. Of character are the light buff and ow green. Chemical fumes can also xe wondrous changes in delicate des and colors.

he first issue was done in a beautiful lilac shade, the printing clear and inct, every line showing the skill and e with which the plates were pre- ed. An unused K. K. specimen of stamp is a pearl of great price.

later issue was printed in what was bably intended to be a light violet, these stamps are now catalogued as a l blue. The earliest postmark I have in connection with the steel blue of July, 1862. This color is fugitive nature and light will fade it out to e washy blue or a near steel blue, ilar to our present 50 cent violet af- exposure to sunlight. One of the ly colors is the lilac brown, some des of which are very dark and all g of a stable character. The gray- k, dark green, and a late printing in ade resembling the early lilac brown, the rarest shades of this stamp, the l blue coming next in order. Fine l-centered specimens of this issue are worth away above catalogue. I ld classify the colors as:—(1) Red c, (2) Steel blue, (3) Lilac brown, Gray, (5) Grayish green.

Written for MEKEEL'S WEEKLY.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

Mr. Bouvez writes "there were only 600 sheets of the first printing of 30 centimes made in Belgium, among which there were five or six sheets imperforate, which were delivered for sale by the Central Post Office. Besides, there were about fifteen sheets in which the horizontal perforation was entirely lacking, and some others on which the horizontal as well as the vertical perforation left much to be desired." We have made diligent search and can find no corroboration whatsoever as to the existence of the 30c imperforate, though both the 10c and 40c are known thus. As in the same paragraph this writer reports other non-existent varieties we are afraid little reliance can be placed on his statement regarding an imperforate 30c. We do know, however, that this value exists part-perforate but whether there were "about fifteen sheets" is probably sheer conjecture.

Towards the latter part of 1866 the government decided it was about time they owned their own perforating machine and they approached Gouweloos Freres on the matter. This firm asked 2,400 francs for their perforating-machines and as this was considered a little high enquiries were made of De La Rue & Co. The London firm stated the cost of a perforator would be 1,500 francs and the Belgian government ordered one. But when, in 1866, the perforator was delivered it appeared it was only the "set of punches," without the necessary machinery to work them, and this would cost some 8,000 francs more! The Government was staggered and determined to avail themselves of Gouweloos' offer but this firm was so indignant that it not only refused to sell its machines but also declined to perforate more than the contract number of 500 sheets of stamps per diem.

Eventually the Government purchased a machine on the Austrian principle—sometimes known as a "Harrow" machine—which would perforate whole sheets of 300 stamps at one operation. Mr. Westoby tells us that this machine was delivered late in 1866, and that the stamps first perforated by it were issued on January 1st, 1867. These stamps can be easily told from those perforated by Gouweloos by the gauge which is exactly 15 on all four sides. The 40c is known entirely imperforate and was first reported in this condition in 1896. As a dated copy of this error on a cover dated May 18th, 1868, is known, it is presumed that the imperforate sheet or sheets were issued about that time. A few months after the discovery of the 40c imperforate the 10c turned up in the same condition.

Co-incident with the acquisition of its own perforator the administration made a slight change in the paper. That supplied by De La Rue had been used up and a thicker paper of Belgian manufacture was employed. The two sorts of paper, catalogued as thin and thick, are supposed to be distinctive of the two styles of perforation, but Mr. Westoby says a thinner paper, also of Belgian manufacture, was subsequently made use of and should thus exist with the 15 perforation. All the paper used for the stamps of this series, whether thick or thin, was machine-made and unwatermarked.

Both Mr. Bouvez and Mr. de Bont agree that there were six separate series of these stamps in addition to the printing of the 1 franc made in London. Both writers also agree that three of these printings were perforated by Gouweloos and three by the Government, and their figures as to the actual numbers of stamps printed also correspond, viz.:—

20 centimes,	18,000,000
30 centimes,	2,100,000
40 centimes,	2,100,000
1 franc,	165,000

(b) Perf. 15.

10 centimes,	48,000,000
20 centimes,	28,500,000
30 centimes,	3,600,000
40 centimes,	3,000,000
1 franc,	300,000

The 30c, 40c, and 1 franc values show slight deviations in tint, the 10c varies from pale grey to slate, while the 20c provides a diverse array of shades. All sorts of blues are found, including ultramarines, and some with a distinct lilac tinge.

There are striking differences in the impressions of the 10c and 20c stamps, partly due to gradual deterioration of the plates on account of the large number of printings, and partly to lack of skill on the part of the Belgian workmen. The designs are not unattractive and the early printings make a handsome series; but even when the plates were comparatively new the Belgian printers, after the expert English pressmen had returned to London, were not able to get satisfactory results. Consequently the stamps were received with ill-favor in Belgium and as each succeeding printing looked if anything worse than its predecessor, dissatisfaction became so pronounced that one of the members of the parliament—Mr. L. Hymans—addressed an interpellation on the subject to the Minister of Public Works, to which that official replied as follows.:—

"Mr. Hymans says that the stamps recently put in circulation are as ugly as they possibly could be. Those previously in existence could be easily counterfeited. When it became necesary to carry out a reform, I addressed myself to one of the first Belgian artists, who submitted to me, some time since, a die with which he himself was not satisfied. I then opened a competition, with a prize of 5,000 francs destined for the winner; a dozen artists took part in it, and, I must say, the designs submitted to me were perfectly ridiculous. After this second disappointment, I reflected that if it were necessary to apply successively to all the Belgian engravers, it might be years before I should finish, so I addressed myself at once to a foreign house, whose specialty is the manufacture of stamps. That house submitted to me a design which is perfection itself; not one of the members of the Chamber to whom I have shown it will contradict me, and the first artist whom I had consulted was also of opinion that it was perfect. How is it that with this perfect die the administration has not been able to print irreproachable stamps? It is because the administration does not know how to print. This is the whole affair; we must learn to print, and then we shall have perfect stamps. As the die is destined to be replaced by the effigy of Leopold II, I do not think it is necessary to make any changes in it."

The stamps were printed in Brussels until the end of 1867 and after that the government printing works was transferred to Malines. The difficulties connected with surface printing, far from disappearing with practice, appear to have been augmented. The deterioration was particularly marked and rapid in the 10 and 20 centimes, some of the later impressions being mere blotches as compared with the first copies. This could hardly have been the fault of the plates for similar ones were used in England at the period to at least as great an extent and yet the last printings are practically equal to those made when the plates were new. The trouble was, therefore, as the Minister of Public Works admitted, with the lack of skill shown by the Belgian printers.

Writing with regard to this deterioration in 1871 Mr. Overy Taylor says: "So utter a failure was the 10c in their hands, that it became necessary to introduce some modifications into the design, consisting, no doubt, in a deepening of the lines, and probably the 20c was operated on in the same manner." Mr. Westoby also thought it possible that some of the casts were touched up. As the plates were electrotyped it would not have been possible to retouch them by deepening the lines, as the lines of the design were, of course, in relief. We believe that all the many minor varieties that can be found in the stamps of this issue are all entirely due to defective printing.

Gibbons' lists a variety of the 10c with "no shading on forehead" but this is of no more importance or philatelic interest than all the other varieties of a minor character that may be found. These consist of broken frame lines, broken and joined letters, missing periods, colored and uncolored flaws, etc.

Before proceeding to the next chapter it should be pointed out that the perforated stamps of the second type (1863 issue) were not available for postage after July 1st, 1866. A notice issued by the Postmaster-General to his subordinates is very clear on this point and states, among other matters, "after the date mentioned the post offices are to consider as unpaid all correspondence, the postage on which is represented by stamps of the old design." At the same time postmasters were admonished not to cancel these stamps so that the owners could recover their value by exchanging them for the then current stamps of similar denominations. The period of grace during which it was possible to exchange the old stamps for new extended for three months so that after September 30th, 1866, the old stamps were demonetised.

It is interesting to note that the majority of the stamps of the issue under notice were printed and circulated after the death of the monarch whose portrait they bear, for King Leopold I died in December, 1865.

STAMP PAPERS AND MAGAZINES.

L. H. Brigham in Haversack.

We would have but a poor knowledge of the Bible. of history or of geography if it were not for the Bibles, histories, geographies and maps which we find all about us. How much would we know of what is going on in the world today without the newspaper and the camera?

It would also be impossible for the Philatelist (pronounced "fe-lat-e-list" and is what the dictionary calls a stamp collector) to keep in touch with all of the changes which are constantly taking place in the stamp world, without the aid of publications of some sort to gather together all of this mass of information and present it to us while it is yet new, interesting and of value and importance.

One of the chief values of these publications is their "new issue" columns. Here each week or month can be found a chronicle of all of the new stamps which have appeared in all of the various countries since the last issue of the paper. The information usually includes the reason for requiring a new issue; its purpose; how many different stamps in the issue; gives a description of the stamps or shows a cut of them, or both; tells how many were printed, on what kind of paper, where and by whom, etc.

In addition to the "new issue" feature found in these magazines, we can also find complete "biographies" of the stamps of the different nations. Stamp problems are discussed and much valuable information is obtained on some of the more confusing older issues of some of the countries.

Responsible stamp dealers carry their ads in these columns and many a good bargain can be obtained by closely watching each number as it appears. Here also, can be found other collectors from all over the world who are desirous of buying, selling, or exchanging stamps with you.

There are "question and answer" columns and definitions and explanations given of the many strange words and characters we find printed on many stamps.

In short, if we are constant, faithful and interested readers of some stamp paper or other, we have the advantage of knowing all that there is to know about stamps, past, present and future. We will always be in a position to help, advise and explain to others the many things that are still puzzling them, but which no longer puzzle us.

Almost any stamp dealer or collector of some years can suggest or recommend a stamp paper or magazine which is low in cost and which will prove a most valuable aid in your collecting of stamps.

EDITORIAL.

Unsolved—There are mysteries and mix-ups in our (pardon us for omitting "little" here) world that bid fair to shake reason's throne. Our all-rights-reserved Sherlock dismissed the Scientific American case with its great transformation scene, wherein J. Malcolm Bird, Associate Editor of the Scientific American became George B. Newton, Jr., of Germantown, Philadelphia. Mr. Bird made his pathetic plea for recognition in our issue of March 4, 1922. Mr. Newton has written that he "was astonished to find myself given credit for the authorship of that most interesting piece of philatelic publicity." We should insinuate as much. Further: "When I sent in the page from the magazine in question, altho I do not now recollect what notation I made thereon, furthest from my mind was the thought of claiming authorship; rather would I be wishing that such work were within my powers. Perhaps the error was due merely to a mixing of names in the editorial sanctum—but if the mistake is mine I trust that when you make correction in your columns you will extend my apologies to the real author—and accept them on your behalf as well for the trouble caused you." No apologies are necessary except from the editor. The blunder is his and he acknowledges it but how it could have been made is beyond him.

Unhonored—Here is the story of how an innocent by-stander was the victim of repeated acts of cruelty. He attempts to tell how the damnable iteration was accomplished and withal, he succeeds so well that we must share his explanations with our readers. "G. A. H." sends our paper a little leaflet, "The Malta 3d Stamp on Script Watermark Paper," a good part of which we reproduce as an example of the best in humorous philately: "A Philatelic editor, not fortunate enough to belong to a trade union that restricts hours of labor for its members to a small daily minimum, overburdened with duties, and putting in much overtime, made a slip, and recorded the issue of the Malta 3d stamp of the new script watermarked paper. Unfortunately, he fathered the responsibility for it upon an innocent collector, with the result that this party was bombarded with enquiries from all parts by letter, by telephone, and by word of mouth. This may be very gratifying to the editor that his writings are so widely studied but it is not quite so gratifying to the injured innocent upon whom it was fathered, and who repudiates his paternity. C'est le premier pas qui coute. In order to prevent the spread of the error, other philatelic editors were notified of the mistake and warned not to repeat it. Then came Christmas, that mad, sad time when we let ourselves go, eat to repletion, cast aside our responsibilities, crack nuts and jokes, and indulge in frivolity of divers kinds. It is the season when editors gather fresh inspiration from turkey and stuffing, and plum pudding, and mince pie, and fruit and nuts, and their seasonable accompaniments. In the aftermath of this Christmas, a certain editor prepared his paper, while possibly still under a surfeit of cold turkey and pickles, and he dreamed dreams and saw visions. He reproduced the incorrect report and once more attempted to fasten responsibility for it upon the same old innocent party. Again is this party assailed with enquiries from divers places, and of the collectors who worry him thereon, only one has the conscience to enclose a stamp for reply, so that the injured innocent must either incur expense or risk the imputation of discourtesy to correspondents. Is this tale of imagination to be periodically raked up by others? The injured innocent wishes to state categorically that" and here follows ten cogent reasons that the stamp is not in being, or is even about to be because, to quote reasons nine and ten: "The authorities have not yet ordered its manufacture, because they still hold a huge stock of the old watermarked paper, and Sir Eric Geddes, with his big economy axe, will not permit the Crown Agents to destroy the old stock of old paper in order that collectors may get specimens for their albums of the new paper at as early a date as possible." There is more in the same rich vein and Mr. Higlett shows conclusively how philatelic editors allow their imaginations to run amuck.

Unpaids—At a recent society meeting, a member in discussing questions of philatelic policy attacked the postage due stamps and predicted that the time was coming when they would no longer be catalogued. In our opinion, he made a mistake in condemning these stamps on the score of collecting appeal as the "unpaids" have all the philatelic claims for consideration. If the idea is to curtail the collecting range, that is another story, but as some have said these stamps represent the postage on letters exactly as the regulation postage stamps do, as they indicate that the tax for postage has been paid, before delivery. The postage is paid for carriage through the mails by the recipient rather than the sender but that development does not invalidate the postal claims of the labels. While the character of the service performed by the postage due stamp is based on an irregularity on the part of the sender of the letter, the stamp itself shows that the postage is to be paid before the delivery of the letter to the addressee. Indeed, it may be argued that these stamps have an added distinction and we predict that the true philatelist will never be inclined to give them the cold shoulder.

Understood—A co-operative move on the part of the post office department has been announced by the authorities and for a time at least a question and answer department will be maintained in the Postal Bulletin. This service is intended to inform postmasters and thus reduce the necessity for correspondence on the part of the office at headquarters. This is a progressive step and in this connection we should like to see that a publicity man be installed in Washington who would supply collectors with news relating to stamps and kindred subjects. We believe that the postal officers appreciate the value of philatelists as a business asset and if a short cut could be established whereby they could have a bureau of information for easy consultation, the end would justify the means. While there is every disposition on the part of the Washington folk to be helpful yet an improvement could be made by the institution of a definite fountain-head of information.

Unquestioned—Our enterprising contemporary, Stanley Gibbons Monthly Circular, announces the result of a plebiscite by readers as to what features they favored in the reading contents of the paper. The new issue chronicle has first place, we are pleased to see, as this result assures us that the department in question is a fundamental of the first importance. So long as readers are interested in the growth of stamps, so to say, philately will advance. The new issues of the stamp paper are the news of the day of the great daily, in effect.

WESTERN STAMP CO. AND A. S. D. A.

We regret that the two large advertisements of the Western Stamp Co., used March 4 and 11, appeared without the imprint "American Stamp Dealers' Association No. 33". The necessary instructions were received to insert this statement directly after the firm name in the address lines, but it was omitted through an oversight.

USED BLOCKS OF FOUR.

By A. A. Leve.

Read Mr. H. L. Clark's article on t century used blocks with much in-
t. Mr. Clark has gone a long way rove the little simple law in philat-
y hat is expressed in a few words:
T law of Supply and Demand." He nly proves that a used block wanted y collector very badly will bring a g price. Collecting blocks is not a ac—it is a fact, and has been for years.
Clark suggests for instance that a s(block of No. 33, is reasonably gh $10.00. I would like a dozen lo:s at that price, and in shades if (1 get them. The fact is, blocks are n always will be worth a great deal nc in proportion to singles.
'ke the Milbury. What! a mere a telle, catalogued $1750. Now, on ni "thread label" I'll place a value f 100,000 on a used block, who has a do at that figure?—used or unused,
'out of the question. The demand is r:er than the supply. Here's the 5c
N?. Postmaster, who has any blocks t thousand times catalog? Echo anws "Who?" Mr. Ward tells us the Gi on collection included a block of 3.
5c e Gem! Can anyone buy it at 10 it s the price of singles? Why don't h recent issues command these prices?
Tl supply is greater than the demand—
e use more stamps are used. Simple sr it? I have an O. G. block of ten,
N 33. Sell it at Mr. Clark's figures?
N on your first bid! So there is really no argument. Thousands of collectors wa used blocks. The blocks were not us; so there's no supply. Simple as

PANAMA AND ITS POSTAGE STAMPS.

By Frederick E. Heydon.

Chapter XXXI.

Postal Cards.

Up to the time when Panama became an independent republic, the current Colombian postal cards were in use on the Isthmus and can only be distinguished by the cancellations. However, as a necessary chapter of the postal history of Panama those so used should be collected by specialists.

With the revolution, however, the necessity of surcharging was recognized and this was done pending the preparation of new dies. The cards were validated by the surcharge REPUBLICA DE—PANAMA in two lines as in the November, 1903, issue of adhesives. Stamp rectangular 22 x 27 mm. with arms of Colombia in oval in center, card 140 x 90 mm.

801. 2c black, surch. magenta, card buff.
802. 2c+2c black, surch. magenta, card buff (Reply).
803. 5c+2c black, surch. magenta, card buff (Reply).
804. 5c+2c black, surch. magenta, card salmon (Reply).
805. 2c black, surch. rose-red, card buff.
806. 2c+2c black, surch. rose-red, card buff (Reply).
807. 5c+2c black, surch. rose-red, card buff (Reply).
808. 5c+2c black, surch. rose-red, card salmon (Reply).

Similar to the above but surcharged in smaller type:

809. 2c black, surcharged magenta, card buff.
810. 2c+2c black, surch. magenta, card buff (Reply).

There is a later issue surcharged PANAMA.

811. 2c black, surch. violet, card buff.
812. 2c+2c black, surch. violet, card buff (Reply).
813. 5c+2c black, surch. violet, card buff (Reply).

I am listing these early surcharged issues from descriptions that are not perfectly satisfactory, and am unable to state positively which were from Panama and which from Colon.

In 1905 a beautiful postal card appeared printed by the American Bank Note Co., and of the same type as the 1c and 2c map type adhesives.

814. 2c carmine, card cream, 140x90mm.

In 1907 the Hamilton Bank Note Co. obtained the contract and we find postal cards with stamps of same types as the corresponding adhesives.

815. 1c green, black center (Balboa), card 140x90mm.
816. 2c red, black center (Cordoba), card 140x90mm.

In 1912, somewhat later than the corresponding adhesives, the new American Bank Note Co. issue of postal cards appeared, their imprint appearing in very small letters below the stamp.

817. 1c green, black center (Balboa), white card 140x90mm.
818. 2c red, black center (Cordoba), white, card 140x90mm.

The latest addition is part of the commemorative issue of 1921, and shows the Panama Puerta de Tierra (or land gate), part of the old fortified wall of the city.

819. 2c carmine stamp 22½x27½mm, white card, 140x90mm.

Chapter XXXII.

Postage Stamps Used Fiscally.

The earliest examples of postage stamps used fiscally are the three high values of the 1906-1907 issue.

208. 10c violet, black center (Obaldia).
209. 25c red-brown, black center (Herrera).
210. 50c black (Fabrega).

They are cancelled sometimes by punched holes or with a marking of the national arms of Panama in a large circle inscribed with name of department, etc. This circle is so large that only about half of it appears on a horizontal pair, and I am unable to give the full inscription. As it is quite unlike any postal cancellation, the stamps can be readily distinguished. Many of these stamps have been sold as postally used.

In 1915, a law was passed imposing a stamp tax on tickets to the bull ring, theatre tickets, bank checks, cigarettes and tobacco, perfumes and toilet articles, steamship tickets, etc., etc. This necessitated a provisional issue of the regular postage stamps surcharged "Ley 24 de 1915", but until the surcharged stamps were ready postage stamps were used without surcharge, and these can only be distinguished by the cancellations. As a rule these fiscal cancellations can be readily distinguished, but it is probable that thousands of these stamps are now in circulation and a word of caution is advisable. About the only thing in print on the subject is Forbin's catalogue, and while for some things Forbin is good authority, his list of Panama revenue stamps is a joke.

I list the following of later issues as used fiscally.

211. ½c orange (Map of Panama).
212. ½c dark rose (Map of Panama).
213. 1c green, black center (Balboa).
218a. 10c light reddish purple, black center (Obaldia).
226. 5c deep blue, black center (Gatun Locks).
227. 10c orange, black center (Culebra Cut).

Revenue Stamps Used Postally.

When the revenue stamps designed for cigarettes, bull ring tickets, etc., and made by surcharging the regular postage stamps "Ley 24 de 1915" appeared, a considerable number of them were used for postage by the ignorant classes (mostly negroes) from the West Indies, British Guiana, etc., and also native Panamaians, who, being unable to read, had not the slightest idea as to what the mysterious surcharge was meant for. In fact many of the postal employees were no better informed. However, very few of these misused stamps have been preserved, the recipients of the letters having been as ignorant as the writers, and they are now decidedly scarce. I list the following:

213. 1c green, black center, surch. rose-red.
213. 1c green, black center, surch. black.
208. 10c violet, black center, surch. rose-red.

The 1c green "Ley 24 de 1915" revenue stamps were not valid for postal use and I have in my collection a cover bearing one of them with a postage due stamp to secure collection of proper rate on delivery.

While these are all that I know of, the existence of others is very probable. Taking into account the ignorance of officials at the smaller towns on the Isthmus, and the inadequate supplies furnished them, of which the bisected stamps are ample proof, it would not surprise me to see examples of almost any of the smaller revenue stamps, which are rather numerous, used for postage.

COMPETITION

A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.

I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.

Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

United States, Provisional Envelopes Errors, 2c on 2c Red

After the rate of postage had been changed from 3c to 2c the department was anxious to use up the large number of 3c envelopes on hand. They had the different postmasters secure bids for having printing establishments surcharge them 2c, but they found this would cost considerable. The postmaster at the small office of Brunswick, Ga., hit upon the idea of having a die to be used in the cancelling machines for overprinting this stock, and the department adopted his plan.

As a result dies were made and supplied to the different large offices. In the rush of overprinting the 3c envelopes some of the 2c denominations became mixed, resulting in the well known 2c on 2c errors. Scott lists the one on white, No. 2691, on page 30, but does not price it. He lists those on blue and buff on page 1231, numbers 2693 and 2694 and prices them at $2.00 each. They are all three rare and if they were adhesives would sell at several hundred dollars each.

I can supply these three interesting errors, entire, unused at $2.00 each or one of each sent by registered mail for $5.00.

Of course if you want any of the 2c on 3c varieties Scott's No. 2684 on in addition to those from the different cities not listed by Scott, I can supply them. To start you I will furnish fifty different properly classified at $5.

CHRONICLE OF NEW ISSUES AND VARIETIES

Information regarding new issues and varieties will be gratefully received. We cannot give the addresses of correspondents.

The chronicle of United States is edited by PHILIP H. WARD, JR., Box 4216, Germantown, Phila., Pa. The foreign chronicle is edited by PERCY C. SMITH, 40 Packard Ave., West Somerville, Mass. Correspondents will please be careful to send their matter to the right address.

UNITED STATES.—Mr. O. H. Sansom informs me that a small lot of the 1c stamps in an imperforate condition produced by the Rose electrotype method mentioned in this column some weeks back have reached the Chicago post office. These are from plate No. 13376, and it would be interesting to know if the stamp may be distinguished from those produced in the regular way. The Bureau states that they cannot, but stamp collectors have an eye for the unusual, and it is barely possible that we may be able to distinguish them. This stamp has not as yet been reported in a perforated condition although by this time, no doubt, supplies have reached several offices. I understand that the method saves the department considerable expense and consequently it will probably become the standard method of producing stamp plates. The variety is printed in sheets of four hundred subjects on unwatermarked paper.

When the current design of the 12c stamp first appeared during 1912, it was printed in a rich mahogany color. As the war came along and the Bureau ran out of dyes it took on a copper red hue and later this was somewhat darkened. By the time the stamp was issued perforated 11 it had reached what might be described as a deep copper red. This shade has remained somewhat constant and until recently I have had difficulty in finding any other color. Mr. G. G. Ryder now shows me the stamp perforated 11 in the mahogany shade of the early perforated 12 variety.

Mr. Olaf J. Olson who seems to be studying his stamps most carefully has located a copy of the $5 green issue of 1916, showing a slight double entry line at the bottom of the stamp. As a result an extra line is noticeable. He states this variety is constant on all sheets but does not mention its location. A close study would possibly bring to light double transfers on most denominations, but to date I have only seen fine examples on the 2c and 3c.

Some months back, I described in this column the finding of the $1 perforated 11, with a very distinct offset on the back. Later the 4c and then the 1c were mentioned. Lately the 1c has been distributed throughout the country and quite a few of our readers have sent in examples and have asked as to their rarity. An offset on the back which is a reverse impression from the next sheet while of interest adds very little to its value and is not to be confused with those having a direct impression on the back and described in the catalogue as "printed on both sides". The offset is always in the reverse and the lettering and head faces the other way. When the impression is direct it comes from the plate and consequently reads straight. Neither of these must be confused with the 2c and the 10c special delivery described as having a "pink" back, for this is due to the ink, the coloring coming through the paper from the impression on the front.

A great amount of publicity was recently given to the finding in New York of a current 2c counterfeit. The daily press inform us that a plant was located in West Allenhurst, N. J., and that several arrests were made. It seems that they were about to make other values as well as the 2c but as far as I have heard no other value had as yet reached the public.

ARMENIA.—Mr. Edmund S. Ward sends us a set of ten stamps with the following note: "How are the enclosed for philatelic atrocities? I'd like to bet that after five guesses you would be still wondering what they are, so I'll break the news. They are new Soviet stamps from Armenia."

The stamps are of different designs and sizes and are of the values and colors mentioned below: 1r green, 2r grey green, 3r red, 5r brown, 25r grey green, 50r red, 100r orange, 250r blue, 500r lilac brown, 1000r grey green and 2000r yellow.

ESTHONIA.—Prof. M. Loewy sends us a new 10m stamp from this country. The stamp is imperforate and portrays a blacksmith at his forge. Just below is the numerals of value with the letter "M" at each side and at the base "Eesti Vabariik".

FRANCE.—The 30c orange-red has had an extremely short life, being now superseded by a scarlet stamp of that denomination in the same (Sower) type and perf. Specimen from Whitfield King & Co.—Stamp Collecting.

HUNGARY.—Prof. M. Loewy submits for chronicle three values of the new set of stamps bearing the word "Hivatalos" in the centre in black. They are 10f red lilac, 100f rose and 250f blue.

KENYA.—We are indebted to Mr. W. Tunstall for a copy of the post office notice regarding the new postal rates. Mr. Tunstall tells us that there are no shilling or cents of a shilling in the country at present (January 14th), and that the 75c stamp on emerald paper is no longer obtainable, the old printings being again in use.

Our correspondent remarks that it is most likely that many of the stamps printed on the new paper, including the 1r on emerald, will never be issued.—Stamp Collecting.

MALTA.—We are in receipt of the following from Mr. Louis Carabott: "I have to inform you that the 3d old CA watermark surcharged "Self Government" were sold out over the counter today (Feb. 23rd) and that this stamp erne & Co., 111 Manchester St., ist Church, New Zealand, have just lished handbook No. 2 "New Zea- l", by R. J. G. Collins, Honorary retary of the Philatelic Society of v Zealand. The price of the book sh and it may be obtained from Eu- e Klein, American Agent, Philadel- a, Pa. This book is a most valuable interesting contribution to our lit- ure. The text shows the hand of a expert, while illustrations of both stamps and watermarks are scattered profusely throughout the book. Not only are the postal issues of the country fully covered, but there are chapters on the near stamps, also postal stationery, franks, postmarks, cancellations, essays, proofs, locals and forgeries.

BOOK REVIEW.

7c "BANK NOTES"
NATIONAL CONTINENTAL AMERICAN

The old red boys with the pink whiskers. Everyone wants 'em. Here are some for dealers and collectors. For two years fussy collectors who have seen our Bank Note approvals have told us we had the finest line of Red Sevens they ever saw. Now we have added a lot of more than 300 copies to our already fine stock. Most of these never saw a dealer's stock. We soaked scores of them from pieces of original covers. There isn't a torn copy in the entire lot. We have picked out the very fancy pieces and offer the rest in 4 classes:

AT 30c EACH.
Space fillers for beginners. Sound copies, but off center or smudgily cancelled. They'll never be cheaper.

AT 60c EACH.
Really nice copies. Not perfectly centered, but good useful stamps. National or Continental printings, two or three well marked shades, many interesting cancellations.

AT $1.00 EACH.
Fine copies. Some of them with red or blue cancellations. If the cancellations are fancy the stamps are not perfectly centered. Well centered stamps with black cancellations. Thin and opaque paper varieties, several good shades.

AT $1.50 EACH.
Superb copies of both National and Continental printings, finely centered, lightly cancelled. Many fine Star cancellations, and other interesting things.

YOU CANNOT GO WRONG ON THESE

Less than 500 copies all told, and they'll go like hot cakes. It would take a year to send them the rounds on approval. Order as many as you think you can use. Your money back if you want it.

American printing re-issue on soft paper, town, red and blue or very special cancellations, both Continental shifts, "gash on head", marginal imprints, etc., to regular customers, and those giving first class references.

Our stock of U. S. up to 1900 is complete in all grades. When you want something you think you can't find, try us.

PHILATELY.

(The Michigan Stamp Club celebrated its eighth anniversary at the Hotel Cadillac, Detroit, on March 18. The following lines written by C. H. Holden were read in honor of the occasion.—W. O. W.)

I come not as maiden with fickle smile,
To allure and to charm for a brief while,
And then seek another verdant bower,
As roams the bee from flower to flower.

Nor come I in purple robes and golden crown,
To stir men's hearts to seek sordid renown,
And then leave them ship-wrecked along the shore,
Where waves disconsolate echo evermore.

But from a higher plane do I come forth,
Arrayed in a glory of greater worth,
Whose radiance extends from sea to sea.
Proclaiming to all my name—Philately

My dominion every land embraces,
And my subjects are of all creeds and races;
War clouds in my fair sky no eye can scan,
For I teach peace and brotherhood of man.

My mission is to add to the cup of joy,
And dull care and worry as mists destroy;
To bring cheer and comfort to the lonely heart,
Whose course from fortune has drifted apart.

Fortunate is he who knows my pleasure,
And my legacies does fondly treasure,
For to him no path leads to grander height,
Nor effort produce a keener delight.

So now my followers assembled here,
To observe your Society's eighth year,
May you enjoy your proceedings and repast,
And continue loyal unto the last.

Consider life is a flowering tree,
And the friut it bears is as you decree;
Stamps are the plums that stick through wind and rain.
And have brightest shade when the sun shines again.

THE LATEST ISSUE OF LIBIA.

An interesting set of stamps for the twentieth century collector is the latest issue of Libya, one of the important countries on the Mediterranean Coast of Africa. It is an Italian colony between Egypt and Tunis, comprising the two districts known as Tripolitania and Cyrenaica. The country was controlled by Turkey until 1911, when Italy declared war on Turkey and occupied the country. For many years the Italians had a post office at Tripoli, using the regular Italian stamps, but which had a distinguishing postmark, being a series of diagonal lines with the number 3051. The Italian post office was established there as early as 1873.

The latest issue is of the first distinct series issued for the colony of Libya and considerable care and artistic ability have been shown in the four designs. The set includes twelve stamps. The first three values, 1, 2 and 5 centesimi, depict a Roman legionary designed by Duilio Cambellotti. The next three, 10, 15 and 25 centesimi, depict the Goddess of Abundance with the star of Italy illuminating the desert of Libya in the background. The design is the work of Vittorio Grassi, the artist of the Italian Jubilee stamps of 1911. On the 30, 50 and 55 centesimi stamps the design is an ancient ship setting out from the harbor of Tripoli, the artist being Paolo Paschetto. The three highest values in the set, 1, 5 and 10 lira, have for the design an allegory of Victory supported by Work and Industry, with a local scene in the background, designed by Giovanni Constantini. In addition to this set there are two express or parcel post stamps of 30 and 50 centesimi, respectively. All of these new Libya stamps are printed in two colors. They were engraved and printed at Turin and are excellent specimens of the best Italian postage stamp work.

COLOMBIA AIR MAIL.

Vice Consul Edmund B. Montgomery, at Barranquilla, reports that at the present time the Colombian Government is subsidizing the weekly aerial mail service of the Colombo-Alemana de Transportes Aeroes between Barranquilla, Girardet and Nieva to the extent of $100 per trip, plus a payment of 30c per 15 grams for mail carried. The company has five hydro-airplanes with 500 h.p. motors, carrying 3 passengers each.

Mail transported by river steamboat takes from one to two weeks going from Barranquilla to Bogota, depending on the condition of the river, whereas by air service it arrives in 24 to 30 hours. American business men desiring to make use of this fast service to interior points in Colombia can purchase stamps in New York City at Vasquez Correa & Co., No. 1 State Street. The early stamps were of the value of 50 centavos, green, which were later surcharged to read 30 centavos. The next issue was 30 centavos in brown and the latest stamps are 30 centavos in rose pink.

On the 23rd of October the service was extended to include a weekly trip from Barranquilla to Cartagena, leaving Saturday and returning Monday. The aerial postage is 15 cents for eac grams, and the passenger fare is Colombian currency.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

Under this heading we desire to publish all the news from the various philatelic centers. Correspondents' names will be given unless prohibited, as we desire to give full credit for services rendered.

—V. Domanski, Jr., sends us a clipping from the Philadelphia Public Ledger consisting of a column department devoted to stamp collecting. It appears once a week.

—A classy little house organ is being published by C. A. Pitkin & Co. It is called "The Little Stamp Salesman." No. 7 will no doubt be sent anyone upon application.

—J. Saulnier, Fordham, N. Y. City, has a lot of philatelic magazines (French and German) which he will give any society that will pay carriage charges.

—We are in receipt of an elaborate price-list from G. F. Rapkin, 151 Goswell Road, London, England. It is hand-somely printed in brown, blue and purple and contains quotations upon all kinds of accessories required by dealer or collector. Mr. Rapkin does a large wholesale business and dealers will find this price-list most valuable.

—The Philatelic Society of Pittsburgh, Pa., has issued a neat pamphlet giving a list of its members with their collecting specialties. A copy will be sent to every stamp club in this country and abroad. If yours has been omitted write J. M. Stahn, 609 C, of C. Bdg. Price to individual collectors 30c, postpaid.

—Ashley C. LeDuc writes us that he recently visited the Carnegie Museum at Pittsburgh, where he noticed the addition of several new cases with interesting displays of U. S. and foreign stamps. They are easily accessible.

—E. Brandborg submits one of the overprinted U. S. post cards postmarked Tulsa, Okla., and the overprint "1 CENT" stands out in bold relief inverted in the lower left corner. We may add that this variety has been found in frequent instances.

—In the New York Herald recently appeared an advertisement of the overprinted English stamps used by the Irish Provisional Government. Applications from stamp collectors for the overprinted stamps are requested from the General Post Office at Dublin. A copy of the adv. is at hand from D. D. Berolzheimer.

—The advertisement of Bill Lorence in the issue of March 11 offered a set of Transvaal for $1.00 with a catalog value of $6.46. In the WEEKLY the numbers read 253-261 when it should have been 153-61. Mr. Lorence states that he has received numerous orders upon which he has been compelled to make refund.

—The Philatelic Society of Baltimore City College has arranged to meet the Philatelic Society of The Polythenic, our rival, in a series of seven stamp exhibitions between now and May, 1923. The first exhibition is scheduled for March 28, and is to be a novelty contest. We expect keen competition at this exhibition. The individual winner of the contest is to receive a $2.75 Cape of Good Hope triangle, while the winning club in the series of seven contests is to receive a $15 Cape of Good Hope triangle, the cost to be borne by the two clubs, 50-50.—ALBERT C. GAKENHEIMER.

—Kent B. Stiles, one of our subscribers, becomes editor of the philatelic department of The American Boy effective with the May issue. He retires as editor of the stamp page of Boy's Life, a position which he filled for longer than five years. Mr. Stiles is associate editor of Scott's Monthly Journal, and conducts the "Stamps to Stick" column in The Youth's Companion. During the world war he was editor of The American Philatelic Service, which syndicated philatelic articles to various newspapers.

STAMPS MUST BE CANCELLED.

Careful attention must be given to the proper cancellation of stamps on mail dispatched. The department receives many exhibits of gross carelessness in this respect. Stamps which are not defaced or which are ineffectively cancelled are frequently used a second time, thus defrauding the Government of lawful revenues. Postmasters and postal employees must keep stamp pads and rolls of canceling machines properly inked in order that effective cancellation may be assured. Co-operation of postal employes in this respect is requested. Report failures to cancel to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, Division of Finance. See section 538 of the Postal Laws and Regulations.

THE IRISH FREE STATE.

By FRED J. MELVILLE.

The latest new page to be opened up in our stamp albums is for a land near at hand, and near at heart, but the stamps come inscribed in a language and in characters that are Greek to most of us. The first stamps of the Irish Free State were issued in Dublin on February 17th. They are of a provisional nature only, and consist of the fifteen denominations of current British stamps with the profile of H. M. the King, to which an overprint in Gaelic characters has been applied in black. The overprint is transcribed RIALTAS SEALADACH NA HEIREANN, which is interpreted "Irish Provisional Government." The Gaelic inscription, with the date 1922, forms an overprint of five lines on the twelve values from ½d to 1s, and four lines on the high values, 2s 6d, 5s and 10s.

The Philatelic Department, Dublin.—The authorities of the Irish Post Office have proved themselves alive to the possibilities of making some easy money out of stamp collectors, for they have taken steps to make the issue widely known and easily accessible. They have created a novel precedent in advertising the new issue of stamps in the public press, not only of Ireland, but of other countries. Almost equally novel is the creation of a "Philatelic Department" at the G. P. O., Dublin, specially to cater for the requirements of stamp dealers and collectors. By these signs we may know that the Irish Free State, unlike our own G. P. O., has no scruples about taking the stamp collectors' shekels, and it would not be very surprising if in the near future there should be as many varieties of Irish stamps as there are already of, say, Jugo-Slavia.

The Settings of the Overprint.—With advertisement and organisation it will not be the fault of the Irish if their stamps become scarce. It would not pay the Post Office to advertise a commodity of which they had not prepared a sufficient supply. But in spite of the obvious intention to secure a large sale, it is more than likely that varieties will be found which may prove scarce. Within a few hours of the issue of the stamps in Dublin, a well-known philatelist, Mr. H. H. Harland, was giving a detailed study of the Gaelic overprints to a largely attended meeting of the Junior Philatelic Society on February 18th. He showed that there were at least three different settings of the overprint, and of one of these settings he had detected a sub-variety.

Varieties of the Overprint.—The five-line overprint on the ½d, 4d, 9d and 10d values has the date 1922 in antique figures, and there is no full stop after the date; the printing is clear and the type throughout unbroken. The sub-variety of this setting is distinguishable by numerous broken type varieties, and this was evidently used for the 1d, 2½d, 3d and 5d values.

The second setting is easily distinguished from the first as the figures 1922 are in block type and are followed by a period. There are some instances of broken type in this setting, consistent on all the sheets examined, especially on stamps numbers 31, 51, 132 and 203 (in the sheets of 240 stamps). This second setting occurs on the values 1½d, 2d, 6d and 1s.

The third setting is altogether different, as it was required for the transverse oblong-shaped stamps of the denominations 2s 6d, 5s and 10s. Here the "1922" is in antique type, without a full stop.

Irish Possibility.—The significance of the discovery of several settings of the overprint will be readily discerned by the philatelist. Settings I and II may be used consistently for the stamps which have already come under observation, viz.:—

Setting Ia.—½d, 4d, 9d, 10d.
Setting Ib.—1d, 2½d, 3d, 5d.
Setting II.—1½d, 2d, 6d, 1s.

but it is quite possible that at some stage in the printing the settings and stamps would be interchanged. Also if further printings are made it is not unlikely that the type used for overprinting, say the first lot of 1½d stamps would be used for overprinting the next lot of 1d ones. Such a prominent difference in type would constitute a distinct variety for the stamp collector.

There are other circumstances that may lead to the creation or discovery of varieties which may prove scarce. It would be a little strange, having regard to the philatelic proclivities of the Sinn Feiners, if they did not produce a few errors, such as double or inverted overprints, mistakes of the "made on purpose" kind to add—at the outset—a spice to the collecting of the stamp issues of Erin.

The Twopence Die I and II.—An interesting point about the stamps overprinted are that both dies of the 2d stamp have been found. Possibly Die I may be scarce.

The Printers.—It transpires that Setting I was overprinted by Messrs. Dolland & Co., of Dublin, while Setting II is the work of Messrs. Alexander Thom & Co. The Philatelic Magazine states that the total face value of British postage stamps so overprinted was £250,000.

Controls.—Mr. R. Roberts has kindly furnished us with a full list of the controls:

2½d	S 21 perf.	10d	S 21 perf.
3d	S 21 perf.	1s	R 21 imperf.

The New Irish Stamp Design.—It is difficult to say whether the British Post Office is going to supply an unlimited quantity of our postage stamps to be disfigured by Gaelic overprints. But the Irish Postmaster-General is already making plans to supersede the provisional issue with a set of stamps of distinctively Irish designs. He has been asking for designs to be submitted to him, conforming to certain conditions, which indicate that there is a sound philatelic adviser in the background. The design required "should provide for a fair amount of solid printing, so that the colours stand out sufficiently to give distinctiveness between the various rates." It should also "embody some fine line work of such a character that every line can be clearly printed, and thus increase the difficulty of forgery. The whole of the work should be capable of being engraved in steel." The indication of the country of origin is to be embodied in the new designs in Gaelic characters in the form "SAORSTAT NA H-EIRAAN."—Stamp Collectors' Fortnightly.

JUST COMMON COURTESY.

Whenever we write a letter asking for information we make it a practice to enclose an addressed stamped envelope for reply. It is simply a common everyday courtesy that should not be neglected. Why should we expect anyone to trouble themselves with a request we have made upon them when we do not even pay the postage upon the reply? The ethics of correspondence require that this little detail be given proper consideration.

THE SEVEN CENT VERMILION.

By J. W. SAMPSON.

CHAPTER 1.—History.

The 7 cent vermilion, 1871-3, has long held peculiar charm for the collector of United States stamps. Its odd value, its bright color, its unbeautiful but distinctive design, form an irresistible combination. To this, interest has been added by the general knowledge that the 7 cent stamp was issued primarily for use on mail to foreign countries, and was retired from service when no longer required by a seven cent rate on certain foreign mail.

Information available to the average collector regarding the history and uses of this stamp has been meagre, too often vague or indefinite, and to some extent inaccurate. Even as earnest a student of stamps as the late Earl of Crawford, whose matchless collection of United States essays and proofs was sold in this country a few years ago, made a memorandum on one of his album pages to the effect that the 7 cent stamp "could not have been in use many weeks, and dated copies on entire must be very rare", —an assumption probably based on misleading data regarding the discontinuance of the seven cent rate.

At the time when the 1870 issue was projected, the issuing of a 7 cent stamp was not contemplated. The need for it did not exist. There was a formidable array of reasons for superseding the 1869 series with a new set of stamps, as shown by the Postmaster General's report of November 15th, 1870, which stated that the 1869 issue "failed to give satisfaction on account of their small size, their unshapely form, the inappropriateness of their designs, the difficulty of cancelling them effectually, the inferior quality of the gum used in their manufacture." But no mention was made of any demand for different denominations. The 1, 2, 3, 6, 10, 12, 15, 24, 30 and 90 cent values evidently covered all postal requirements.

The ten values of the 1870 portrait set were accordingly designed, engraved and printed by the National Bank Note Company, and placed on sale throughout the country on April 15th, 1870. Only a few days prior to this date a new treaty was signed with the North German Confederation whereby the rate on letters sent direct was reduced from 10 cents to 7 cents, and as the mail to the German States was steadily increasing in volume instructions were immediately issued for the preparation of a suitable design for a 7 cent stamp, and the work on it was pushed rapidly to completion.

The official description of the new stamp was, "A large rectangular tablet ornamented at the four corners with heavy balls, resting upon a background, the edges of which alone appear. On this tablet is an oval medallion containing the profile bust of Stanton, surmounted by a curved panel bearing the words U. S. POSTAGE, while below the medallion is a similar panel bearing the words SEVEN CENTS in white capitals, separated by a white Arabic figure 7."

The reason for selecting the portrait of Stanton to adorn the new stamp is not difficult to find. Stanton, little known to our generation, was a prominent figure during the dark days of the Civil War and the reconstruction period following it. Born in Steubenville, Ohio, in 1814, Edwin M. Stanton soon gained distinction in the legal profession, and in the late fifties tried several cases before the Supreme Court at Washington. Here his marked ability gained the attention of President Buchanan, who nominated him Attorney General of the United States in 1860.

Then came the election of Abraham Lincoln as President, and the outbreak of the sanguinary conflict between the North and South. Lincoln had that faculty, so characteristic of great leaders, of recognizing and utilizing unusual ability wherever he found it. Lincoln was broad-minded enough to invite Stanton into his cabinet as Secretary of War, in spite of the fact that Stanton was a Democrat, and not only opposed him in party allegiance but also in many important matters pertaining to the government's policy.

Stanton's hair and beard were fiery red. Whether or not this constituted a good and sufficient reason for printing the 7 cent stamp in vermilion, his temper was as fiery as his hirsute adornment, and he did not hesitate to speak his mind. A president less patient than Abraham Lincoln, or one with the interests of his country less closely at heart, would probably have ejected the irascible Secretary of War from the cabinet before many days had passed. But Lincoln, large enough to put all personal feeling aside, and knowing the value of Stanton's great ability in the crisis through which our country was then passing, endured every affront,

The story is told that on one occasion Lincoln sent a verbal message to Stanton, and on his return with the answer the messenger seemed a bit dazed and reticent about details.

"Well, now, just what did he say?" insisted the President.

The messenger stammered, grew red in the face, and finally blurted out, "He said, sir, that you're a fool."

Lincoln smiled, "Well if he said so it must be so", he remarked, tolerantly. "I've found that Stanton is usually right."

But Stanton did not waste all his great energy in bursts of temper. He worked. In the midst of conflict that daily threatened the destruction of the Union, the government's demands on the War Department were unprecedented, and the stalwart Stanton was equal to every demand that was put upon him. Of magnificent physique, with tremendous vitality, he literally worked himself to death, and was perhaps as truly, though not as tragically, a martyr to his country as the lamented Lincoln, for while Stanton survived the War and served as Secretary of State until May, 1868, his health steadily gave way. In 1869, President Grant honored him by appointment as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, but Stanton died before entering upon his new duties.

With Lincoln's portrait appearing on the 6-cent stamp of the 1870 issue, and Stanton with his splendid record in our service so lately dead, it is not strange that "the profile bust of Stanton" was selected for the new value of the series. The accompanying portrait of Stanton is a reproduction of a steel engraving, from a photograph by Brady, and doubtless is much more true to life than the bust on the 7 cent stamp. A similar portrait of Stanton, perhaps from the same photograph, appeared on the $1 Treasury note issued by the government in 1899.

The American Journal of Philately, July 20, 1870, said: "The 7 cent stamp that we described has been printed in a variety of colors and has a very beautiful appearance. It was intended to have been issued last week, but the war in Europe and consequent stopping of the Bremen steamer has made it useless for the present. It is very doubtful if it is issued until peace has been established in Europe."

The writer of the foregoing paragraph doubtless referred to die proofs of the new stamps, which were indeed printed "in a variety of colors", for the records of the contractors show that none of the actual stamps were printed until March, 1871. The philatelic paragrapher was correct, however, in his statement of the reasons for deferring the issuing of the new stamp, for in the Postmaster General's report of November 15th, 1870, he says: "Upon conclusion of the postal treaty with the North German Confederation, fixing the single rate by direct steamers at seven cents, to take effect the first of July last, the stamp of that denomination was adopted and the profile bust of the late Edwin M. Stan-is the claim we make for the STANLEY GIBBONS PRICED CATALOGUE OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES (Part 2), for 1922. This catalog will be a special edition for the United States, without illustrations of United States stamps, and will be ready about April 15.

Price $2.40 Post-free

The exceedingly interesting issues of the United States from 1847 to 1882 have been profoundly studied during the past few years by some of the most brilliant philatelists of the day and numerous articles have appeared in the philatelic press of America, but the publishers have hitherto failed to use this material.

As we think it is to the interest of all concerned, both collectors and the trade, we have made an attempt to write a list of these stamps more in accordance with their importance than any priced list that has hitherto appeared.

We have included a great number of types, retouches, plate varieties, shades, and paper varieties, and have priced the bulk of them at what we believe to be their current market value, most prices being based upon our own somewhat considerable stock.

If American collectors appreciate such a catalogue of their own stamps, we shall be glad if they will send us any corrections to this list, and also any suggestions for extending and improving it.

Other countries, such as France, Sicily, etc., etc., have been entirely re-written, the prices have been revised throughout, and hundreds of rarities are now priced for the first time.

We think collectors will find this the best and most accurate priced catalogue that has ever appeared. [34

PANAMA AND ITS POSTAGE STAMPS.

By Frederick E. Heydon.

Chapter XXXIV.

"Encomienda" Stamps.

These stamps are not postage stamps but represent a tax on shipments by parcel post. They are, however, an integral post. They are, however, an integral part of the Panama postal service, and as such, no description of the postal issues of this country could be considered complete in which they were not referred to. I have revenue stamps on parts of documents long anterior to the separation of Panama from Colombia, that seem to have been used for the purpose, but so far as I know, there has only been one regular issue of these stamps which has been in use for a number of years. The date of issue I have been unable to ascertain, having been unable to secure a copy of the decree that authorized the issue or other reliable information. These stamps are anything but attractive as works of art as they consist of a typographed inscription on a very poorly lithographed groundwork of which the national arms is the most prominent feature. The complete stamp forms a square divided into two triangles. One of these triangular stamps goes with the declaration of value and the other with the "encomienda"—that is, one of the half stamps is supposed to remain permanently in the postal records. It is not easy to obtain both halves to complete the stamp and unused copies are unattainable. In the normal position the "1 Parte" "declaracion" covers the upper part of the shield with national arms, but more rarely the groundwork is inverted and the "2 Parte" "encomienda" is above. They come in sheets of four of the double stamps, and the arrangement is very peculiar, the usual setting being as follows:

Shield up.	Shield sideways
Shield sideways.	Shield up.

I have attempted reconstruction of sheets of the regular setting, and also another that seems to have been used but owing to scarcity of material, I have been unable to complete it on most of the values. I might mention as a curiosity that on the documents several stamps are usually employed and they frequently overlap.

A check list of all the values would include 1c gray, 2c blue, 4c bistre, 5c red brown, 10c lilac, 20c lilac gray, 25c light green, 50c red, 1b yellow, 2b brown, 5b orange and 10b ultramarine. In practically all of these values distinct shades may be found. Varieties of inverted numeral, double surcharge, colored part omitted, double perforation, "Encomienda" above, and "Declaracion" above make quite a formidable list and an interesting study for the specialist. All are found on thick paper. The 10b is not a true ultramarine, but more like Cobalt blue. Concerning the shades to which I have referred, I was at first inclined to attribute the pale shades to the colors fading when stamps were washed, but I have seen these same shades where they were parts of documents so that the variations seem to have been due to ink or to the printing.

Space should be left in one's album for a few examples of this stamp on parts of original documents, as they will add greatly to the interest and instructive value of the collection. Any errors discovered should be carefully treasured, as these stamps have not been preserved by the public and the chance to replace them would be small indeed.

Chapter XXXV.

Telegraph Stamps.

At the present time the telegraph service in Panama is part of the post office department under law No. 53 and decree No. 117 of 1917, the charges being paid by adhesive stamps affixed to the telegram. They should be collected by everyone interested in Panama postal issues. Cablegrams both in and outgoing are treated as telegrams over the national lines. Under the tariff now in force the rates are very moderate, being as follows:—

Ordinary messages, 10 centesimos for the first ten words, including direction and signature, and 5 centesimos for each additional ten words or fraction thereof.

Code messages or those in foreign languages, 20 centesimos for the first ten words and 5 centesimos for each additional ten words or fraction thereof.

This does not apply however to telegrams from Panama to Colon or vice versa, on which the charges, irrespective of the language or code employed, are 25 centesimos for the first ten words and 2 centesimos for each additional word.

Repeated telegrams double the regular rate in each case.

Urgent messages with acknowledgment of receipt, additional charge of 10 centesimos.

Press messages are taken at a discount of 50% from tariff rates.

The telephone service is also under the jurisdiction of the post office department, but as the charges are not payable in stamps, I only mention this as a matter of information. There is a provision in the decree safeguarding the secrecy of telegraphic and telephonic communications by a fine of 500 balboas or imprisonment for one year or both for its violation.

Before listing the issues of the Republic I would mention a telegraph stamp issued while Panama was a department of Colombia, the date of issue of which I am unable to state. It is 19 x 24 mm. Arms of Colombia in oval inscribed "Departments de Panama"—"Republica de Colombia" at top and "Telegrafos" to right at bottom in curved labels, "20 centavos" in circle in lower left corner. Perf. 12.

I leave blank numbers here as other stamps of this character may exist.

We will now consider the 1917 issue which was necessitated by the tariff above quoted. Pending the receipt of especially engraved stamps current issues postal and fiscal were surcharged "Telegrafos" in plain block letters, the lack of any 20 centesimos stamp being met by additional surcharge of "20 cts." on the current 25c postage stamp. For the 5 centesimos the ½ centesimos rose was surcharged "5 cts."

In the following list of the 1917 Issue

1010. 2c red, surch. black (204).
1011. 5c dark rose, surch. black (212).
1011a. 5c dark rose, surch. black dbl. surch.
1011b. 5c dark rose, surch. black, dbl. surch., one shifted.
1011c. 5c dark rose, surch. black, dpl. surch., one inverted.
1012. 10c dark violet, surch. black (208).
1013. 20c brown, surch. red (209).
1013a. 20c brown, surch. red, dbl. surch.
1013b. 20c brown, surch. red, shifted surch.
1014. 25c brown, surch. black (209).
1015. 50c black, surch. red (210).
1016. 10c reddish purple, surch. black (218).
1016a. 10c red. purple, surch. black, dbl. surch.

Surcharged on revenue stamps to meet the demand for higher values we have for the 1918 issue:—

1017. 1b orange, surch. black (Ley 24 de 1915). The stamps were originally for perfumery, etc. 25x28mm.
1018. 2b blue, surch. red on 5b (Timbre Nacional). 39x30mm.

The 5b "Timbre Nacional" was a documentary stamp of the 1917-1918 issue.

The provisional issue was superseded as stated in Decree No. 7 of 1919 by a special series of rectangular stamps 19 x 25mm. in size, the central design being an allegorical representation of electricity as a female holding an electric light over her head and with lightning playing around her feet. This is one of the most beautiful series of stamps in existence and an unused set would be a credit to any collection. It includes a ½c. stamp for which there seems to be no corresponding rate in the three decrees, of which I have copies at hand.

1022. 5c bright blue.
1023. 10c intense violet.
1024. 20c red-brown.
1025. 25c carmine-rose.
1026. 50c brown.
1028. 5b dark olive green.

The 20c is not mentioned in the decree quoted and I note the absence of the 2c and 2b stamps without venturing an explanation.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Conclusion.

In concluding this sketch of the postage stamps of Panama it seems desirable to call attention to one phase of the subject of interest to all collectors, and that is how far these issues have been of a speculative character. The reader will have noted that this has been referred to incidentally, but I must say that while I have gone to considerable trouble to verify such charges, they have all practically failed to materialize, and the evidence has in the end confirmed the legitimate character of the issues except in about half a dozen cases. Very few countries can show a better record. I have been for the last two or three years specializing in the extremely interesting and frequently beautiful revenue stamps and stamped paper of Panama. The demand from collectors is now negligible as few know of their existence. We find here the same classes of errors that puzzle the specialist in the postal emissions and I am forced to the conclusion that they are unintentional and due almost entirely to a desire to utilize remainders and waste nothing, together with badly equipped printing outfits and careless workmen.

The present catalogue prices do not reflect comparative rarity very closely, a large proportion of the stamps are not priced at all, and in a few cases prices seem absurd. In only one or two instances are they disproportionately high.

I would advise all interested in these stamps to secure any scarce items offered to them at reasonable prices. There is always a fair chance of picking up some great rarity at a nominal price, and this element gives zest to collecting, although the commercial phase ought not to be unduly dwelt upon. One ought to collect from love of the pursuit and not from expectations of gain which may or may not materialize. From the many pleasant hours that I have passed in the study of these issues, I recommend them to others, hoping that they will receive equal or greater pleasure.

UNITED STAMP CO. CATALOG.

We have been making trouble for the United Stamp Co. of Chicago. The price of their new catalog is 35c but in our writeup we made it 25c. The result is that the firm has been given considerable bother. We make this public statement to assure the patrons of the company that no attempt has been made to misrepresent the price.

THE SHANGHAIS AT FACE VALUE.

By MAXWELL KRAUSE.

Regarding the newly established Philatelic Stamp Agency established by the government, concerning which you had a news item a week or two ago, do you realize that one of the first things done by this Agency is not in accordance with philatelic ethics, if there is such a thing! They offer to supply the U. S. stamps surcharged Shanghai at $2.82, provided they are bought for philatelic purposes only. While $2.82 is the unsurcharged face value, the surcharged face value is actually $4.00, the Shanghai dollar having a current value of a little more than 70c. Stamps bought from the agency for $2.82 cannot be used postally but only for "philatelic purposes" and this, to my mind, destroys their philatelic value.

In the meantime, dealers who imported these stamps from Shanghai and paid their actual face value are not only left holding the bag, but are "in wrong" with customers who have bought from them, the commonly advertised price having been $6.50 per set, a fair enough price when you consider how many unsalable stamps are received due to the extremely bad centering.

I wish you would verify my statements, and if I am correct, the matter should certainly be explained in your columns in all fairness to dealers who bought these sets before the Agency was established.

The next discontinuance of subscriptions will concern all subscribers whose wrappers bear the numbers 1627 to 1630 inclusive. Just glance at your wrapper immediately in order to make sure that your subscription is paid up. You have ample time in which to renew and be saved the inconvenience of a discontinuance. Moreover, under our new system we are making no plans for furnishing back numbers and subscribers must not expect that we can supply back numbers when we have made every effort to notify them.

We are satisfied that the system we have inaugurated is the only one under which a newspaper can do business these days, and subscribers must understand that free copies of the WEEKLY will not be sent to those who are in arrears.

In connection with the killing of arrearages our mailing department will occasionally discontinue a subscription when such has not really expired. Oftentimes a notice of arrearage will go out when the subscriber is paid up considerably in advance. Mistakes like these will happen, as will be readily understood by those who have had any experience with lists of names.

Quite frequently letters reach the office in which we are sharply reprimanded for our carelessness. At other times very courteous letters are received. It remains for Charles R. Morse of Knoxville, Tenn., to reach the high water mark. His subscription expires with No. 1825 and the present number of the WEEKLY is only 1631. Notwithstanding the fact that Mr Morse has nearly four years coming to him (and he was perfectly aware of the fact when he wrote us) his letter was accompanied by a check for $5 for five additional years.

Mr. Morse can be certain that if the Managing Editor had it in his power to prevent another wrapper going to him with the words in bold letters inscribed thereon "Your subscription has expired", he would certainly make good.

ROUMANIA AIR MAIL.

The Roumanian Minister of Communications has been authorized to sign a contract with a French Company, the Franco-Roumaine de Navigation Aerienne, under which the Company has the right of air transport and air mails in Roumania on the Paris-Strasburg-Prague-Vienna, Budapest-Belgrade-Bucharest-Constantinople air route over a period of 20 years. The agreement carries with it an annual maximum subsidy of 6,500,000 lei to the Company, in return for certain guarantees, including the placing of its material and personnel at the disposal of the Roumanian Government in the event of mobilization.

From France the regular postage stamp will be used plus the extra fee charged for the air service. The Roumanian stamps will consist of the regular issues overprinted with special designations.

Our Approval Service

We want every collector, large or small, to give our service a trial; to prove to you that we have the goods and then some. We have to date only a mail business and our customers are assured of receiving first chance at all good things arriving in very limited quantities. Remember we have agents in practically every land seeking good things for us, and that our motto is to have what you want, when you want it. What class are you interested in?

NO. 1—APPROVAL SHEETS:—
We offer for the beginner and collector with less than 10,000 varieties, two hundred different sheets of single stamps, mounted alphabetically and covering almost every country from Abyssinia to Zululand. All prices are net at an average of one-half Scott's catalogue prices.

NO. 1a—APPROVAL SHEETS (Complete Sets):—
We offer 200 different series of sheets containing only stamps arranged in short or complete sets. About five hundred sets represented, both new and used. These sets are sold only intact, single items being found on our regular No. 1 Series.

NO. 2—APPROVAL BOOKS:—By Countries
Here we offer a complete line of books by countries, covering all lands of importance, just one of a kind, representing what we have in stock, aside from rarities.

NO. 3—WANT LISTS:—
This is our best service, and it is seldom we return a list unfilled to a large extent. We attempt to stock everything good available, and if we haven't what you want it will be hard to find elsewhere. Let us prove to you the completeness of our stock. We do not attempt to carry, however, various issues, mostly surcharged, of Arabia, Armenia, Batum, Ukrainia, etc.

NO. 4—NEW ISSUES:—
We are receiving all British, French and Portuguese Colonials as issued, 90% of all European and Oriental items, with our share of South Americans as well. Send us your limitations and we are ready to please.

NO. 5—SPECIALTIES AND U. S.:—
Our continued consignments from Europe make it possible for us to send card selections, of minor varieties, etc., of both old and new issues.
Only average copies of U. S. are included in approval lots, better things against want list only.

References absolutely necessary — no applications considered without them.

EDITORIAL.

Tide—So much has been said about the desirability of stamps as objects for investment of money that it becomes apparent that a number of collectors are giving serious thought to the money-making possibilities of stamps. We could pass by this consideration without comment if it were not that a few of our readers have written us asking for a frank exposition of our ideas on the subject. Broadly, the question resolves itself into the advisability of taking money that ordinarily would be applied to investments in their standard sense and applying it to the purchase of good stamps in the hope that they could be realized on at a figure representing a profit better than the usual rates of return, where the question of safety of investment is almost negligible. We have no liking for plain speaking on the subject because of our somewhat mixed feelings on it, but when one of our readers says that from our remarks followed through a good many years, he cannot say whether or not we approve of such a course, we feel it incumbent upon ourselves to say a few words.

Told—On the basis of having had many years' experience in practical philately, rather than as one who has any exclusive or advanced information on the subject, we shall say something. We cannot say that saving funds should be invested in stamps to ultimate advantage nor could we say that they should not be. This is straddling the question without reserve, but our statement is based wholly upon the question of marketability of stamps. Too much consideration cannot be given the question of ability to sell the stamps properly; and it is upon this angle that so many plans are wrecked., If valuable stamps are not sold carefully, the results are lamentable. There is always a market for good stamps, but too many collectors do not know how to find it. It is more important to dispose of the stamps successfully than the average collector realizes and what we are concerned about is to enlarge the market opportunities of the seller who is a collector and investor rather than dealer. When the stamp collection in the estate is sold by persons who know of market conditions, the returns are fair, while, on the contrary, valuable properties have been absolutely thrown away by those ignorant of stamp values and the avenues of sale. So, too, many phases of stamp investment must be considered to allow of an off-hand yes or no.

True—We have received a number of letters from readers, commenting favorably upon the stand taken by Mr. S. G. Powell, in an editorial in our issue of March 11th, against the objectionable practice of selling the canceled-to-order stamps as used stamps. We are impressed by the expressions on the subject in a communication from Mr. Payne L. Ames who says that for very many years he has had access to the stamps received on a large volume of mail from South and Central American countries and who in consequence feels that he is qualified to speak on one phase of the question. He says: "I remember that some time ago you commented on the misrepresentation of calling canceled-to-order stamps as 'used' but I recollect in the same connection that you very fairly said at the time that in the instance of some stamps that you named, it was impossible to say when the specimens were really postally used. I have taken off the letters many used stamps that now have the appearance of having been canceled-to-order, and no doubt I should agree with the opinion if I had not removed the stamps from the envelopes, myself. "Mr. Ames is within his rights in speaking as he does, and he does not wish to be placed in the position of upholding the reprehensible procedure complained of. The angle that he mentions exists, but the larger aspect of the question wholly eclipses this phase. The admittedly cancelled-to-order masquerading as used is aimed at and there is no disposition to split hairs on the subject.

Test—A cancellation expert sends us an interesting examination into the subject of fraudulent markings on early United States stamps and his findings are something of a revelation of the intensity with which cancellations are studied by those who are deeply interested in them. He says: "That you are justified in calling attention to the presence of frauds, is evident as it has been known that there have been attempted impositions on a scale of some magnitude. While it is accepted that it is not impossible to copy the real thing in cancellations successfully, yet we know that it is a most difficult matter to befool the collector who has studied his cancellations. There are many little things that enter into the genuine cancellation that are missed by the faker, and there are indications that may usually be relied upon to expose the forged marks. I believe that a few frauds were attempted but with indifferent success, and I think that a crook would have poor pickings with his made-to-order cancellations. It would be of no real service to tell of the missing links of the bad cancellation, as they are of an intangible nature and are detected only after some experience. Your summary fits the case: The expert will not be deceived by these spurious additions and the inexperienced are not inclined to pay fancy prices for the cancellations."

Time—An inquiry has been received asking when the first dealer began business in this country. It has been some time since we have received this question, which we believe has been answered at length in old numbers of the WEEKLY. In 1862 there were a number of dealers in England, among whom were Stafford Smith & Smith, Bath, and E. L. Pemberton, Birmingham. In America, dealers established themselves on a modest scale at about the same time, and in New York the sale of foreign stamps was first attempted publicly in 1862 by that pioneer, one Bailey, who retained his open-air stand on the corner of "Chambers street and the Park" for a period of eight or nine years. Of dealers in this country who subsequently achieved importance in their pursuit, the names of J. W. Scott and Wm. Brown of New York, Trifet of Boston, and Durbin of Philadelphia are to be mentioned.

Tush—In one the best sellers "Ursula Trent," its brilliant English writer, selects as his puppets a rather unsavory mess of all too-sophisticated folks whose ideas and conduct are over-ripe, to put it mildly. Yet it is shown that even "Rose" has not lost touch with the regular humanizing influences of orderly life because it is said that she collected stamps. Surely Rose could find in her stamps a foil to the sordid conditions that seemed to pen her in, and it is certain that her imagination gave her a pleasant hour or two when she attended to her stamps. Add to list of human virtues: stamp collecting.

THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF BELGIUM.

CHAPTER X.

The Arms Issue.

Both the Royal and Ministerial decrees published in 1865 announced the issue of 1, 2 and 5 centimes stamps at the same time that the five denominations of the preceding issue were mentioned. But these values did not form a part of the series for which plates were made by De La Rue and Company, though they were, of course, complementary values to that series.

The first of the three to appear was the 1 centime, and according to a ministerial decree dated May 9th, 1866, this was issued on June 1st of that year. This stamp was chronicled in the Stamp Collector's Magazine for July, 1866, in the following manner:—

"It reminds us of the old story of the maiden wandering in the wood in search of a straight stick, and obliged to choose a crooked one after all. A very elegantly designed essay was submitted to the authorities during the competition, but the annexed type, though far inferior, obtained the preference. The well-known Belgian chronicler (M. J. B. Moens) does not seem satisfied with it and points out several defects. A great one, in our idea, it shares with the anteceding quintette of its country, namely, the absence of patrial . designation. The really tasteful design is more than partially obscured by the patterned background, without which the crown, oak-garland, armorial shield, etc., would have been so much more effective. An old culinary adage might be applied to it, as we find one artist furnished the design, and another executed it; the galvanastic plate came from Antwerp; Messrs. De La Rue supplied paper, ink, gum, etc.; and the Brussels authorities undertook its issue. It was to have formed one of a trio, its brethren 2c and 5c in value; but their appearance is postponed, and it stands at present the sole postal representative of the Belgian arms. It is printed in what may be termed an apology for color on white. It would be more easy to say of what hue it is not, than of what it is. A dull slate-grey is the nearest definition we can give."

The 5c was the subject of another decree which fixed its issue to commence on September 1st, 1866, while the 2c was not placed in circulation until March 1st, 1867. It was specifically announced that these three stamps were only to be used in prepayment of the postal rates on newspapers, printed matter, business papers, and samples of merchandise entitled to pass at the reduced rates of postage. Furthermore, postmasters were informed that when these stamps were used on letters they were not to be cancelled. When the stamps were properly used on matter they were intended to prepay they were cancelled with a special circular cancellation quite distinct from that used in obliterating the stamps used on letters.

While the designs are all somewhat similar at first glance they are really all different as regards many essential details, and each has a distinctive background. In the centre is a lion on a ground of solid color within an oval medallion, formed of five thin lines with an outer thick one, surmounted by a Royal crown. On each side are garlands of oak leaves and where they meet below the medallion they are covered by scroll ornaments which extend into the bottom part of the solid color on which the lion rests. At the top is "POSTES" on a tablet with ribbon ends and at the bottom is "CENTIME" or "CENTIMES" within an oval, while large numerals of value are shown in the lower angles. The background of the 1c consists of crossed lines forming small diamonds within each of which is a short vertical stroke extending from the bottom. The background of the 2c consists of horizontal lines, while on the 5c it also consists of horizontal lines, placed very close together and crossed by uncolored diagonal lines so that the effect is that of a background of small shaded diamonds. The oak-leaves on the 2c and 5c are somewhat alike but those on the 1c are quite dissimilar and are fewer in number. Other small differences will be found in the details of the crown, the shape of the letters of "POSTES", etc.

The designs were drawn by M. Depierre, one of the engravers attached to the stamp Bureau at Malines while the dies were engraved at Antwerp by M. Dargent. The plates were also made in that city by the electrotype process but the work of printing was done at Brussels at first and then, after January 1st, 1868, at Malines.

Like the preceding issue, of which they are really complementary values and with which they were in concurrent use, the plates consist of 300 impressions and all three values exist on the two kinds of paper and with the two distinct perforations described in our last chapter. The earlier supplies were printed on the paper supplied by De La Rue and all of these were perforated by Gouweloos Frères and have a gauge of 14½ x 14. Later printings were made on the thicker paper of local manufacture and were perforated by the Government machine giving a measurement of 15.

In our last chapter we related the experiences of the Government in obtaining a perforating machine and how Gouweloos took umbrage at what they considered scurvy treatment and refused to perforate more than the contract number of 500 sheets of stamps a day. The insistence on the part of this firm not to exceed this number of sheets caused the postal authorities to issue the 1 centime in imperforate condition. A few months after this value had first appeared the daily consumption of stamps ran up to about 1,000 sheets and as Gouweloos would only perforate half this number it was obvious that some had to be issued without perforation. The administration, therefore, decided to abandon the perforation of the 1 centime which brought less and was more extensively employed than any of the other denominations. For four months, from late in August until December, 1866, the 1c was issued imperforate, the total so distributed, according to Mr. Bouvez,

COMPETITION
A customer whose collection numbers over 25.000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.
I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.
Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

United States, Provisional Envelopes Errors, 2c on 2c Red
After the rate of postage had been changed from 3c to 2c the department was anxious to use up the large number of 3c envelopes on hand. They had the different postmasters secure bids for having printing establishments surcharge them 2c, but they found this would cost considerable. The postmaster at the small office of Brunswick, Ga., hit upon the idea of having a die to be used in the cancelling machines for overprinting this stock, and the department adopted his plan.
As a result dies were made and supplied to the different large offices. In the rush of overprinting the 3c envelopes some of the 2c denominations became mixed, resulting in the well known 2c on 2c errors. Scott lists the one on white, No. 2691, on page 30, but does not price it. He lists tLose on blue and buff on page 1231, numbers 2693 and 2694 and prices them at $2.00 each. They are all three rare and if they were adhesives would sell at several hundred dollars each.
I can supply these three interesting errors, entire, unused at $2.00 each or one of each sent by registered mail for $5.00.
Of course if you want any of the 2c on 3c varieties Scott's No. 2684 on in addition to those from the different cities not listed by Scott, I can supply them. To start you I will furnish fifty different properly classified at $5.

Information regarding new issues and varieties will be gratefully received. We cannot give the addresses of correspondents.
The chronicle of United States is edited by PHILIP H. WARD, JR., Box 4216, Germantown, Phila., Pa. The foreign chronicle is edited by PERCY C. SMITH, 40 Packard Ave., West Somerville, Mass. Correspondents will please be careful to send their matter to the right address.

UNITED STATES.—Since the establishment, a few months back, of the Philatelic Stamp Agency at Washington, the daily press has devoted quite a fair amount of space to their doings. It seems however that their interpretation of the first notice sent out by the Agency has not been correct for from the clippings that I have seen one is lead to believe that all of the old and rare issues of the stamps of our country may be had at face value. Such is not the case and any stamp collector reading the notice from Washington would realize that there would be on sale only current emissions in addition to any of the older issues that might be in the hands of the Post Office Department for sale to the public. In other words if the postmaster at Chicago or any other place happened to have on hand some of the stamps of the previous issue, these would be called in and sold to interested collectors at their face value. The Department however would not and never intended to reprint the earlier issues for the collector. Here of late a rumor has been current to the effect that this Agency contemplated distributing the famous 5c error from sheet No. 7942 in complete sheets, charging double face value for each stamp. As a result numerous letters have reached Washington regarding them. The Department has especially asked that we deny this rumor which is now prevalent and entirely unfounded. These stamps were recalled several years ago and there is no available supply in the hands of the Post Office Department. They will not offer for sale errors of this kind, as it would undoubtedly subject the Department to criticism to knowingly issue stamps of error.
From a valued Washington correspondent we learn that Mr. H. A. Mount has been appointed Philatelic Stamp Agent. The Department should be congratulated on this move for there is probably no one at the present time in the employ of the Washington postal service better able to fill the position. Mr. Mount has been in the Cashier's Office of the Washington Post Office for many years and it fell to his lot in the olden days when they had the well known "stamp window" for collectors, to pick out well centered stamps for the cranky. While he is not a collector he has handled stamps for so long that he has become well posted on the subject and knows what you are talking about when you refer to centering, perforations, arrows and the like.
I learn officially from Washington that the stamps surcharged for use in Shanghai, China and recently offered for sale by the stamp agency are from a later printing made to replenish the stock of the Shanghai Agency and that there is undoubtedly a difference in shade as well as plate numbers between the early lot and the present. I am told that this is especially true in the case of the 12c which color was changed several monhts ago due to the fact that the 12c stamp was dangerously near the color of the 2c variety.
This last sentence is news for we were not aware that a change in the color of the 12c had been authorized. Such being the case the 12c stamp described in the chronicle of last week should be listed as a new variety and not as a shade of the former stamp. We therefore chronicle

12c mahogany or claret brown.

In the published lists of provisional envelopes a certain Philadelphia variety on extra quality paper has always been mentioned but we never knew why for we never could locate the copy from which it was supposedly listed. We are now glad to state that Mr. George P. Smith has found some of the variety in question.

AUSTRIA.—Mr. Arthur M. McFadden advises of the following values in the recently issued set of this country: 7½k purple, 50 kr red and 100 k olive green.

AZERBAIDJAN.—Three new and extremely crude productions are reproduced in L'Echo de la Timbrologie from a German paper. The first, 400r blue, imperf., has inscriptions in Turkish (at top) and Russian (at foot), signifying "Socialist Republic of the Soviets of Azerbaidjan", with what is apparently intended to be a drawing of a mosque or other building as the central design, in the upper left-hand portion of which is a five-pointed Star and Crescent and the Russian words "UOyT MAPKA."
The other two are charity labels, being issued ostensibly (as per inscriptions in Russian characters) for the benefit of victims of the famine in the Volga region, the values being 500r blue and 1,000r brown, both imperf. These two bear the initials ("A. C. C. P.") of the inscription quoted above, as well as the year "1921".—Stamp Collecting.

BASUTOLAND.—Mr. J. H. Smyth has informed Messrs. Stanley Gibbons, Ltd., that there is to be a special issue for this territory in a few months' time. Hitherto, of course, the stamps of the Union of South Africa have been used without overprint, except the fiscals, which have the overprint BASUTOLAND.—Stamp Collecting.

BELGIUM.—Mr. Henry Hooreman sends us copies of the 10c green and 20c brown postage due set of the current type.

CHINA.—We learn that, on account of the discovery of forgeries, the 7, 10 and 15 cent values of the current regular series have been withdrawn.
Turkestan.—Messrs. Bright & Son show us the 1½c violet and 13c brown (both of which were issued in 1919 in the "junk" and "reaper" types respectively) overprinted with the custom single vertical line of Chinese characters signifying that they are intended for use in this Province of the Oriental Republic.—Stamp Collecting.

DUTCH INDIES.—Owing to alterations in the rates of postage, it has been found necessary to issue provisional stamps of new values, of which the following have appeared, all being overprinted on the current issues:—12½c on 17½c, 12½c on 22½c, 20c on 22½c, 32½c on 50c, 60c on 50c, 60c on 1 gulden, 80c on 1 gulden. —Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

MALTA.—10sh script wmk., surcharged in red Self Government, issued March. Setting of 30 stamps, 5 rows of 6. The printing is rather heavier than the previous surcharge, some of the "0's" being quite filled with color. I understand a large number of these denominations are used for fiscal purposes, and collectors should be warned against taking any of the 10sh Malta stamps without gum.—R. ROBERTS.
Mr. Louis Carabott sends us the following:—Government Notice relating to the rates of postage to be paid on postal packets and the conditions under which postal packets are exchanged with places and countries abroad has been issued. The principal alterations in the rates of postage from today, March 1st, are as follows:—The first rate for letters to foreign countries is raised from 2½d to 3d. The rate for post cards to all places beyond Malta is raised from 1d to 1½d. The fee for registration to all places beyond Malta is raised from 2d to 3d. To the United States of America the first rate for letters is reduced from 2½d to 2d. To the United Kingdom, British Dominions, Protectorates and Colonies, His Majesty's Forces—the rates are unaffected. To Tangier is 2d for the first rate for letters just as to America.

NICARAGUA.—Mr. Arthur M. McFadden informs us that the 1c red fiscal stamp has been surcharged "R. de C. Vale Co .01" in red and in two lines.

RUSSIA.—Mr. Karl Koslowski has shown us the 35k blue, No. 149, surcharged with two lines of native characters and another line at the base "5 p. X 250 p." There are three different colors of overprints, red, orange and black. Mr. Koslowski also submits the 1r orange of recent issue, surcharged "5000 pyo" in black. The 40r grey oblong stamp portraying the slaying of a dragon has also been overprinted with one line of very small native letters and "10,000 p." in red.
Mr. Koslowski also sends us a block of 4 of the 15k of the 1909-12 issue

BARGAINS IN EARLY U. S.

If you collect United States stamps and have not ordered anything from our advertisements during the past four weeks, it will pay you to get out those issues of MEKEEL'S and paste up our quotations. They cover practically all U. S. stamps from 1847 to 1873 in three grades of condition. Put these lists in your catalog. They will help you judge comparative values. Order from them freely on a "money back" basis.

UNSIGNED TESTIMONIALS.

Something like a year ago we announced that thereafter unsigned testimonials could not be accepted in connection with WEEKLY advertising. We worked the rule for some months but recently it has been infringed upon in certain directions. When the copy for an advertisement which appears elsewhere in this number was received with both name and address missing we felt compelled to accept it because of the exceptions to our rule that have recently appeared in our publication.

Be it known to all our advertisers that hereafter the WEEKLY will decline to insert all testimonials unless they are accompanied by the name and address in full of the party proffering the testimonial. We take the position that for a testimonial to be valuable it should be possible for one to communicate with the party who offers it for publication. If a thing of this kind creeps into our columns in the future it will be because the managing editor and the printer are asleep at the switch.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—The Hackensack, N. J., Philatelic Society has decided to distribute packets of stamps to youthful beginners of Hackensack and vicinity. A packet of hinges is also being furnished free of charge. This is excellent publicity work and we cannot commend it too highly. The club meets in the Y. M. C. A. building every second and fourth Friday evening.

—We regret to announce the death of Walter S. Wilmot, Bridgeport, Conn. He was an old-time collector and a long-time subscriber to MEKEEL'S WEEKLY.

—The Martauco Stamp Co. has taken over the office of L. W. Charlat, 537 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City. Announcement is made elsewhere in these columns. The Martauco firm is doing an exclusively wholesale business.

—The boys of Emporia, Kansas, have organized a stamp club. Willis Kerr, a local stamp collector, will be prominent in guiding the destinies of the club. "Boys up to fifty years of age" are invited to join.

—P. J. Drossos informs us that Kiutachia stamps recently chronicled in the WEEKLY are not official, but the same kind as the 1919 Rodesto and Cydonia issues, which all catalogs have now ceased to list. We are also advised that Greece has never issued any aeroplane postage stamps.

—We are of the opinion that stamp dealers having claims against parties for unlawful use of the mails will do well to file their cases with the Chief Inspector, P. O. Department, Washington, D. C. While the Department lets it be known that it cannot serve as a collecting agency it will without doubt co-operate where a definite purpose to defraud is shown to exist. If you have complaints against George Kemper, or William Perry, or other parties in West Virginia, send on your proof to Washington. Dealers are advised that in the sending out of approval selections it is wise to retain all envelopes and file them away with the communications received. The Department is very particular in asking for this class of evidence.

—Sometime this year there will be an exhibition of products of industry at Munich. To celebrate this event a special set will be issued. The German post administration (Reichpostverwaltung) has already given its assent to it. Now the Leipzig fair committee claims the same right but it is doubtful whether it will succeeed.—A. KOECHLIN.

—Rev. Viggo M. Hansen informs us that in the northernmost county of Germany, bordering on Denmark, new paper money is being issued as was frequently done during the war, on account of shortage of metal. The peculiar thing about this money is that "it is not issued to be used as legal tender, as this was long ago prohibited by law, the right to issue paper money being reserved for the state, but the object is to dispose of it by sale to collectors." Mr. Hansen feels that collectors of war money should understand the situation.

—The Board of Directors of the New York Philatelic Society would like to receive any complaints that may properly be directed against any official of the Society. They may be addressed to George G. Hiatt, 25 W. 125 St., N. Y. City.

—The Freshman Stamp Club with H. M. Mulford president, has been organized at Buffalo, N. Y. It is designed to reach the boy collectors of that city.

—As an advertiser in your paper, I should like emphatically to go on record as being in favor of a strong line of demarcation between postally used and cancelled-to-order stamps. In my business I always try to make the distinction plain, and am sure a collector is disappointed when he orders used if he gets the former—J. D. HAVENS.

—A delegation from the Washington Philatelic Society were the guests of the Philatelic Section, Maryland Academy of Sciences on Saturday evening, March 25, the occasion also being the third anniversary of The Section. The guests were met at the railway station by members of The Section with automobiles and brought to the Academy building. The first part of the evening was given to a display of stamps, which included what is probably the largest and finest collection of Cape of Good Hope triangulars in the United States; also specialized Brazil, Finland, British Colonial, United States and others. Toward the latter part of the evening, a buffet luncheon was served, then more stamps were shown and the guests escorted over the Academy building, and shown the museum section. The party from Washington included William A. Johnson, president, James F. DuHamel, one of the vice-presidents, Dr. M. G. Skinner, librarian, and Messrs. G. A. Martin, C. H. Vaughan, W. Hayden Collins, W. H. Boatwright and A. M. McFadden.

—The new Austrian set continues to appear by drops and most likely won't be complete before a new charity set of 5 values with portraits of Austrian musicians will undertake a raid on philatelists. To render the undertaking more successful the set will be sold at five times its face value.—A. KOECHLIN.

—An error occurred in the ad of M. Tausig on page 162, March 25 issue. Bosnia 200 diff. were offered for 25c. followed by 30 for 50c. It should have offered 20 diff. for 25c. Attention was called to error last week after forms were on press. Error was corrected altho impossible to acknowledge our printer's mistake.

COLLECTIONS FOR SALE

Collectors, Dealers, Exchangers, Attention Please

In our recent purchase of a foreign dealer's wholesale stock, involving several thousand dollars cash, a number of excellent collectio were obtained. We are not retail dealers and have neither the time to break up the collections nor the market in which to sell sin stamps. It is our desire to sell each collection intact and at a price low enough to draw immediate cash purchasers. We believe most the offerings are priced at less than actual replacement cost and refer, as a guide, to the advertisements of any dealers, either in this coun or abroad, who make a specialty of packets and mounted collections. We do not know the catalogue value of each individual collecti It is our belief, however, that any one of them will prove as good an investment for the dealer as for the collector and will net an excell profit when remounted on approval sheets at 50% discount.

OUR GUARANTEE: We give an unqualified guarantee that each collection offered by us contains all different, undamag genuine, Postage Stamps Only—no telegraphs, revenues, or unlisted minor varieties. We will accept the return of anything which does meet the above description to the letter and the purchase price, plus all expenses, will be refunded in full without question.

Do Not Hesitate! Our stock is small and cannot be replenished. This is Your opportunity and you are fully protected by the ir clad guarantee of a reliable firm.

Twenty Thousand Variety Collection

Our best and most valuable offering! A collection containing more than 20,000 all different stamps in good condition and covering the widest possible range of countries. Twentieth century issues are well represented, as well as a goodly number of the older stamps, both used and mint. Absolutely does not contain the telegraph and revenue stamps found in most foreign offerings. We recommend this in the highest terms as an excellent purchase for the collector who wishes to enter the "advanced class" with the least expenditure of money, or to the dealer needing a large variety for counter trade or approval sheets.

PRICE ONLY $1,250.00

Ten Thousand Variety Collection

Similar to the above collection, but containing fewer of the "hard to get" varieties. Will catalogue high enough to make it a good buy for the approval dealer, and also for the collector, who can in this way add to his collection at wholesale prices. All the stamps are different and in good condition. Mounted by countries in ten blank books. We have three of these collections and offer them at absolute rock-bottom prices to clear.

PRICE ONLY $197.50

Nineteenth Century Collection

This collection was made by an American collector, now deceased, and placed in our hands by his estate for sale on a commission basis. The present owners desire to realize on the stamps immediately and have agreed to sacrifice the collection for a spot cash sale. The outstanding feature of the whole collection is the very fine lot of United States, all of which are in unusually good condition. U. S. postage are about 60% complete and contain stamps cataloguing up to $20 each. The revenues (also excellent specimens) are complete with the exception of the scarce items. The foreign section is typical of the average American collector—certain countries are almost complete, while others have been shamefully neglected. The British Colonies are very fair. Taken as a whole, the collection has our sincere recommendation as being a desirable purchase for either collector or dealer. About 11,000 varieties, mounted in two Scott's albums, and cataloguing over $2,500.00.

NET CASH PRICE $600.00

Twentieth Century Collection

This collection is owned by the same estate and an early sale is desired. U. S. is almost complete and represents considerable face value, as practically all are mint. New Europe are almost excluded. Particular attention was evidently given to the Edwardian period, the collection is very strong in all issues up to 1912. Mint Brit Colonies are well represented throughout. Most of the stamps never seen in quantities and in our estimation the collection sho prove unusually attractive if only from an investment standpo Over 10,000 varieties, mounted in three Ne Plus Ultra albums, cataloguing about $3600.00.

SPECIAL PRICE $89

New Europe Collection

A wonderful collection containing over 5,000 all different V and New Europe stamps, including many of the great rarities p tically impossible to obtain even in these days of low prices. Am the choice items will be found: Austria Fieldposts complete, Tr tino complete, including the 10 kronen (catalogued at ten thous francs), French occupation of Cameroun, Nauru on Great Brit North Borneo Red Cross complete, rare Poland on Austria, Cas lorizo first, second and third issues complete, Austrian occupatio Serbia complete, Cilicie, Syria, and many excellent British and Fre War and Red Cross issues. This is by no means a "made-up" pac but a real collection which cost the seller in excess of $5000.00. stamps are in fine condition, mostly unused, and are in two la French albums. Catalogue value is approximately 75,000 francs $7500.00. We are authorized to sell the collection intact for

NET PRICE $1,49

Special Collection

Evidently the stock of a small accumulator and one of g merit. Contains about 14,000 stamps, over 6,000 of which are different. The balance are duplicates, but there are not over fiv one kind. Practically no New Europe are contained. Medium pr British, French and Portuguese Colonies are well represented. stamps are mounted in a large loose-leaf album and we estimate catalogue value to be about $2,000.00. being 6,795,000 stamps of which about one-third were in pale grey and the balance in a much darker shade. This writer says the imperforate stamps appeared on thin and thick paper but as they were all issued during the period the thin De La Rue paper was in use this could hardly have been the case. Gibbons lists the 2c also imperforate, but whether these were also intentionally issued in this form by the administration or are from sheets which escaped the perforation in error we have been unable to discover.

There were apparently several printings of these stamps: Mr. de Bont says four of the 1c, four of the 2c and three of the 5c, while Mr. Bouvez, who apparently overlooked the perforated 1c in compiling his statistics, says there were five printings of the 2c and no less than eight of the 5c. As regards numbers printed our authors again agree to differ and we give their respective computations below:—

		Mr. Bouvez.	Mr. de Bont
	(a) Thin paper, perf. 14½ x 14.
1	centime,	.....	120,000,000
2	centimes,	450,000	1,140,000
5	centimes,	600,000	1,530,000
	(b) Thick paper, perf. 15.
1	centime,	.....	60,000,000
2	centimes,	1,920,000	1,650,000
5	centimes,	2,190,000	2,460,000

There are pronounced shades of all three values, the 1 centime in particular providing a goodly array of tints. The impressions vary but slightly and the plates do not show the same signs of wear and deterioration as was the case with the contemporary 10c and 20c values, though of the 1 centime the different printings comprised the huge total of 180,000,000, that is more than twice as many as were printed of the 10c. It is curious that the Belgian printers seem to have had no difficulty in getting good impressions from the locally made plates while they were never able to make a satisfactory job from the London plates.

On March 14, 1867, a royal decree was published authorising the issue of 6 and 8 centime stamps. They were accordingly prepared but were never issued, as meanwhile a change had occurred in the ministry and the incoming ruler of the department of public works was in favor of the issue of an entirely new series. The stamps were not engraved until long after the decree had appeared, and when the types were ready, a committee was appointed to examine them. After a further delay they reported favorably on them; the printing of a supply was about to commence—proofs, indeed, had already been printed—when the change above alluded to took place, and the designs were set aside. The design chosen was very similar to that of the three issued values but with somewhat larger corner numerals and with a different border around the lion.

RARE U. S. STAMPS AT FERRARI SALE.

Prize of Auction of Seized Collection Is 1856 British Guiana One-Cent Issue.

In addition to the exceptionally large number of rare early United States stamps which will be sold at auction in the third portion of the Ferrari collection sale at Paris, beginning April 5, there are several scarce stamps from foreign countries which will arouse lively bidding among leading collectors and dealers.

What is said to be the prize in the forthcoming sale is a unique copy of the 1856 British Guiana one cent, black on magenta, postage stamp. No other copy has ever been discovered, and the late Philip von Ferrari obtained it several years ago. Ferrari was an Austrian, and his intention was to leave his stamps, the finest private collection ever gathered together, to a Berlin Museum. It was stored in Paris and was confiscated during the war by the French Government and is being sold at auction for the benefit of the French Government.

The rare British Guiana stamp was printed by Baum & Dallas of Georgetown, who published the Official Gazette. The center design of the stamp shows a full-rigged sailing ship, produced from the same block from which was printed the vessel depicted at the top of the shipping intelligence of The Gazette. Above the ship is the motto, "Damus Petimus" and underneath are the words "que Vicissim."

Another rarity is a fine pair of the 1858 issue of Roumania-Moldavia, being the twenty-seven paras, black on rose. The stamps have been used and show a clear postmark in blue. In the second Ferrari sale a pair of these stamps sold for 46,000 francs, equivalent to about $3,500 at the exchange rate at that time. There are also some of the very rare "Double Geneva" stamps and seven unused copies of the 3 lire Tuscany stamp issued by the Provisional Government in 1860. Uruguay is represented by a choice collection of 1,275 stamps, including countless varieties, errors and shades of color.

Among the rare Canadian stamps is an unused pair of the 12 pence black, issued in 1851. There are a few choice copies of the rare "Post Paid" issue of Mauritius 1848, including an early impression of the 2 pence blue with the rare error, the word pence being spelled "penoe." New South Wales is represented by 177 lots, including many fine specimens of the desirable Sydney views.

The two sales already held brought a total of 3,271,932 francs, equivalent to about $250,000 at current exchange rates. More American dealers and collectors will be represented at the April sale of the Farrari collection than at the previous two offerings, and it is expected that the best specimens of the old United States stamps will be brought to this country.—N. Y. Sun.

PLEASE DON'T GET MAD.

By A. E. HARDMAN.

I am not sure whether the enclosed letter may be of use to you in your semi-comic column but when I received it I had a good laugh regardless of my loss.

Here's the story:—After I had spent two good hours making up a number of special approval sheets for a young "philatelist" and sent them to him he took fifty-seven cents worth off some of the sheets and laid the balance on the stove where both the sheets and about two dollars worth of stamps became discolored with the heat. Then he sent them back to me with the following letter:—

"Saturday 18, 1922.

Dear Sir:—

I took 57 cents worth of stamps of your approval sheets. I left your approvals sheets on the top of are stove and they got burt a little so please don't get mad."

The youngster apparently didn't have nerve enough to ask for another selection. "Please Don't Get Mad" would be a good motto to hang over every stamp dealer's desk.

LATVIA.

By KARL KOSLOWSKI.

Beginning May 1, 1922, all the stamps now in use, except the arms type, will be demonetized and therefore taken out of circulation. On and after May 1, only the arms type will be used. This series has been augmented with several new values and comprises the following denominations:—50k purple, 1r yellow, 2r dark green, 3r emerald green, 5r carmine, 9r orange, 10r blue, 15r ultramarine. New high values of 30, 50, 100r are in preparation, but the design will be larger and changed in certain particulars.

It is probable that in the near future the wording of the values will be altered from Kapeikas and rubli to santimi and franks. This will be a result of a complete change in the monetary system which is undergoing perfection. The postal administration proposes to stamp out the manipulating scourage now so prominent, especially in Libau.

MICHIGAN STAMP CLUB.

By KARL KOSLOWSKI.

The Michigan Stamp Club held its 8th annual banquet at the Cadillac, Detroit, March 18. Forty collectors were present, and as on all occasions of this sort every participant went home very well satisfied. After the dinner President Hoskins read several telegrams of congratulations. Z. Dworkowski gave a very entertaining talk on Poland and its stamps, backing up his address with two rather large volumes of stamps. R. Langton entertained the audience with a short recitation "Stamps and the Mustard Plaster." C.H. Holden expressed his pleasure in poetry, while K. Koslowski also indulged in a poem "The Lament of Mrs. Stamp Collector."

C. F. Heyerman exhibited his magnificent prize collection of inverts, containing some 375 varieties. W. F. Fratcher showed some of his 5c, 1847, some one hundred covers in all minor varieties. J. E. Scott showed pairs, strips and blocks of U. S. A very brisk trading and selling of duplicates was indulged in between the acts.

SO-CALLED "PEACE STAMPS."

John M. Spence sends us a clipping from the New York Journal of Commerce, which we reprint herewith. It is very evident that these stamps are nothing more than advertising labels, and the customs authorities do not recognize them as worthy of being entered under the designation postage stamps:—

H. B. Thomas & Co., of San Francisco, lose in a customs case involving the classification of 2,500,000 so-called "Peace Stamps," composed of pieces of green-colored paper 1-inch in width by 1¼ inches in length, having imprinted thereon a picture of the Rheims Cathedral. On entry at that port they were classified as printed matter and duty assessed at the rate of 15 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 329 of the Tariff Act of 1913. The importers, objecting to this classification, claimed free entry under either Paragraph 425, 426 or 610. Judge Fischer writes a lengthy opinion upholding the Collector's assessment.

Very few stamps appeal stronger to the collector than do French Colonials.

THE VICTORIA DE TORREON ISSUE.

By MAJOR C. S. HAMILTON, U. S. Army.

The Victoria de Torreon issue are among the rarest of Mexican stamps, and due to their extreme scarcity are lacking in most collections. Very little is known of these stamps due to the small number of them which were issued, but from my unusual opportunities to observe and acquire this issue, as I was stationed on the Texas border at the time, I shall endeavor to throw a little light on the subject.

The capture of Torreon on April 2, 1914, by the Constitucionalistas (Carranza and Villa forces) from the Federals (Huertistas) was an event of such importance to the Constitucionalista cause as to require a fitting celebration. To accomplish this, a holiday was declared at Ciudad Juarez, the capital of the territory under the Constitucionalistas' control, and the Minister of Communicaciones Y Obras and Publicas, Senor Ignacio Bonillas, authorized the postmaster at Juarez, Senor Ponciano Cota, to make a special issue of stamps. For which purpose a few of each value of the Transitorio Issue from one centavo to fifty centavos were surcharged Victoria de Torreon, Abril 2—1914. These stamps were issued April 3, 1914, and were sold on that and the following date, although a few covers are known used at later dates.

These stamps were available for foreign as well as domestic use as covers are known which have done postal duty to Europe and the United States. All stamps remaining unsold at the post-office on April 4, 1914, were sold to or bought up by an El Paso collector. These stamps were afterwards acquired by Mr. B. W. H. Poole, the Nassau Stamp Company, and another New York dealer, the majority of these stamps being acquired by the latter gentleman. As letter writing was not much in vogue in these troublesome times, used stamps are very much more valuable than unused ones, authentic covers being very rare indeed.

There are no official figures as to the exact number of these stamps issued. The number overprinted was very small and it has been claimed that only one sheet (100 stamps) each of the one, two, four, and ten centavo values were issued; three sheets (300 stamps) of the five centavo value; and less than one-half sheet each of the twenty and fifty centavo values. However, I do not believe this estimate to be correct as from the number of these stamps that I have seen and from the statements of the gentleman who acquired the majority of the stamps remaining unsold at the post-office I believe that the following figures are exact:

2 centavos,	300	"
4 "	300	"
5 "	1,000	"

Some of the five centavo values were overprinted on sheets which show one pair of stamps (Nos. 6 and 7) on the upper hosizontal row imperforate between. This pair, imperforate between, is of the greatest rarity as not more than ten such pairs at most can exist. From these figures it can be seen that these stamps are much underpriced by Scott, the higher values particularly being priced several times below their true worth. Used copies are worth at least double the unused ones.

The overprinting was done from type set forms, evidently on an ordinary printing press. The form was made up from ten settings of the surcharge placed in a horizontal row of ten for surcharging across a horizontal row of ten stamps at one operation. The workmanship was accurate and excellent, no errors being known. The surcharge on each stamp in a row shows minor differences, the most important of which is a small speck resembling an apostrophe after "de" on the eighth stamp in each row. From a complete horizontal strip of ten stamps showing each setting of the surcharge and a sheet of the same value of one of the non-surcharged Transitorio stamps it is possible to determine the position of any stamp in the sheet, and by this means counterfeits may be checked up.

The Most Detailed Catalogue of United States Postage Stamps in the World

is the claim we make for the STANLEY GIBBONS PRICED CATALOGUE OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES (Part 2), for 1922. This catalog will be a special edition for the United States, without illustrations of United States stamps, and will be ready about April 15.

Price $2.40 Post-free

The exceedingly interesting issues of the United States from 1847 to 1882 have been profoundly studied during the past few years by some of the most brilliant philatelists of the day and numerous articles have appeared in the philatelic press of America, but the publishers have hitherto failed to use this material.

As we think it is to the interest of all concerned, both collectors and the trade, we have made an attempt to write a list of these stamps more in accordance with their importance than any priced list that has hitherto appeared.

We have included a great number of types, retouches, plate varieties, shades, and paper varieties, and have priced the bulk of them at what we believe to be their current market value, most prices being based upon our own somewhat considerable stock.

If American collectors appreciate such a catalogue of their own stamps, we shall be glad if they will send us any corrections to this list, and also any suggestions for extending and improving it.

Other countries, such as France, Sicily, etc., have been entirely re-written, the prices have been revised throughout, and hundreds of rarities are now priced for the first time.

We think collectors will find this the best and most accurate priced catalogue that has ever appeared. [34

Due to the extreme rarity of these stamps counterfeiters naturally have turned their attention to them. Four different counterfeits are known. These can generally be determined by the type which is too small, especially in the words, "Torreon" and "Abril". The color of the counterfeit surcharge is generally a dull black instead of the glossy, brownish black of the original. The "A" of the "Victoria" of the counterfeit has no foot and the loop of the "A" looks like an "O". Frequently the impression of the surcharge is blurred, almost amounting to a shift, while the original impression is clear and distinct. Some counterfeits have undoubtedly had the surcharge applied with a hand stamp. The shades of color of the stamps themselves are wrong; the green of the two centavos is too deep, of the ten centavos too pale, of the twenty and fifty centavos too dark. Of the high values, twenty and fifty centavos, only a half sheet of each value was printed so counterfeits of these can be told by the difference in shade alone.

A claim has been made that these stamps were issued and used in Torreon and not in Juarez. Covers are known from the former city, and some few stamps may have been taken there and so used, but there is no doubt that the issue was placed on sale at Juarez as authorized by Senor Ponciano Cota. The covers that I have seen which have done postal duty to Europe were all mailed from Juarez.

British Expert Criticises Government's Printing Methods.

Criticism of the methods of printing United States stamps has been voiced by Fred J. Melville, one of England's leading postage stamp authorities, in connection with the recent discovery of the forgeries of the two-cent red issue.

These forgeries were detected quickly, and it is doubtful that any were used for letter postage.

"Most collectors," says Mr Melville, "have noticed the wide variations in the United States stamps of recent years, due to the experimenting at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing with new processes of printing. Stamps of like design and denomination have been printed from finely engraved steel plates, from rotary recess plates, from surface printing plates and by the offset method, and these have been in circulation simultaneously. The different qualities of impression make them all look different and this is a dangerous state of affairs in a country whose stamps are being used to the extent of millions every day.

"Where the genuine stamps vary so much it is difficult to detect, or even suspect, a forgery, and it is not surprising that some one has taken advantage of the recent confusion in stamp printing in the United States. There are wide avenues for the disposal of the forged stamps in the countless mail-order firms in America. This is, however, the first forgery of a current United States stamp since 1894."—N. Y. Times.

HINGES AND HINGEING.

By L. H. Brigham.

The old-time collector kept his stamps in position in his album by a variety of methods, very few of which would pass muster today. Stamps should be mounted or hinged and not pasted or stuck in a book, as we commonly hear this very important operation referred to. Often we do actually find stamps that are pasted or stuck down so fast that there is absolutely no removing them other than by complete immersion in water.

Mounting or hingeing a stamp is a more refined expression to use; it is strictly a philatelic term and is actually what one does, or at least should do. There are various sizes, shapes, and kinds of stamp hinges. There is only one kind, however, that should be considered by the collector, and that is the strictly peelable hinge. The reason for this can be clearly appreciated. One may desire to remove a certain stamp from a collection and replace it with a better copy. If a peelable hinge has been used, the stamp can be easily removed from the book, and no trace is left of this having been done. The appearance of the book is not marred by having part of the hinge left where the stamp was or a piece of the page torn up by a hinge which holds fast to it. One of these calamities is almost sure to result if anything but a peelable hinge is used.

One may also desire to remove a hinge from a stamp. If the hinge be peelable, it can be removed without any trouble, and the stamp is not injured in the least by having part of it come away with the old hinge. When this occurs, a so-called "thin" spot is left in the stamp, which makes it a damaged copy. If an inferior hinge has been used and the stamp is fortunate enough to escape injury, a portion of the old hinge will, in all probability, adhere to it. This leaves a lumpy surface on which to affix the new hinge, and when several of these hinges have been used on the same stamp, it soon develops an abnormal thickness and must be immersed in water to remove the "growth." Either of these results is certainly undesirable and can be easily avoided by the use of the peelable hinge.

Removing a hinged stamp from one's collection or an old hinge from the back of a stamp is made easier if the hinge is but slightly moistened when affixed to the stamp and book in the first place.

The correct method of affixing a hinge to a stamp is to fold over one-third of the hinge; slightly moisten this surface and affix same to the back of the stamp, flush with top edge of it; slightly moisten the remainder of the hinge and lightly affix to the album page.

Placing the hinge flush with the top edge of the stamp allows a ready examination of the stamp for watermarks, paper, etc., by easily turning the stamp over on its back on the edge formed by the crease in the hinge. This eliminates the necessity of removing same from the album for the purpose of examination.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of the correct hinging of one's stamps; in fact, next to careful handling, it is the most important factor in the collecting of them. in the collection of them.—The Haversack.

THE SEVEN CENT VERMILION.

By J. W. Sampson.

CHAPTER II.—The National Print.

Rates.—From the date of issue in March, 1871, until a uniform rate of five cents was established by the Treaty of Berne, in 1875, the seven cent rate was continuously effective to one or more European countries. This fact is emphasized because of the prevailing belief to the contrary. No less an authority than Mr. Luff, in his monumental work on United States issues, states: "At that late date (April, 1871), it could have been of but little avail for correspondence with Germany, as the letter rate to that country was reduced to six cents by the postal treaty which was signed at Washington on March 3d, and at Berlin, May 14, 1871. On December 1, 1871, a treaty was made with Denmark which established a 7 cent rate for letters to that country, and thus renewed the usefulness of the stamp."

Mr. Luff's reasoning was sound but his conclusions inaccurate, for he failed to take into consideration the change in rate on mail reaching Germany via England. In 1870 the via England rate to the German and Austrian States had been reduced from fifteen to ten cents, and in 1871, a further reduction was made to seven cents. Hence the reduction of the direct mail rate to six cents did not to any appreciable extent diminish the demand for the 7 cent stamp at American postoffices, for while thrifty German emigrants in this country may have cordially embraced the opportunity to save a penny on their letter postage, it is fairly certain that many export and import houses doing business with Germany and Austria appreciated the reliability of the British mail steamship service and continued to forward their correspondence via England. Also, there were sailings of British steamers in between the departures of North German Confederation liners, and even those preferring the direct route would naturally yield to the temptation to dispatch letters by the first steamer. The fairness of these suppositions is evidenced by the fact that substantial percentage of covers now in collections, used to Germany in 1871 and 1872, bear the 7 cent stamp and were sent via England.

In 1871 there was also a fourteen cent rate to Italy, via England, and a fourteen cent rate to Greece, and while the mails to these two Mediterranean countries were not heavy, many a pair of red sevens was doubtless used as the most convenient combinations in making up the rate. Then, early in 1872, the seven cent rate to Denmark, via Stettin, Germany, became effective, and the quantities of 7 cent stamps issued by the Post Office Department to supply these demands did not vary greatly from year to year, as will be shown by data presented further on.

Engraving.—The National Bank Note Company had been under contract with the Government for the production of its stamps since 1861. The design described in the preceding chapter was engraved, and proofs taken from the completed die in black, ultramarine, brown, maroon and various other trial colors. From these a scarlet vermilion was finally selected and adopted, this color being considered sufficiently distinct from the bright orange of the 15 cent stamp and a strong contrast to any of the other colors of the issued set.

Plate Varieties.—Careful study of an entire reconstructed sheet of proofs has so far revealed only one plate variety that stands out boldly and is easily seen by the naked eye. This occurs in No. 41 of the left pane, and consists of a large and distinct dot under "NT", as shown in Figure 1. It is as obvious, as easily perceived and as collectible as the "Dot in S" variety of the 5 cent, 1847. While it may possibly be an engraver's mark, it does not line up with anything else visible on the plate, and is quite different from the many small dots that appear in various positions on both panes. This "Dot under NT" variety was not worn away by the use of the plate, and is encountered among used copies of the stamp in about the proportion that might reasonably be expected, it being remembered that it appears on only one out of two hundred subjects.

That there are several minor shifts on the National plate is undeniable, but as this monograph is prepared more for the benefit of the average collector of United States stamps than for the specialist, these microscopic varieties will be ignored. It is enough to say that not only the 7 cent but all the denominations of the 1870-3 issues are rich in opportunities for research and will yield much of interest to the patient and persistent investigator who has strong eyes and a keen appetite for pin-point and hair-breadth variations.

Printing.—An interesting printing variety is the double impression, in which the entire design seems to be shifted "northward," and which appears at first sight to be a pronounced shifted transfer. Examination shows that the blurred and doubled lines were not caused by over-inking, and that the paper must have received the impression of the plate twice, perhaps once with only partial inking and then repeated with the normal quantity of ink.

Specimens of the 7 cent National are also occasionally seen with a fairly deep crease in the paper, which was present before the sheet was printed and did not receive ink. This, when later opened, gives the appearance of an irregular white line running across the design, and is sometimes erroneously believed to be a "cracked plate" variety.

Grills.—In March, 1871, when the first few hundred thousand impressions were taken from the 7 cent plate, the grilling apparatus was still in use in the National Bank Note Company's plant. The lead beds, provided to receive the indentation of the grill points through the paper, had by continued usage become somewhat worn and uneven, so t wide variation is seen in the distinctn of the grills on the 7 cent stamp, ra ing from grills that stand out clea with deep embossing to grills that be found only by careful scrutiny.

The grills vary in size, the smal having 11 x 13 points, covering a tangle of 8½ x 10½ millimeters, and largest having 13 x 16 points, measur 10 x 12½ millimeters. None of the roller grill" effects, occasionally found other stamps of this issue, have b noted on the 7 cent, but there seems be no reason why they should not ex

The grills appear both with the po up and with the points down. As sheets were sometimes handled carel ly, "split grills" are occasionally s part of the grill appearing on one sta and part on the other. These are fo with a section of grill showing at eit side, and sometimes at top and bott No double impression of the grill been noted.

Paper.—The paper used by the tional Bank Note Company in print the 7 cent stamp varies from thin fairly thick white wove, hard snappy. Occasionally, however, a sheets of softer paper were used. T does not closely approach the softnes the paper used by the American B Note Company in 1879 and later, bu nevertheless quite distinct from National's normal paper; the sta printed on it have the mottled appeara which characterizes the 2 cent vermil 1879, due no doubt to uneven absorp of the ink by the pores of the paper

The so-called "stitch waterma shows clearly on the 7 cent National, is found not only singly, but in clo parallel rows of stitches. No double per or ribbed paper has been recorde heavy percentage of off-center stamps, though in this some improvement may be noted over the 1869 issue.

Perforation.—The perforating chines used in the National plant w evidently operated with a trifle n than the average degree of care skill, as the spacing between the row perforations varies only slightly,—n less than the Continental producti Stamps with abnormally large margi temptation to hand-made imperfo enthusiasts, are less common than in later printing. The perforating not done with sufficient care and s however, to materially reduce the u

The stamps were perforated 12. No part perforates or imperforates are known to exist.

Gum.—The gum used on the 7 cent National ranges from a moderately brown shade to yellowish, the darker gum being usually found on the grilled specimens, which are scarce in O. G. condition. Regummed copies are frequently seen.

Color.—The color of the National printing is exceptionally uniform, and may be designated as a deep scarlet vermilion or red vermilion. The limited range of shades, dark to light and bright to dull, are perhaps more the result of differing degrees of efficiency in plate wiping, or the character or condition of the paper, than of changes in the ink. Occasionally a National 7 is seen that approximates the orange vermilion of the Continental print, but this shade is uncommon.

Quantity.—The National Bank Note Company printed and delivered to the Post Office Department in 1871, from March to December, inclusive, 1,486,700 7 cent stamps. In 1872, the deliveries from January to December, inclusive, were 1,066,100 stamps. In 1873, from January to the termination of the National contract in April, 394,100 stamps. A total of 2,946,900 7 cent stamps of the National print.

The reports of the Postmaster General make no distinction between the National and Continental issues, and it is therefore impossible to determine when the last of the National 7's were distributed to post offices, but the reports by quarters show that stamps of this denomination were issued as follows:—

June 30, 1871	427,600
Sept. 30, 1871	449,600
Dec. 31, 1871	361,100
March 31, 1872	257,300
June 30, 1872	247,900
Sept. 30, 1872	166,300
Dec. 31, 1872	394,600
June 30, 1873	281,100

There is no known record of the quantity of these stamps that were grilled, but an estimate based on the proportionate scarcity today indicates that not much in excess of 100,000 were issued, and if reasonably correct, this would indicate that the grilling of the 7 cent was discontinued during the first month of its manufacture.

HOW PINK BACK STAMPS ARE FORMED.

By S. G. RICH, Concord State Normal, Athens, West Virginia.

Mr. Berolzheimer's article on this subject, in MEKEEL'S WEEKLY of March 25, following mine on March 11, has done me a service. I promptly proceeded to investigate further, and found that both his statements and mine are true; what we each have said applies to only a part of the situation.

If the pink color is caused by the reaction of aniline oil and cellulose, it will be soluble. If, on the other hand, it is caused by an oil-soluble dye soaking into the paper from the ink, it will not dissolve out with water. I at once took several samples of the pink back 2 cents, perf. 10, and kept them in water for 48 hours. With each I kept a check specimen, not in water, and of as nearly the same shade of pink back and same shade of actual printed color on the front as I could find among my duplicates. I was surprised to find that one-half of my specimens bleached considerably in the water, and the others not at all.

It would, therefore, appear that I have covered only one case and Mr. Berolzheimer only one case, in our previous articles.

I then looked up the matter of the relation of aniline oil to the various dyestuffs used in printing-inks in the works on chemical technology available here, and found that in several of the red dyes it is easily possible for a small amount of unchanged aniline oil to be retained in the completed dyestuff. I further found reported that in the preparation of alizarine, the base from which a number of these dyestuffs are made, from coal tar, a small amount of aniline may be involved in the preparation and remain in it, unchanged.

Mr. Berolzheimer has also done me a favor by noting the error in my paper in naming methylene blue—which is water-soluble—as the possible blue pigment used in stamps.

It is probable also that my somewhat condensed remarks about the period at which the dyes forming pink-back stamps were made, has given a fair chance for misunderstanding what I had meant to say. I had meant to bring out the fact that the pink back stamps dated from a period in which the dye industry in this country, long-established, but relatively small in extent, had had to expand enormously, and hence, to meet war-time demands, was forced to put out its products without finishing the removal of all impurities, such as aniline oil, from all the dyes. If, as Mr. Berolzheimer claims, the dyestuffs were of German make, the same argument will still hold; Germany, under war conditions since 1914, was able to export only dyes not completely purified in all cases. What Mr. Berolzheimer has to say as to the trouble that dye-users have had being due to use of wrong dyes, rather than to any inferiority in the product, clinches my point still further. Nothing was less in my mind than to give the impression that our American dyes are inferior to those made in Germany. I pointed out in the very last sentence of my article that it was purely a condition due to war or to cut-throat competition that had led to the unsatisfactory dyes that did not work properly and that, used in ink for printing stamps, gave rise to pink backs.

INDIA AIR MAIL.

The Air Board of India under the Commerce Department, is a purely advisory body without executory functions. As soon as funds are available the Government of India has decided to prepare a trunk air route from Rangoon (via Calcutta and Allahabad) to Bombay. When this route, or a section of it, is completed, tenders will be called for an air mail service over the completed portion. Local governments in India have also been empowered to lay out air mail routes within their own boundaries. In all cases the regular British Indian postage stamps will be overprinted INDIA AIR MAIL, the routes in the Native States being distinguished by special route cancellations.

EDITORIAL.

Master—In "God and Woman", by Johan Bojer, published by Moffat, Yard & Company, and copyrighted 1921, there is a bit of philately undiluted. The eminent author shows that he appreciates philately and its ramifications and that his is no prentice hand. The collector is a manufacturer of farm machinery and mayor of a Wisconsin town; and the conversation that we refer to took place in a small town in Norway where he sees Hans, his natural father. Hans asked the son if he could come out to visit his parents now. The son was to leave that night with the party of other Americans on a tourist steamship that was to start for the North Cape; and the next month he was scheduled to be in Kristiania to appoint a representative in that city and a week later, "he would have to attend a stamp collector's congress in Paris". The old people who did not hear very well were puzzled by the reference to this congress and they asked: "What kind of a congress?" It is explained that the son was one of the greatest experts in philately in the United States of America and that his collection was of a value that astounded the simple folks, who, indeed, looked at each other as if they were trying to plumb the depths of the mind of a son "who ventures so far beyond anything one is used to."

Mounts—From Mr. Forest C. Middleton, Tokyo, Japan, we have received the three new stamps of Japan, accompanied by the following interesting information: "The Japanese foreign rates have been doubled and there have been three new stamps issued, a four, eight and twenty sen, respectively. The general design is not particularly artistic. The angles on Fujiyama are not correct and the view is lacking in perspective and dignity. The side panel, showing the deer at Nara, is crowded and has no business on the stamp, anyway. The panel at the top contains the imperial crest and the inscription 'Imperial Japanese Post' and two small panels of meaningless design. On the whole the Japanese designers of postage stamps do not live up to the expectations of a foreigner who sees their exquisite prints."

Mexico—We have received some comments from a reader in Mexico City that we shall abridge somewhat. Notwithstanding conditions that are not always favorable to the tranquil pursuit of philately, there are a number of wonderfully complete Mexican collections that represent the qualities of research at their best. Collectors there are inclined to favor their own issues much in the manner that our collectors prefer United States issues. While there is little public evidence of the existence of dealers, yet one may manage to pick up a few things that appeal to the American collector and these sometimes take the shape of covers bearing early United States stamps and interesting postal cancellations. While there is not enough of this kind of material available to justify a trip purely on commercial lines, yet the philatelic traveler may do much to make a visit worth while in this way. Our correspondent says that at the time of writing, no new issues are on the horizon but as novelties are apt to come with little preliminary announcement, the collectors there usually are in a state of expectancy in this regard.

Matter—Several enclosures in a letter from Mr Frank Sheer, New Milford, Conn., are interesting to those who delve into the significance of old postal marks. One is an envelope without stamps that bears New York, Panama and London postmarks. That of Panama reads: "Panama—22 No. 1863—Transit." We should judge from the sequence of postmarks that the letter originated, say, in California and was sent by way of Panama but a London postmark shows that the letter went to Great Britain before it was received in New York; and then proceeded to its destination in Connecticut. On the envelope is "48 cents" overstamped "69" in large figures. The difference between 48 cents and 69 cents or 21 cents accrued to the service of the American steamer "to go through the British mail" and the impression, "U. S. Notes—101" in two lines represents double the 48 cents British postage and five cents for ship service. In this connection, our booklet, "United States Postage Rates", is of value.

Marvel—From a New Haven newspaper of 1850, Mr. Sheer has taken the following notice, which is headed "Postage Reform." We are struck by this early reference to a uniform rate of two cents as in our reference book of clippings on early postage affairs we had no similar recommendation of this very low rate at the time. "Some intimations are given out that the present Postmaster General will recommend, in his report to the President, at the opening of the next session of Congress, a reduction in postage to a uniform rate of two cents. We hope it is founded on fact. There never was a better time for such a reduction. The country is prosperous, money is abundant, and business generally is good, and conducted on a firm basis. The increase in correspondence since the last reduction has been enormous, and it would increase to a much greater extent if there was a still further reduction. In fact, we are positive that in a few years, at a uniform rate of two cents, the Post Office Department would support itself. Contrary to Amos Kendall's predictions, the five and ten cent rates have worked like a charm and there is now a million of dollars surplus. Let us by all means have two cent postage. It will do more to preserve this Union than anything else."

Misery—We have just seen a pair of 10,000 roubles, Russia, surcharged, that came on a letter, just doubling the postage on another letter of 10,000 roubles. We have not seen the type heretofore on which the surcharge appears. In an interesting letter from an Esthonian correspondent, he says that conditions, while not happy in his country, are not nearly so bad as in Russia. He gives the following particulars regarding Esthonia: "My native country, Esthonia, is situated between Finland, Lettland and Russia. The population is about 1,200,000 and approximately ninety per cent. are Esthonians and the remainder are Swedes, Germans, Russians, Jews and Letts. The capital, Reval (Tallinn) has about 150,000 inhabitants." American stamps of current issue are in demand in Esthonia and we gather that they are encased in some way or other and in this shape pass from hand to hand as representing a stabilized rate of exchange.

SPECIAL NEXT WEEK "THE MOST POPULAR SET IN AMERICA"

By FRED. J. MELVILLE.

Mr. J. T. Gosling, Postmaster-General of British Central Africa, writing in 1903, gives an interesting account of the state of postal affairs in the Protectorate, from which we quote at length by permission from St. Martins le Grand.

"The absence, hitherto, of a railway, or of any general provision of vehicular transport, has led to the adoption of special modes of conveyance for man and goods; and in the case of mails forwarded overland, the negro has entirely supplied the place of beast or machine.

Dotted over the country, at intervals of twenty miles or so along its main roads, are mail men's rest-houses. Here natives wearing the uniform of the Protectorate Post Office wait to perform allotted tasks, which may consist of conveying a mail bag to the next rest-house every second or third night—the men taking turns and traveling about eighty miles a week in all—or in dealing with the more irregular mail from England, for which they may have to wait a week if the steamer is late. Whichever it be, the mail goes on from rest-house to rest-house, night and day, each succeeding gang of men, on reaching the hut which marks the end of their section, handing the bags over to their fellows in waiting. If it be night they awaken them from their slumbers, and lie down alongside the fires in the vacated places.

For the local mails passing between the different settlements two men per section are allowed, whilst the larger mails from countries oversea may require as many as forty.

Of course this organised system had a beginning. At one time the mails were forwarded by day only, and direct from station to station. A native would be sent off with a bag of correspondence, and told to take it to its destination, which might be any distance up to a hundred miles. He would travel about twenty miles a day for the longer distances, and perhaps as much as forty miles in twenty-four hours where this completed the journey; but in such cases he would, as a rule, be fit for little the following day. When the method of conveyance by relays of mail men traveling mostly at night was first introduced, old settlers said that the men would be eaten by lions; and the men who commenced the new service were accordingly equipped with lanterns and rifles; but after a while the lights were given up as not worth the trouble of carrying, and although rifles are sometimes still taken, it is generally when a wild beast has been visiting the villages in the district to be traversed. It must not be assumed that lions are not encountered. Cases have occurred where the mail men have been driven to take refuge in a tree, and leave the bags at the foot to be smelled and pawed and discarded as inedible by disappointed beasts of prey, and mails have sometimes been delayed on that account. But there are lions and lions. I know a "White Lion" in a Surrey village, who, to my certain knowledge, has often delayed the mail. It would be incorrect to suppose, however, that the native of British Central Africa is a drunkard, or that, when employed as a mail man, he frequently proves unworthy of his post. As a matter of fact, the mail service is conducted with marvellous punctuality, and instances of encounters with the alcoholic lion are comparatively rare.

Experience shows that, provided a route is well traveled by day, it is fairly safe to traverse at night, and the mails have been sent by night for the past five years without any injury to the men employed. Leopards are more common than lions; but they are usually more anxious to steal sheep or other small domestic animals than to encounter men and women.

As a rule, the native mail men are wonderfully faithful and trustworthy. Careful record is kept of the men engaged, even to the marks or scars upon their bodies; but only one case is known where a carrier made off with the bag entrusted to him. They stick to the bags, too, under circumstances of considerable danger. . . .

This system of conveyance of mails by relays of carriers is an essential feature of the postal communication of the Colony. Nearly all local mails are conveyed by night in this manner, and letters posted one evening are delivered the next morning at stations forty miles away.

It is recorded of the British Central Africa mail men that they once went on strike. The men employed at a certain Post Office presented themselves en masse to the Postmaster one morning, and said they were going away to their villages. Asked why, they expressed dissatisfaction at receiving less pay than the mail men employed at an Office some forty miles away. Six shillings a month was not enough for them, they said, as their fellows were paid eight. The matter was "righted" by a reduction of the higher scale; and the original malcontents showed a fine disregard of the ethics of striking by proving themselves very ready "blacklegs" when the men at the second Office were inclined to resent the diminution of pay.

The calling of mail man is rather a popular one with Nyasaland natives. The post is fairly well paid as native pay goes; and in this regard it must be remembered that natives do not, as a rule, work for Europeans in order to obtain food—that they get from their gardens—but in order to obtain money to buy clothing for themselves and their wives. They have further, the advantage that, in order to cover their eighty miles or so per week, they have only to perform some four or five journeys, and thus, compared with natives employed in other spheres of labour, they have abundant leisure.

In addition to the mail men, there are a fair number of natives engaged as indoor assistants. These can, in most instances, read and write, and sometimes speak English. They are often capable of sorting the letters and making up the mails, but are not, as a rule, allowed to do this without the supervision either of an Indian Clerk or of the Postmaster.

COMPETITION
A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.
I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.
Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENTS
A number of years back while Grant was President of the United States and Victoria still ruled the empire across the sea, Uncle Samuel attempted to keep tab on the executive departments and required them to use department stamps so that they could see how much money was being spent for postage. Note Congress passed the law to keep tab on the Executive, but forgot about keeping tab on themselves. I imagine Congressmen then moved and sent their furniture by mail the way some are accused of doing today. Anyhow, the Legislative and Executive branches did not seem to be any more friendly then than they are now.
A special series was prepared for the use of President Grant and his White House associates, and as there were not many in those days, they did not require a great many stamps. Hence the series of five, which are known as the Executive stamps and listed by Mr. Scott as Nos. 1509-1513 are rather scarce and are priced unused at $70.00. I have a set which is in good condition, not superb, remember, that remained in my own collection for a number of years until replaced by "full catalogue" specimens, and these I am willing to part with for $25.00. A set complete surcharged "Specimen" in fine condition at $5.00. Either well worth the money and returnable if not satisfactory.

UNITED STATES.—On March 21st the President made a great sweep in the higher personnel of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. At that time not only the Director, James L. Wilmeth, but around thirty of the lesser officials were dismissed without notice nor were they advised as to the cause of their dismissal. The air is thick with rumors about the vast printery where Uncle Sam manufactures his postage and revenue stamps, but there is no tangible scintilla of substantiation for sensational tales.

Opinion is general that internal politics, rival ambitions and organized labor activities are probably all that will be unearthed if a congressional investigation is enacted.

The new Director, who took office on April 1, is Mr. Louis A. Hill of Philadelphia. Mr. Hill has been Assistant Chief of the Division of Engraving for about twenty years and his father before him was Chief of the Division for a number of years. He is an engraver by profession and has spent practically all of his life in the Bureau. He comes to his new position well posted on the inside workings and requirements of the office and philately wishes him every success.

Back in the early nineties, it was discovered that the Continental Bank Note Company had placed secret marks on the dies which they had taken over from the National Bank Note Company and that therefore, the issues of 1870-1873 could be distinguished. As a result, we have in our catalogue today the National issue of 1870 and the Continental series of 1873. The work of the National Company had been somewhat criticized and when the Continental people took over the contract they feared that some of the National stamps might be returned to them, so they lost no time in getting out plates for all denominations from the 1c to the 15c inclusive. As these plates were made from the dies having the secret marks added, they may be readily distinguished. In the case of the higher values, however, that is, the 24c, the 30c and the 90c, there was little demand and as a result new plates were not made up by the new company. Therefore, in the case of these three denominations, philatelists have always had to depend on the paper and shades to distinguish them, resulting in controversies as to which is which. It has heretofore been accepted that the 24c in the shade showing a reddish tinge was the work of the Continential Bank Note Company, but we had nothing to prove that this was the case. Mr. John A. Klemann recently came into possession of the 24c with the Continental grill and his study of this stamp has given us information which will enable us to definitely distinguish the two printings of the 24c. It will be recalled that the 24c was not produced by the Continental Company until 1874, at which time a printing of this value was made. It will be further recalled that all of the varieties of these seventy issues, as well as the Newspaper stamps showing silk threads are the work of this company and were made about this time. In fact, the National people never used, to our knowledge, a silk paper. It therefore follows that the 24c, showing silk paper, is the work of the Continental Company and may be so classified. I might mention that this silk is not plainly visible as in the case of some of the revenue stamps, but one or two threads in different colors, one or more millimeters long are noticeable under a glass. I have seen about twenty of this stamp and they all seem to be in a light violet shade. The variety is not as rare as the stamp which was formerly classified as such.

My recent remarks regarding the used copies of the 1869 issue without grill have brought an interesting letter from Mr. H. C. Hopkins from which I quote, "I have examined a number of used copies that, even under the glass, appeared to be without grill. By placing a drop of water in a watermark detector and laying the stamp, dry, face down on the water and watching closely, it is possible to see the breaks in the paper caused by the grill as the broken fibres wet first and show dark before the unbroken portions of the paper become wet. Sometimes only a few points of grill show, I have found them when only one showed. In one instance only did I find a stamp that showed no points at all." This is certainly an interesting experiment and will help to show up many copies now residing in collections as "ungrilled" copies.

We wish to thank Messrs. R. W. Boisselier, Fred Altfelix, Leslie A. Boone, S. G. Rich, Louis G. Barrett and H. W. Porter for notes of interest.

ARMENIA.—An Armenian correspondent has sent Messrs. Yvert & Tellier a new set of ten stamps, pictorial and otherwise, ranging from 1r to 1,000r, which is to be augmented by a 2,000r value in the near future. The ten already on issue are illustrated in the Echo de la Timbrologie, comprising:—

1r green; sickle and hammer.
2r greenish-grey; ancient sculptures found in the ruins of Ani (near Erivan).
3r rose; five-pointed star, sickle and hammer.
5r brown; ruins of Ani.
25r grey-green; Babylonian sculptures from Ani.
50r red; Armenian soldier, Ararat in the background.
100r yellow-brown; sculptures from Ani.
250r blue; five-pointed star, with sickle and hammer in the centre, supported by two strange birds.
500r purple-brown; Mount Ararat.
1,000r green; fisherman with net, on the shore of Lake Van.

Each of the stamps is imperforate and all are very badly printed. We understand the 2,000r will be in yellow Fine copies of the 10c stamps of 1851 and 1857. Also any number of used copies of the 6c re-engraved of 1882. Cash or double catalog in fine foreign.

swer to his question regarding the surcharge "R de C" appearing on some of the current stamps:—"In regard to surcharge on same will say that "R de C vale C 001" means "Rebuilding of the Post Office" which was destroyed by fire. They can be used as well as the others."

NORWAY.—A provisional arrives in the shape of the 25 öre magenta, Numeral and Post-horn type, surcharged "5 ORE", in two lines, in black. At the same time, we have a definite 5 öre in the colour and type of the stamp so surcharged. Messrs. Whitfield King & Co. send us examples of both, together with a new 40 öre Due. Numeral and Post-horn type: 5 öre on 25 öre magenta and 5 öre magenta. Postage Due (type of 1889-1914): 40 öre blue.—Stamp Collecting.

PORTUGUESE COLONIES. — Gibbons' Monthly Circular reminds its readers that special stamps are no longer to be issued for Inhambane, nor for Lourenco Marques, Tete, or Quelimane. All these will in future use Mozambique stamps. The same applies to Portuguese Congo also.

Meanwhile, what has become of the new allegorical and pictorial designs for the African and Indian Colonies, which were officially foreshadowed so long ago as July 17th, 1920? According to the decree of that date, the main feature of the design, an allegorical figure of the Republic, armed with sword and buckler (the latter embossed with the Portuguese Arms), is common to all the series, the backgrounds differing for each Colony.

The issue of Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea, Mozambique, St. Thomas and Principe, &c., are stated to depict the memorial pillar of San Rafael, erected by Vasco da Gama at the entrance to the Quelimane River. Those for Portuguese India show a glimpse of jungle scenery through a fretted archway; and those for Macau and Timor a galleon of the time of Vasco da Gama.

These stamps were printed some time ago, and will presumably be brought into use in the various Colonies as the stocks of the existing types become exhausted. —Stamp Collecting.

RUSSIA.—Mr. Karl Koslowski sends us the following regarding the new surcharges:—

Type I.

5,000r on 2r in red, no letters.

Type II.

5,000r on 20r in red, letters R.S.F.S.R.
10,000r on 40r in black, letters R.S.F.S.R.

Type I is the large 1r orange imperforate stamp showing a couple of farming tools and two stacks of grain in the center. The type II is the 40r blue oblong stamp picturing a man slaying a dragon. Mr. Koslowski also adds that his correspondent advises him that all mail to foreign countries requires now 10,000 rubles and registered 15,000. Stamps of all description are being over printed in various colors and it is very likely some will turn out to be very scarce. The stamp fever is overtaking even the half starved and the three values of overprints on the Hand Breaking Chain varieties (Scott's No. 149 and 150) are selling in Moscow, the usual 500 roubles nominal value of 5,000 rubles or more a set. A special commission has been organized to take care of the Postal affairs and all known former collectors have been put in charge to provide new material and assist the Postal organization, and the result may be many new surcharges on the older issues that are being assembled by this commission.

SAAR.—The Nassau Stamp Co. submit copies of the 5c, 10c and 15c of the new set which is somewhat larger in size than the 1921 issue. The 5c is orange and black and is of the same design as the 10pf of the former set. The 15c is in a brown shade and is of the type of the former 1m. The 10c is a very bright green color and shows a bridge of the country and is similiar in design to the former 80pf.

The correspondence conveyed in the mails of Nyasaland is for the most part posted by the European settlers; but there is a fairly large native correspondence also. At one time the native did not make use of the post office, or, if he did so, did it in an irregular way by getting the mail men to carry letters unofficially. Even now it is often found that a letter sent by a native in one village to a friend in another contains enclosures from almost every person in the community who can write, and indeed, from some who cannot—a sort of village secretary filling the breach where necessary.

Comparatively few of the natives can read and write at present. Some write in Suahili, but the majority in their own language, using European characters. The mail men, as a rule, cannot read or write; and sometimes this leads to complications, as, for example, where a mail has to be passed on to a 'relay' at a rest-house remote from European supervision, and the arriving mail men are late. The men who are to take the bags on to their destination know full well that unless they can make up the time there will be trouble when they arrive; and formerly it was the practice to insist on the delinquents going through to the end of the journey—another twenty miles or so—to admit and explain their fault. As this arrangement, although calculated to ensure punctuality, was apt to delay the return mail, it was explained that the uniforms, which are numbered, would do as well; and the clothing is now taken instead of the men. That is to say, the late arrival has to surrender his uniform jacket, which is taken through to the next post office in order that a note may be made of the number, and the matter 'suitably noticed'. For the addresses and the bags, too, special provision has to be made; and coloured labels, or brass tablets of different shapes and design, serve to indicate to the untutored savage the particular destination for which the bag entrusted to him for conveyance is intended.

In addition to the overland services by relays of natives, mails are conveyed by steamers on the Zambesi and Shire rivers and on Lake Nyasa. They are small screw steamers carrying a few passengers, and make the passage round the lake every now and again as occasion requires. Gunboats were placed on the lake when its coasts were the headquarters of slavers, and slavedhows used to carry living cargoes between its shores. Times, however, have changed; and instead of criticising the 'inactivity of the Nyasa gunboats' in the matter of slavery suppression, the missionaries around the shores of the lake are now apt to grumble that these vessels are not used to bring their mails so frequently as they would wish."

The year preceding the change of the name of the Protectorate to Nyasaland Protectorate (1906-7), a number of reductions in postage rates were introduced, and the business done in the Post Office Department had assumed considerable proportions. A railway had been opened and was in use for the conveyance of mails between Port Herald and Chiromo, and the construction of a continuation from Chiromo to Blantyre was being proceeded with. The estimated number of articles posted in the year was 374,536, an increase of 53,632 over the previous year, when 320,904 articles had been sent. 904 letters were returned to other countries as undeliverable as against 686 in the previous year, and 473 undeliverable local letters as against 642 the year before.

The chief items in the postal report are thus summarised:—

By an order in Council of July 6, 1907, the name of the country was changed to Nyasaland Protectorate, and in the first report of the Nyasaland Protectorate we find continued good progress in the business of the Post Office. The 1 oz. unit of weight for correspondence was adopted, and the sample post rates were reduced from 4d per 4 ozs. to 1d per 4 ozs. The German East Africa line of steamers having reduced the sailings of their fast boats to once every three weeks, an arrangement was entered into for sending mails for London via Beira and Salisbury, connecting with the Union Castle boats at Cape Town. Correspondence for South Africa was also sent via Beira or Delagoa Bay to Johannesburg, which last office acts as distributing agent. Imports by parcel post were valued at £3914 as against £3647 3s. 9d. the previous year.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—Wm. Handshaw is another of J. R. Barker's victims. He sends us the details of how he was defrauded by this party and asks, "What has this man done with his stamps?" Dealers who are situated where lots are offered them for purchase should make certain that they are not buying stolen goods. Mr. Handshaw suggests that New York and Chicago dealers should be upon their guard.

—"I enclose an ad of R. Richardson of Manchester, England. From time to time there have been warnings against dealing with this man. My own experience is that in October, 1920, I sent him one pound, twelve shillings and ninepence for stamps he had offered me, and since then I have been vainly trying to get any stamps or refund. Just one excuse after another but nary a stamp. His last excuse for not returning the money was that he had been out of work. I venture to think that collectors should be warned against sending him money before they get the stamps"—R. P. BROOK.

—Gideon G. Ryder, 16 Clark St., Malden, Mass., would like to know the address of any dealer handling the stamp hinges, gummed on one side, strip about four inches long and about an inch wide with both the edges (four inch side) with saw teeth projections.

—In a contest held March 28, the philatelic society of the Baltimore City College won by a score of 31 points to 24 over the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute society. An entry submitted by a student of the Institute won the first prize, on "The Evolution of the Ship."

—H. Schatz, 2291 E. 55 St., Suite 48, Cleveland, O., can secure no replies to letters addressed the Universal Philatelic Exchange, 1410 Kirkwood Ave., Pasadena, Cal. He wishes to know whether others have fared similarly. If so, write Mr. Schatz.

—Cincinnati is asking for a special postage stamp to be used during the period of the Fall Industrial Exposition. While the word "stamp" is used in the news despatch, the word "Cancellation" should also have been included, for this will, no doubt, be the extent of the courtesy that will be granted the promotors of the exposition.

—"In reference to my advertisement in your issue of the 4th inst., to hand this morning, I notice that the printer speaks of a choice selected mint pair whereas my copy reads pairs. This makes a most material difference. Perhaps you will be kind enough to state that the offer is Plate 71 to 224 complete in mint pairs and a mint block of 4 of Plate 225."—W. T. WILSON. We gladly comply with Mr. Wilson's request and greatly regret the mistake.

—"I am very much pleased to be able to inform you of the organization of a stamp club here in Olympia, Wash., on March 11, at the Y. M. C. A. The club started with a membership of 12 and many prospects in sight. J. M. Hill, State librarian, sponsored the club. Harold Meyers is the Secretary. Two meetings have been held thus far."—J. C. MATTHEWS.

—"You have probably been informed of the formation of the El Paso Stamp Club, with our old friend, J. D. Bartlett, as president. The first meeting w held at Mr. Bartlett's residence in Paso on March 19, with seven char members. Meetings are to be held ev other Thursday. We hope to inte all the collectors in El Paso and vicini —E. B. HILL.

SINGLE STAMP BRINGS $32,000.

PARIS, April 6.—A one-cent British Guiana stamp, issue of 1856, black on carmine, sold today for 300,000 francs at the auction sale of the famous Baron Ferrari collection.

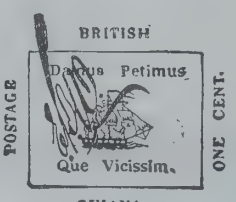
This price, plus 17½ per cent state tax, making a total of 352,500 francs (about $32,000), was the highest price ever paid for a stamp in France.

The specimen was knocked down to an American, who declined to give his name, after long and spirited bidding.

The Baron Ferrari collection, of which it was a part, was the largest in the world. The owner, a German who died during the war away from the Fatherland, bequeathed the collection to the Berlin Postal Museum. The French Government, into whose hands the stamps fell, decided to auction them and apply the sums acquired to Germany's reparation account.

The present sale is the third of a series which may continue for years before the collection is disposed of. The first auction was held last June, the second in October. These two brought in about $250,000, some of the money coming from Americans.

NEW YORK, April 6.—The American who paid 352,000 francs for a stamp at the Paris auction today was either Colonel E. H. R. Green, son of the late Hetty Green, or Albert H. Caspary, Wall street banker, in the opinion of local stamp dealers. Caspary attended the auction and Colonel Green had a representative there.



PARIS, April 8.—The highest price ever paid for an American postage stamp was that which was handed over by Griebert, the London Philatelist, in the third days' sale of the Baron Ferrari de la Renotiere collection.

Mr. Griebert paid 123,375 francs for the only known specimen of Boscawen, N. H., issue of 1846—more than $15,000 with the 17½ per cent sales tax, for a stamp whose face value was five cents.

At the end of the sale Mr. Griebert admitted he was buying for A. Hind, an American manufacturer, whose stamp collection is one of the most noted in the United States.

A five cent Alexandria brought $6,000. It was bought by Warren H. Colson of Boston, who won also a Baltimore ten cent stamp at the same price.

The sales netted 1,000,000 francs, but it is estimated that there are still 5,000,000 francs' worth remaining to be sold at auction in June, when American buyers are expected to carry off the best bargains again, owing to the exchange rate.

PHILATELY AS AN INVESTMENT.

By ARTHUR BARGER.

In a recent issue appeared an article entitled, "Philately as a Matter of Fancy." This was very interesting from a literary point of view, but to the seasoned collector quite amusing in many ways.

Stamp varieties are listed in catalogues, generally because of the interest taken in them by collectors, and the latter have long ago decided that perforated stamps did not fill the bill, and few collectors mourned their loss when excluded from the catalogue. This, however, does not mean that they should be thrown in the scrap heap. Many collectors are specializing in these, and are willing to pay, in many cases, full catalogue (old editions) and even more for certain varieties they want badly. Everything is collectible, and everything has a value. What one collector wants, another discards, and vice-versa.

In regard to the investment represented by stamps, most articles on this subject are in order. One must realize that the element of luck is an important factor in collecting. The average collector, I am sure, does not buy all his stamps from dealers. Often a search in a friend's attic will well repay the time spent, and many of our standard rarities have been uncovered in this way. How often will a collector spot a foreign parcel, and finally, after lots of trouble, get the desired stamps. I recently saw a superb one pound Gt. Britain secured in this way. Five minutes persuasive talking did the trick, and will this represent a 10% increase per year? I'll say it will!

A thousand and one different ways present themselves to the ardent philatelist to add new specimens to his collection, and when they are totalled up, the profit is often staggering. Of course, the dealer is the old stand-by to fill vacant spaces, but, all stamps are not sold at 50% discount, nor are they bought back at a fifth catalogue. Nor does the catalogue price increase 10% a year, not even as an average. If any one likes examples; in 1918 I purchased a 1 shilling Bahamas War Tax, No. 305, for 40 cents. I recently sold the same stamp for $9.00. The Palestine 1 piastre dark blue, bought for $1.25 in 1919 is cheap today at $12.50. I can cite hundreds of other stamps which have sprouted wings, and flown upwards as far as prices are concerned. A collection of War Stamps I formed in 1918—even with the later drop in prices—showed a handsome profit when broken up.

If stamps are intelligently collected; care taken to obtain copies in good condition, and bought from reliable dealers, they will, in the majority of cases, show a profit, and a good one at that. Also the pleasure of collecting is worth a good deal. As a collector and dealer for fifteen years, I can safely say, that "Once a Collector, always a Collector" regardless of profit; but the profit is there too.

THE FIRST AUCTION.

Trans. by W. G. Watt, M. D.

It is exactly fifty years—since it was the 18th of March, 1872—that there was held in London, at one o'clock precisely, the first auction sale of stamps. Henry Wheatstone has discovered a catalog of this sale, with annotations and reflections written by E. L. Pemberton, one of the fathers of English philately; it makes an interesting study, which appears in the Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, and from which we reproduce the following:—

The promoters of this new method of sale were Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge; the experiment was made, according to the title of the catalog, on "a fine selection from the celebrated collection of Mr. W. J. Scott."

With the frank outspokenness usual in that period, Mr. Pemberton expressed himself in his outline of the sale: "the catalog contains 275 lots which, according to the foreword, is but one part of an American collection, and the only reason given for not selling the entire collection, was that the time of the public is too precious to devote thus three days. It is not a bad idea to exaggerate the value of a collection and to prepare also the public idea to a second sale of duplicates. The lot sold the 18th inst. comprised the cream of the collection, the contrary cannot be said, and those four hours of the sale in one day have not been so bad after all."

It seemed then that the art of camouflage was then well known among the first philatelists.

The first lot contains the 5 and 25c of the newspaper stamps of the United States. In spite of the mention "very rare" noted in the catalog, this lot has been sold for only three shillings. Coming after, the set of 1851 U. S., with a lot of ten varieties of shades and types, the whole was sold for 5 shillings which was really not too expensive. And what would you say of the set of 1871, accompanied by ten varieties sold at 2 shillings? You cannot dream of it as cheaper, especially as some grilles comprised the series.

Here we are now in the kingdom of speculation: one 15c of 1869 center inverted, is sold to Mr. W. Dudley Ablee, for the sum of 36 shillings, what Mr. Pemberton notes on the margin as being a good price.

Giving a rapid glance at the descriptions of the lots, we see but many "rare", "very rare", "almost unique", "extremely rare", "not guaranteed", "presumed good", etc.

Mr. Pemberton has obtained several interesting lots. The other big buyers were Sir Samuel Cooper, President of the Philatelic Society, and Mr. Atlee.

After the United States, a quantity of mixed lots was sold, among them four specimens of the 5c green, first issue of Bolivia, reached the surprising price of 14 shillings. At the same time a complete set of the "bulls eyes" of Brazil was sold at 11 shillings. For three pounds three shillings, Mr. Pemberton obtained three superb Sidney Views, unused, with a poor three pence, also unused, and he considers this lot as the only truly interesting in the sale.

A thirteen cent "Missionary" of Hawaii is sold at 6 pounds 10 shillings. It would be interesting to know to whom this piece has gone. Perhaps one of the lots of the Ferrari collection is this stamp which was not so much appreciated at this time?

Among the 64 last lots which comprised only the Confederate States of America, we must call attention to the 5c Macon which varied between 12 and 15 shillings, and at last a Charleston described as an extraordinarily beautiful specimen which reached the price of 2 guineas.

We cannot find a better conclusion for this brief resumé than the reflexion of Mr. Pemberton himself—"the results of this sale", he said, "are very satisfactory, which proves that philately is not yet in its decline and never will be."

What would Mr. Pemberton think if he could be able to be present at the jubilee of the stamp auction?—L'Echo de la Timbrologie.

IS THIS A NEW VARIETY OF THE 5c 1890?

By J. W. Sampson.

(Mr. Sampson's question mark will be noted. It seems possible that a variety as pronounced as this must have been seen and recorded before. Mr. Sampson has a block purchased in a recent Doane auction sale, and came from an entire sheet uncovered in N. Y. City. Mr. Sampson believes that this variety is of as much importance as that found on No. 283. Is any further information available?—W. O. W.)

A variety which apparently has not been previously recorded, recently came to light in New York in the form of an entire sheet of the 5 cent, 1890, in which the shaded lines of Grant's coat extend almost or entirely across the white oval frame at the lower left.

The accompanying cut gives an idea of what to look for, though the lines are not as distinct on all the stamps on the sheet. They seem to be lighter near the top of the sheet, and heavier near the bottom, where they show much more clearly than the trace of ornament in the 10 cent, 1898, which is recognized in the standard catalogue at Type II.

STAMPS OF EX-GERMAN COLONIES.

By Fritz Arndt.

As a subscriber of your esteemed journal, I have read to-day the article "Stamps of the Ex-German Colonies" in your number 1625, taken from the International Stamp Review of Tournai, Belgium, and from the Philatelie Francaise, Paris.

The assertion that the stamps of our former colonies have been re-printed and re-issued is quite absurd and perfectly untrue. After it being clear that by the Peace-Treaty we should lose the colonies, the General-Post-Office in Berlin closed the sale on June 28, 1919, and after this date nobody could buy Colonies at face-value any more. Only from time to time the General-Post-Office is now selling some remainders by auction but by no means at face value, on the contrary at rates we can't pay.

Therefore, please be so kind as to rectify the false statement so that the American Collectors enjoy henceforward their stamps of the Ex-German-Colonies.

BRITISH COLONIALS

I am dispersing a very fine collection of EARLY ISSUES in superb condition. Also I have a fine lot of EDWARDIAN and GEORGIAN mint and used. All stamps priced in Sterling and as low as possible. References ESSENTIAL.

MARCH SUBSCRIPTIONS.

We are pleased to state that our mailing list, April 8, reached the 8,000 mark, and this is very gratifying. It has been due largely to the splendid support and co-operation extended us by certain of our advertisers and many subscribers. We take great pleasure in the fine showing made by the Fennell Stamp Co. and Allen Sears. Several new names will be noted this month, including C. A. Stegmann who sent in 19, and the Rotnem-Danielson Co., also with 19. These dealers, who are thus using their time and influence to secure subscribers for the WEEKLY, are entitled to our thanks, indeed more than our thanks. If we review catalogs and pricelists sent us by dealers who seem to be disinterested in the matter of securing new subscribers, to what extent should we go in favoring these friends who are giving tangible evidence of their interest in our publication? We are justified in saying that complimentary mention is quite often sought by dealers and a little reciprocity is appreciated.—

NEWS GLEANINGS.

Under this heading we desire to publish all the news from the various philatelic centers. Correspondents' names will be given unless prohibited, as we desire to give full credit for services rendered.

—Arthur H. Robertson submits a specimen of Hartford, Conn., Permit No. 1, for metered mail, the meter number being 1101. The value is 3c, oval cancellation, and is printed in purple. It was used in connection with the Hartford Insurance Co.'s home office.

—We are informed by Robert M. Perkins that the Union of South Africa is considering a new issue of pictorial stamps.

—We have been shown by Jos. A. Steinmetz a German cover that bears upon it the earmarks of a metered mail service. The cancellation is not as elaborate as the one used by American firms. The cover before us bears a circular Leipzig dated cancellation, while an oval marking inscribed "Deutsch Reich" with "80" in large numerals in the center completes the design. The postmark is in vermilion.

—R. P. Brook submits for our inspection an albino which is postmarked Peoria, Ill. It bears underneath it a lead-pencil marking, the O. K. of the Peoria postmaster.

—The World Stamp Co. sends us the Bulgaria 1 leva in blue, displacing the same stamp in carmine, Scott's No. 163. From what our correspondent says, we are of the impression that the carmine stamp was in use for only a short time.

—Victor G. Loly of Los Angeles, Cal., has a new street address. It is now 1221 South Bronson Ave.

—Wm. D. Pierson, President of the Waterbury (Conn.) Stamp Club, sends us a copy of the revised by-laws of the Club together with a list of the charter members of the organization. Mr. Pierson writes that an exhibition will be held April 22-29, at the local Mattatuck Historical Society rooms. This has aroused considerable enthusiasm among the members and some really creditable collections will be shown. The Club now has 35 active members. The secretary is S. K. Plume.

NEATNESS IN COLLECTING.

By L. H. Brigham.

One of the first and most important factors to be considered in postage stamp collecting is that of neatness.

A collection, no matter how small or humble, holds much more interest for the possessor and certainly far more attraction for those whom you would interest in it, if one's stamps are neatly hinged in place, free of all pieces of the envelope or other wrapper on which the stamp was used, and minus soiled finger marks.

Careless handling by soiled fingers will ruin the fresh, bright, clean appearance of a specimen much more quickly than anything else.

The delicate perforations and the sharp, clean-cut corners of a stamp are also easily marred and broken off. This is more apt to result if the stamp is an unused specimen, as the gum makes the paper somewhat brittle and the more easily cracked.

If you are a collector who takes pride in the appearance of his stamps, by all means use a pair of stamp tongs when handling your treasures.

If you do not care to purchase a pair—they are very reasonable, being only twenty-five to fifty cents—a homemade pair can be formed from a narrow strip of spring brass or steel. Care should be taken, however, that the lifting edges of these homemade tongs are properly filed and smoothed down so as not to either scratch, rub, or cut into the surface of the stamps.—The Haversack.

MISHAWAKA, IND., METERED MAIL.

(A valued correspondent, D. C. Turnbull, sends us a clipping from the South Bend (Ind.) "Tribune" that will be of more than passing interest, and we print the same herewith. Mr. Turnbull also submits a specimen of Permit No. 1, meter No. 1053, oval in shape, just put into use in Mishawaka. While the WEEKLY cannot give undue space to the new form of postage, it believes that as a side line in U. S. collecting philatelists will be interested. From time to time we hope to publish check lists of such permits as come into use. The imprint is in red.—W. O. W.)

The first business house in the state of Indiana to adopt the metered mail system, thus taking advantage of the postal department's new ruling which extends the "permit" system to first class mail, is the Mishawaka Woolen Manufacturing Company. Under the new system the mailer is enabled to use the government's permission through the agency of an apparatus being installed by the Pitney-Bowes Company, of Stamford, Conn., a machine similar to the type of equipment used in the postal departments of the world, but of an improved type.

The apparatus is fitted with a detachable metering device which is taken to the post office and there its register is set to the number of postage impressions which the Woolen Company has paid for in advance.

For example, A. D. Hoffman, in charge of the mailing department of the local concern, took the little meter to the office of Postmaster John A. Herzog, who, when he had received the Woolen Company's remittance of $1,000, set the indicator at 50,000, then locked and sealed the meter with an official government stamp on the disk of lead.

How It Works.

Mr. Hoffman then took the meter to the Woolen Company's mailing room where he replaced it on the large apparatus in the office and the mail was run through at the rate of 250 letters a minute. The new machine prints the authorized indicia on the envelope with the name of the Mishawaka post office, the date and time of day. The machine also seals the letters in the same operation. As the meter, which is part of the apparatus operates, one register descends unit by unit until zero is reached, whereupon the meter automatically locks itself so that no more postage impressions can be made until it has been re-set at the post office. The bulk of the machinery is either leased or sold by the manufacturer of them, but the detachable meters are only leased, it being the policy of the Pitney-Bowes Company never to sell the metering device.

System Marks Real Epoch.

The use of this system marks a real epoch in the history of the post office department. Under this arrangement much time is saved at the local post office for metered mail goes directly to the distributors or assorters, this expedition thereby giving such mail much earlier dispatch and relieving the postal clerks of considerable work.

Meter is Very Compact.

The meter is four by six by eight inches, in a metal box weighing just 12 pounds with a printing head and postmarking die on one end. It is equipped with a carrying case and looks very much like a box camera.

The Most Detailed Catalogue of United States Postage Stamps in the World

is the claim we make for the STANLEY GIBBONS PRICED CATALOGUE OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES (Part 2), for 1922. This catalog will be a special edition for the United States, without illustrations of United States stamps, and will be ready about April 15.

Price $2.40 Post-free

The exceedingly interesting issues of the United States from 1847 to 1882 have been profoundly studied during the past few years by some of the most brilliant philatelists of the day and numerous articles have appeared in the philatelic press of America, but the publishers have hitherto failed to use this material.

As we think it is to the interest of all concerned, both collectors and the trade, we have made an attempt to write a list of these stamps more in accordance with their importance than any priced list that has hitherto appeared.

We have included a great number of types, retouches, plate varieties, shades, and paper varieties, and have priced the bulk of them at what we believe to be their current market value, most prices being based upon our own somewhat considerable stock.

If American collectors appreciate such a catalogue of their own stamps, we shall be glad if they will send us any corrections to this list, and also any suggestions for extending and improving it.

Other countries, such as France, Sicily, etc., etc., have been entirely re-written, the prices have been revised throughout, and hundreds of rarities are now priced for the first time.

We think collectors will find this the best and most accurate priced catalogue that has ever appeared. [34

EDITORIAL.

Regard—The Ferrari sale in Paris has been receiving no little space in the newspapers, many of which have printed the despatch that over $32,000 was paid for the British Guiana rarity, one cent black on magenta, 1856, the only copy of which was in the celebrated Ferrari collection. Twenty-five years ago, this stamp was priced nominally at around five thousand dollars. Several Americans were at the sale and we suppose that they did not return empty-handed from Paris. In this connection we wish to call attention to a splendid editorial in the good old Brooklyn Eagle of April 7, 1922, which is about the best and most intelligent philatelic citation that has ever appeared in a newspaper. We congratulate the man who wrote this interesting review and we thank him for devoting valuable space to a subject which as he says is "caviare to the general." However, it is our belief that the multitude is becoming aware that stamp collecting has a recognized place among the reasonable collecting pursuits; and in fact an editorial of this kind does much to impress the outsider with the importance of philately. Not alone does the Ferrari sale furnish material for clever deductions, but the bill pending in Congress to permit the illustrating of stamps is given consideration. The Eagle editorial must be preserved and gratefully by philatelists to whom we offer it in another column.

Received—We are pleased to welcome the Queensland Philatelic Review which provides some interesting matter for collectors. We notice that at a meeting of the Queensland Philatelic Society, a member gave an address on "Historic Buildings on Postage Stamps," a subject well worth consideration. Twenty-five years ago, Queensland had a philatelic journal and we are glad that again it is represented in the publishing world.

Revived—From Mr. C. A. Burner of Normal, Illinois, we have received word that he is resuming the publication of his Philatelic Index which, as some of our readers will remember, made a specialty of prices realized at the different auction sales held in this country. We shall be much pleased to have Mr. Burner reestablish his paper which made a place for itself heretofore.

Ringer—The house organ of the American Optical Company, Southbridge, Mass., presented a picture of a frank, forward young man who seemed to be at first glance none other than the redoubtable Mr. E. R. Jacobs, whose fame as a detective of varieties of the New York five-cent, one, three and ten cent, 1851, etc., by no means is writ in water. There stands he in taking pose but we rub our eyes and read the name, Lester H. Brigham, under the photo. Nor does the resemblance attach to the picture only, for we read: "As an authority on philately, Mr. Brigham has few peers and he has interested a number of his fellow workers in the collecting of stamps." Good for Mr. Brigham; and as for Mr. Jacobs, we must announce that for some time past he has been under the weather but as he is responding to treatment, it will not be long before he will be able to attend to his stamp duties again.

Rather—Now the psycho-analysts are after us but they are pelting us with flowers instead of sticks and stones. One of the elect says that the collecting habit is indulged in by those who have a surplus of affection; and consequently after giving it to the point of saturation to the accepted persons, they have enough left over for stamps and such things. It is not for us to quarrel with this finding, but we do aver that at times our scientific gents seem to be possessed of a desire to "whale their fellow-man," as Bret Harte has it.

Review—The contribution of Mr. Stanley B. Ashbrook on the one-cent blue, first type of the regular issue, United States, to a recent number of the official journal of the American Philatelic Society has the appearance of a work that must command universal applause. We know how indefatigably and intelligently Mr. Ashbrook has labored and his efforts have resulted in a valuable monograph. When we realize the time and money that Mr. Ashbrook has lavished on these particular stamps, we feel that he is entitled to the greatest good-will of all those who take their stamps with due regard for their possibilities of study. That Mr. Ashbrook has worked so assiduously to solve problems presented by certain of the early stamps of our own country adds to the satisfaction that many of us have in contemplating what he has done. In charting the varieties of the one cent blue, first type, Mr. Ashbrook has done a pronounced service for philately and we rejoice that Mr. Ashbrook is so true a philatelist that he is glad to share the fruits of his experience and knowledge with those who do not engage in intensive study of the kind. We trust that Mr. Ashbrook's ability and generosity will have their reward in the esteem of philatelists the world over.

Record—That Germany has its metered mail is evident from a card sent from Leipzig to Philadelphia bearing the Leipzig postmark of March 14, 1922, and the cancellation form in an oval, "Deutsches Reich", above a central oval, containing "80." As Mr. Lowell J. Ragatz, who sent the card for inspection, says: "These new ideas spread." It is apparent that in our country "metered mail" will replace the postage stamp ultimately to a degree that we scarcely realize at present.

Repeat—We translate a notice of a new Austrian set that embodies several advanced ideas in these days of stamp salesmanship. The Austrian government legalized a new set of postage stamps for charitable purposes, to appear the latter part of the month of April. The stamps are to be good for postage only on a certain day every four weeks or by notification by the government. The issue is to consist of seven denominations ranging from 2½ crowns to 100 crowns, with a total face value of 200 crowns. The price will be ten times face value or 2,000 crowns. The set will picture well-known musical composers, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Bruckner, Strauss and Wolf. We gather that only 200,000 complete sets will be issued but that a supplementary issue of from 40,000 to 65,000 pieces of the lower denominations will be made. It is probable that the Austrian government expects that the complete sets will be taken by collectors and that the additional lower values will be used for postage. The idea of a gallery of the great composers is an attractive one, but some objection may be made to the manner in which the stamps are to be marketed.

The next discontinuance of subscriptions will concern all subscribers whose wrappers bear the numbers 1631 to 1635 inclusive. Just glance at your wrapper immediately in order to make sure that your subscription is paid up. You have ample time in which to renew and be saved the inconvenience of a discontinuance. Moreover, under our new system we are making no plans for furnishing back numbers and subscribers must not expect that we can supply back numbers when we have made every effort to notify them.

We are satisfied that the system we have inaugurated is the only one under which a newspaper can do business these days, and subscribers must understand that free copies of the WEEKLY will not be sent to those who are in arrears.

THE HOME OF THE POSTAGE STAMP Joseph V. K. Wells Manager. BURNT HILLS, N. Y.

Written for MEKEEL'S

EXPERIMENTS ON ALTERING COLORS OF STAMPS.

By S. G. RICH, Department of Chemistry, Concord State Normal, Athens, West Virginia.

Mr. Fred C. Zeisberg's article, in MEKEEL'S WEEKLY of Feb. 18, on a black one-cent stamp and how he discovered that it was caused by the action of the gas hydrogen sulfide on the ordinary green stamp, led me to try several reagents and their effects.

The procedure was uniform: The reagents were used in dilute solutions, of the strength commonly found in teaching laboratories; they were, in fact, from the bottles on the students' desks in the laboratory of which I am in charge. About one fluid ounce of each reagent was put into a small porcelain dish; the stamps inserted and care taken that they were thoroughly wetted by the solutions; a glass plate laid over the dish; the stamps left in the solution for one hour, except where bleaching occurred; the stamps removed, washed for three minutes in water, and laid out on white paper to dry. Such stamps as showed bleaching were removed before the color had entirely gone.

I tried three acids: hydrochloric acid, nitric acid, and hydrogen sulfide solution. All three turned green 1-cent current stamps, 1-cent Pilgrim, and 2-cent 1887 envelopes a medium blue color, somewhat deeper than the deep ultramarine of the catalogue, but of much the same tone. Hydrogen sulfide appeared to continue action longer, as the color darkened gradually during the hour of immersion. With this last reagent the green stamps attained a color identical with that of the lightest shade known of the current 5-cent stamps.

On the other stamps the results were not so uniform. The current 2-cent was not affected by hydrochloric acid nor by hydrogen sulfide solution. In nitric acid, however, it bleached in ten minutes to a pale orange-pink. On drying, this showed a distinct "pink back" which was not present in the specimen before treatment. The 3-cent current issue, type IV, turned blue while in hydrochloric acid, but resumed the violet color when washed. Under the action of hydrogen sulphide, this stamp took on a slightly grayish blue-violet color, which persisted. The current 4-cent stamp turned gray in nitric acid, and bistre-gray in hydrogen sulfide; in both cases it bleached somewhat. The current 6-cent became violet-gray in hydrogen sulfide.

The 1-cent ultramarine of 1890 bleached rapidly in the acids. It became yellow-gray in nitric acid and violet-gray in hydrogen sulfide before losing all its color. The current 5-cent, the current 2-cents surface print, the current 2-cent envelope, and the current 15-cent resisted entirely the action of the acids. On the current 12-cent, the 2-cents brown of 1882 and the 2-cents carmine of 1890, the action was only that of a gradual removal of the color, giving shades, the less pronounced of which were well within the range of shades found in unaffected specimens. One of the specimens of the 2-cent 1890 took on the orange hue so often seen in the 2-cent of 1903 as a "fade", during its bleaching.

I then tried the effect of ammonia. Towards most of the stamps it was inert; but the current 1-cent and 1-cent Pilgrim showed an olive-green coloration. The current 8-cent took on a very that complimentary mention is quite decided bistre-brown hue, quite different from any shade of ink used regularly in printing it. I tried this reagent on practically all the stamps mentioned in connection with the acids.

I tried ammonium hydrosulfide solution on the green and the red stamps mentioned above, but found no changes at all produced in them.

I lastly tried the effect of a solution of copper nitrate. This gave a curious appearance to the whole design, as if it had been rubbed with a grayish powder and then dusted nearly clean. The same effect is often seen on soaked copies of the British Colonial issues printed on "chalky" paper. Except for a slight bluing of the current 1-cent and the "dusty" appearance just mentioned, this reagent caused no changes.

The changes noted here will of course be familiar to chemists, but they may be new to philatelists and may be of interest in aiding to trace "off color" varieties, I hope to continue these experiments further, in order to discover, if possible, reagents to undo the changes, and also in the hope that these experiments may help unravel the causes of the very peculiar colors found in such revenue stamps as the $2.50 first issue and 1898 ¼-cent proprietary.

DEATH OF F. B. STACKPOLE.

We are advised of the death of a former advertiser well-known to many of our readers, Frank E. Stackpole of Portland, Me. The following is taken from a Portland paper:—

Frank E. Stackpole, 63, employed in the Crosman box shop at Morrill's Corner a year or more. died last night in the Maine General Hospital. He had been employed in the Deering district by various concerns for a number of years. Mr. Stackpole was a philatelist and had a valuable collection of stamps. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Wood O. Merrill of this city.

COMPETITION
A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.
I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.
Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

United States, Provisional Envelopes Errors, 2c on 2c Red
After the rate of postage had been changed from 3c to 2c the department was anxious to use up the large number of 3c envelopes on hand. They had the different postmasters secure bids for having printing establishments surcharge them 2c, but they found this would cost considerable. The postmaster at the small office of Brunswick, Ga., hit upon the idea of having a die to be used in the cancelling machines for overprinting this stock, and the department adopted his plan.
As a result dies were made and supplied to the different large offices. In the rush of overprinting the 3c envelopes some of the 2c denominations became mixed, resulting in the well known 2c on 2c errors. Scott lists the one on white, No. 2691, on page 30, but does not price it. He lists those on blue and buff on page 1231, numbers 2693 and 2694 and prices them at $2.00 each. They are all three rare and if they were adhesives would sell at several hundred dollars each.
I can supply these three interesting errors, entire, unused at $2.00 each or one of each sent by registered mail for $5.00.
Of course if you want any of the 2c on 3c varieties Scott's No. 2684 on in addition to those from the different cities not listed by Scott, I can supply them. To start you I will furnish fifty different properly classified at $5.

UNITED STATES.—It now develops that in the case of the recent Presidential removals at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, quite a few of those executives who have been with the department for a number of years have been dismissed. Mr. Benjamin R. Stickney, the inventor of the famous rotary press bearing his name, and the mechanical expert of the Bureau, will certainly be missed, as will Mr. George F. C. Smillie who is possibly the world's greatest portrait engraver. For a number of years Mr. Smillie was known as the highest paid government employee in Washington, outside of the President of the United States. Among some of Mr. Smillie's stamp engravings may be mentioned the dies for the center of the 1c Pan-American, the 1902 issue 1c, 2c, 3c, 6c, 8c, 13c, 15c and $1, the 1c Panama-Pacific, as well as numerous other stamps, notes and bonds.

For a long time it looked as if all of the metered mail permits would be printed in the same color as the actual stamps, for the 1c had been seen in green only, the 2c in red, the 3c in purple, the 4c in brown, the 5c in blue and the 10c in yellow. Mr. J. A. Smith, however, now informs me that he has the 2c in green and Mr. C. F. Heyerman writes to advise that he has both the 4c and 5c in carmine.

Mr. LeRoy Pratt calls attention to the fact that an article appearing in the WEEKLY for February 18, 1922, claimed that January 27, 1922, Meter 1078, Permit No. 1 of New York, was the first metered mail in use. This, of course, is incorrect, for the first use was made by the manufacturers themselves from Sanford, Conn., on Meter No. 1, Permit No. 1. Mr. Pratt's copy is dated February 25, 1921, but the company used this meter during December, 1920, the first month that it received permission from the Post Office Department. Mr. Pratt also advises that he has the 10c from Sanford dated December 17, 2.30 P. M., 1920, Meter 1, Permit 1.

Mr. S. W. Pendleton sends for inspection the first use of the first class mail permit that we have seen from Florida, these being used in Jacksonville during March, 1922.

From Mr. S. G. Rich we learn that during December last, the Post Office at Athens, West Virginia, ran out of 2c postage due stamps and used the regular 2c stamps for the collection of this charge. Such use has never been authorized by Washington, although it will in no way complicate the records of the Athens office so that there will be no trouble.

The daily press is carrying articles advising that certain divisions, including the stamp division of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are being closed during the week of April 10th in order that the new Director may take an inventory and see that everything is in first class shape. We are quite sure that there will be nothing missing. Some of those removed have been with the Bureau for well over 30 years and it is not likely that they would do anything out of the way at this late day. The fact that a great many of the foremost brains, if I may be permitted to designate them in this way, have gone, leads us to believe that we need not be surprised to find some unusual things coming out from the Bureau in the usual course of business. You cannot train men for such positions over night and those who are being raised from the lower positions or receive political appointment from the outside, will take years to fit into their new niches.

We wish to thank Messrs. E. J. Newcomer, H. E. Weston, Kenneth Setre and J. William Harmon for notes of interest.

AUSTRALIA.—Mr. R. Roberts sends us a copy of a 1d King George type stamp in a violet shade. Mr. Roberts calls this an error of color in advising regarding it.

Mr. R. Roberts submits to us a 6d stamp of a new color the shade being a pale ultramarine. The plate is without frame line and watermarked narrow crown.

'AZORES.—Messrs. Bright & Son advise that they have just received a supply of the current Azores which are overprinted on the present issue of Portugal, and find in the consignment that the 4c and the 60c are perf. 14, while the 6, 12, 13½, 14, 20, 24, 36, 80, 90, 1es, 1.10es, 1.20es and 2 escudos are perf. 11½.

BULGARIA.—Mr. R. Roberts has shown us a copy of a 1 leva stamp of the commemorative set with a portrait in the centre but the stamp is a trifle smaller in size than heretofore. The color is blue.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.—Mr. A. H. Luck advises that he has received a copy of No. 152, the belt around the women's waist being broken in the centre. Mr. Luck is informed by his correspondent in Prague that only one copy appears on a sheet of 100 stamps. The stamp has been changed to green color since the error was discovered.

ESTHONIA.—Prof. M. Loewy sends us a copy of the new 10m blue stamp mentioned in a recent issue imperforate, with perforation 13½.

IRISH FREE STATE.—Stamp Collecting states that the 2½, 4 and 9d values of the current set of provisionals are to be overprinted in red and will be on sale April 1.

If you have a collection to sell, or only a few fine duplicates of the issues from 1847 to 1869, or an accumulation of the issues of 1870 to 1880, send them to us with your spot cash price and you will receive returns promptly. Just now we particularly want singles, pairs, strips of the 10c stamps of 1851 and 1857, either on or off cover, and will pay more than catalog for those we can use. [H

J. O MOORE, INC., RHEIMS, N Y.

angelo's fresco in the Sistine Chapel, executed to the order of Pope Julius II in 1508. It will appear on certain new postage stamps for the Italian Colony of Lybia, made necessary by alterations in the postal tariff."

The correct English spelling of this Italian province is Libya (Libia in Italian).

The ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Rome, was begun by Michaelangelo on May 10th, 1508, and completed on October 31st, 1512. There are twelve prophets and sybils painted on the lower part of the vaulting to the left of the altar, the Libyan Sybil grasping an open book, being the eleventh of the group.—Stamp Collecting.

RUSSIA.—Mr. Hyman Guth advises of the 2r brown of the latest type being surcharged in red for use as 5,000 roubles.

Prof. M. Loewy submits the 2r mentioned above surcharged in black in the same manner.

SAMOA.—In regard to the new pictorial set of stamps just issued Mr. R. Roberts advises that he finds the perforations are not the same on all values. The ½d, 1d, 1½d and 2d are perf. 14 all round, but the other values are 14x13½.

SALVADOR.—Mr. William M. McFarlan sends us the following information regarding a new set of stamps for this country:

1c, green, Francisco Menendez.
2c, black, Manuel Jose Arce.
5c, yellow, five mountains and sun.
6c, red, view of a celebration, with building in the background.
10c, blue, five mountains and liberty cap in a triangle.

Each stamp contains an inscription, El Salvador, Correos, Centro America.

The 1, 2 and 10 centavos are 25x21 mm., while the 5 centavos is a triangle, and the 6 centavos is 33x23 mm., rectangular in shape.

SWEDEN.—Mr. R. Roberts sends us copies of the 25o rose in the type of Scott's A20 and 1kr orange in the type of A18. Both stamps are perf. 10 vert cally.

TURKEY.—We are informed that the first definite postage stamp of the Nationalist Government of Turkey, face value 5pi, and printed in blue, shows a vignette of a Turkish soldier presenting arms. "Soliciting alms" might have been more in keeping!—Stamp Collecting.

WEIGHING GUM ON A STAMP.

You might imagine that one of the things no fellow could possibly know is the weight of gum on a postage stamp. But there you'd be wrong. The weight of gum on a postage stamp is a constant that is not only known to the officials concerned in the making of stamps, but that can be made public without violating any confidence or compromising the public interest.

The exact weight of gum on a postage stamp, if you're really anxious to know—

But wait. Do you know how postage stamps are gummed? Because if you don't it won't be so easy for you to understand how it is that the quantity of gum on one stamp can be so accurately known. And that leads back to the fact that the 10,000,000,000 or so stamps made for the Post Office Department every year by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are printed in sheets of 400, afterward divided into quarter sheets of 100, of which some 360,000 are turned out every day.

After printing and drying the sheets are taken to the gumming machines. Each machine is surmounted by a tank from which a carefully regulated stream of carefully mixed gum is fed to a pan, at one end of which the gooey liquid comes in contact with an adjustable revolving roller.

The viscosity of the gum and the temperature at which the operation is performed have been worked out to minute fractional standards, and the roller feed is so delicately controlled that the experts in charge of the work always succeed in spreading exactly 26 pounds of the adhesive on every 1,000 sheets.

One thousand sheets, as we have seen, make 400,000 stamps, so it is perfectly easy to calculate that the weight of gum on one stamp is the 400,000th part of 26 pounds. And there you are, in case anybody asks you! Of course you can work it out into decimal fractions of ounces, drams or what not, if you think it would make you feel any better.

After being gummed the sheets pass into a tunnel in which the temperature is kept at 130 degrees. It is seventy-five feet long, and the stamps take just a minute and a half to traverse it. When they reach its other end they are nice and dry and ready for the perforating room.—N. Y. Sun.

WESTERN STAMP CO., 308 LEFLANG BUILDING, OMAHA, NEB

THE MARKET IN MODERN COLONIALS.

Collectors of modern issues frequently make the mistake of working by one catalogue only, and thus get rather a one sided and often inaccurate idea of their stamp values, especially when editions are issued at less frequent intervals than one year.

It is enlightening to consult catalogues published in other countries also, when possible, and the two of most general service are Yvert & Tellier in French francs, and Scott in American dollars; but the Weka catalogue being priced in Swiss (gold) francs is very reliable and unaffected by exchange rates.

Some collectors have the idea that the "true value" of a stamp is obtained by dividing its catalogue value by some figure such as 2 or 3, but this is often very far from the truth, as if correct the large dealer, who goes to the trouble of printing so expensive a price list, would do very little business, especially as this list or catalogue is generally sold at under cost price. At the same time there is probably no market, outside of stamps, where so wide variations in prices occur amongst the various dealers, and this is rather to be regretted as it causes instability and lack of confidence amongst collectors. Possibly it is caused by too many amateur dealers who do not always know the value of their goods but the remedy is, to a large extent, in the hand of collectors themselves by patronising the well established and better known dealer who has his reputation at stake, and who will always be available for future enquiries.

Modern Rhodesians.—One of the most popular of the African Colonies is Rhodesia, whose modern stamps are always in demand and which are specially to the fore in view of the coming change in government in that country. The King George issues have provided plenty of variety with the various dies and perforations, whilst the shades are also worthy of study. Many of the issues, which have been on sale in London at the Company's office, are still quite frequent in unused state, but a number of the higher values to £1 are really scarce in fine used condition, notably in the King and Queen issue, where all values above 2/6 are particularly desirable thus, and well worth acquiring at present prices.

High Values.—There is an unfortunate tendency for the smaller Colonies to issue the longest sets, which when judged by the number postally used, cannot be really necessary, especially the higher values. When we consider that Canada, one of the largest Dominions, manages with 50c or 2/6 as its highest denomination the need for £1 duties in St. Vincent, Falkland Is. or St. Kitts-Nevis does not seem very apparent, and as what little demand exists is almost entirely fiscal, there is a tendency for collectors to omit such stamps and confine themselves to the lower values say 5/- face.

Irish Varieties.—The issue of the Provisional stamps has been one most interesting philatelic events cent years, and although in view quantities overprinted (the first totalled £250,000 face) and stocks b up by collectors unused copies a likely to be rare, there are varieties as the inverted overprint, discover the 2d which will be in much dema the specialist. Another interesting to collect are copies used on the day of issue, which are of histor portance. It is also to be remarke there are two settings of the ove on the lower values, and although at present are confined to certai nominations, they may be reversed sued and although his valuations are a good deal too high, for modern issues, where the majority are not destroyed, it is instructive to compare figures for some which show curious discrepancies due to certain stamps being under-valued or less popular. Thus we have:—

	No. Issued.	Cat. Price.
Cayman Is.: 1907, ½d on 1d	4,800	12/6
Do., 1917, 1½d on 2½d War Local	25,000	20/–
Do., 1907, 5/– salmon	2,000	50/–
Bushire: 6ch on Persia	4,050	50/–
Trinidad: 4d on white back	10,000	5/–
Baghdad: ¼ on 5pa	1,215	£12
Cyprus: 1904, 45 pi, S. C. A.	2,640	25/–
Lagos: 1904. 2/6 S. C. A.	1,600	£4

These figures show that some of the War Issues are priced a good deal higher than earlier stamps of similar rarity.

Scarce "Dues."—In view of the probable early abolition of the British Protectorate over Egypt, the stamps of this country are of topical interest, and some of the latest issues are likely to be scarce. Two of these are the 2M green, Postage, and 10M Due stamp in blue, both with new watermark. The latter stamp was first stated to consist of only 2,000 copies, but this has since been shown to be inaccurate as two British firms alone imported this number between them. It is quite a good stamp however, and although many collectors do not take "Dues" it will probably be worth about twenty times face.

Another issue missing from many collections is the first Postage Due set of Fiji, a local production of 1917, listed in Scott but not in Gibbons. It is well worth buying if obtainable at a reasonable quotation, as no British dealers appear to have secured any large supply when first issued.—Philatelic Magazine.

THE MAGIC OF LITTLE TWO-CENT RED.

By JOEL H. DU BOSE.

Our little two-cent red sticker will carry a message for us to any point within the bounds of the continental U. S.; to any of our possessions; to our office in Shanghai, to Canada, Mexico, Cuba, Panama, and some other countries of Central America and South America; to England, New Zealand and some others of the British colonies; also, to any point at which our soldiers are stationed in times of war or of occupation; in short to probably one-half the post offices in the world. Then who will say, this little sticker is not a thing of magic.

"Ah," answers Mr. Growl, "Our little one-cent sticker will do the same service at one-half the price, provided only your message is printed; nay, will carry your message not only to the points you mention, but to every post office on this terrestrial globe".

True, Mr. Growl; but the message which the little one-cent green carries is the identical counterpart of 100, 1,000, 10,000 or maybe 100,000 messages sent out to an equal number of other individuals; while our beloved two-cent sticker is supposed to carry one certain message to one certain individual. When you receive the former the chances are it goes instanter into the waste basket without even being read; while the latter is always greeted with a hearty welcome and its contents devoured at once with much gusto.

Mail order people all over the country are fast waking up to this difference of treatment and are beginning to work the "rabbit foot" on our little two-cent red; posting their circular matter under seal and franking it with this little two-cent red; thus paying Uncle Sam double price for the service, but through the magic of this little two-cent red, reaping not only double, but ten, twenty; nay, oftentimes one hundred-fold better results.

Hail, then, thou beloved little two-cent red; continue to wield thy magic wand; country after country is being added to thy service list by thine admirers; soon wilt thou hold in thy grasp the world entire. Truly art thou a thing of wonder.

THEODORE CHAMPIO

$32,077 FOR A ONE-CENT STAMP.

It is said that two wealthy Americans were on the same steamer rushing to Paris to bid for the treasures of the Baron Ferrari stamp collection, put up at auction in Paris, and with a special desire to secure the one-cent British Guiana stamp of 1856, black on carmine, which was the chief of these treasures. Whether either of them got it the cabled news does not indicate. The purchaser was a dealer named Griebert, and refused to disclose his principal or principals. The price paid was 300,000 francs, plus 52,500 francs tax to the government. This made the cost about $32,077 in our money.

Philately is "caviare to the general." It is a science for specialists, who are encouraged by aristocratic enthusiasts and by the newly rich. Perhaps war fortunes easily made are responsible for its present exaggerations. The collection of Baron Ferrari de la Renautiers was willed by the Baron to the Berlin Museum when he died in 1917. France insisted on sequestering it and selling it in Paris, the amount secured to be credited to German reparations. Rumor has it that the British Government offered 11,000,000 francs for the whole collection. Possibly it has gathered in the British Guiana stamp. King George is said to be a devotee of philately. In most rare stamps, as in most common stamps, there is little of beauty and nothing of intrinsic value. And yet if those who have money can be made to desire a particular specimen, the holder of it may profit 10,000 per cent or more on his own investment. "Creating the market" is what counts.

American philatelists are much stirred up just now over a bill pending in Congress to prevent any photographic reproduction of any stamp. The collectors cannot effectively catalogue what they have without such reproduction, and without catalogues business suffers. It is claimed that the bill would in large measure destroy investment values in stamps. Hope is entertained in a compromise suggested by Senator Frelinghuysen, which would permit reproduction providing cancellation were clearly shown on every specimen.

Nothing of a commercial nature can be mentioned that is so compatible with social relations and social standing as stamp collecting for profit. The associations devoted to the science in this and other countries are made up of "the best people." Fame in the work of collection is an open sesame to circles in Europe that the average American could never penetrate otherwise. There is method in the madness of the philatelist, if madness it must be called.—Brooklyn Eagle (Editorial).

THE $12,500 BOSCAWEN.

Copyrighted by the Globe Newspaper Company, 1922.

By JAMES H. POWERS.

BOSCAWEN, N. H., April 15.—A "scrap of paper" has caused such a how-d'y-do in this town, during the past few days, that the old-timers declare nothing like it has occurred since the excitement of the Civil War days.

That "scrap of paper" isn't more than three-quarters of an inch square, but it is worth $12,500, spot cash.

It isn't even in Boscawen today—hasn't been there, either, for half a century—but Boscawen hopes and—hunts. (Maybe the brother of that fabulous "scrap" would turn up! Or the sister, or something like a near relative.)

Yet it has done strange things, this scrap of paper! It has regenerated the local interest in the history of the town, among the 1,200 odd inhabitants thereof.

It has linked Boscawen, N. H., once and for all with Paris, France and Berlin, Germany—linked 'em by cable, too, if you please.

It has caused such a wholesale cleaning of attics that every small boy and girl in Boscawen is back-weary and sore of limb; and—well, Boscawen didn't begin to know how many antiques it had, of a salable sort, until the dispatch about that "scrap of paper" drifted into town and precipitated a near revolution, and gave the Postoffice such a morsel to chew over as it has not had in a decade.

HOW IT STARTED.

The dispatch read as follows:

PARIS, April 10—When the famous Baron Ferrari stamp collection was put on sale by the French Government here today, a stranger named Geibert outbid six American stamp collectors and carried away one of the most priceless of all the stamps in the collection, a "five cents paid" stamp issued in Boscawen, N. H., in the United States, in 1846. The sum paid for the stamp, in American money, approximates $12,500. . . .

That was the "scrap of paper" item which made this little hill village gasp, and began the whole business of attic hunting, which has filled folks' heads up here with dreams of fabulous wealth, and has set even the youngsters in a flurry of thirsty-souled adventure, wherein they hope to find and spend facile fortunes on hoops, and bicycles, and the greater thinks, like the gumdrops at the "F-F store."

"Supposin'," says every Boscawenian to his fellow, "supposin' you found one of them stamps, what would you do."

WHERE IS BOSCAWEN.

Boscawen, as all the world knows, is perched on a narrow plateau which overhangs the Merrimac River and is crowded in, from the rear, by the foothills. To get from the depot to the town itself, one has to try out his hill-climbing power. After you get up past the old boot mill—closed these many years—and head toward the Postoffice, a few rods up the street, you begin to understand Boscawen more intimately.

Folks come to the windows and watch your passage. Three or four youngsters rolling hoops pause for a moment to give you due inspection. An old farm carryall, groaning under protest of a cargo of seven, takes its jogging way along the muddy street behind a heavy-booted, amazed-looking, brown nag, which, seemingly, pays no attention at all to the urgings of the driver's (probably habitual) "git along".

Over all, the vast peace of the open country, a hush which seems to smite

WEBSTER WAS POSTMASTER.

(Special to the Globe)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15—The postmaster at Boscawen, N. H., during whose tenure of office the "paid five cents" stamp, recently sold for more than $12,000 in Paris was issued, was Worcester Webster, according to the records of the United States Postoffice Department. Webster held the office in the little New Hampshire town from Feb. 5, 1841, to Jan. 15, 1852.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS

New Order enclosed. I "cleaned up" on last packet I received from you (1000 variety) already realizing more than I paid after securing 400 varieties for myself.—B. Buchanan, Liverpool, Ohio.

Well satisfied with 2000 packet. Secured 900 stamps for my collection, selling the rest to my friends. Have already cleared over $5.00.—A. Wahlberg, Oakland, Calif.

Very much pleased with 1000 packet. Order enclosed for a 2000. I was greatly surprised at the quality of the stamps in the packet.—F. C. Elmes, Berwick, Pa.

Use bonds sent as payment for 10,000 variety packet. The packet proved highly satisfactory as a basis for a general collection.—F. M. Bigelow, Chicago, Ill.

Received 1000 packet some days ago and have had a fine time looking them over. I am just breaking up two beautiful collections recently purchased in single copies and blocks of 4. The 20th Century is practically complete and many, many rare blocks in the 19th Century.
Mr. Collector send me your want list.

H. F. COLMAN SECOND NATIONAL BANK BLDG., WASHINGTON, D. C.

one like a blow, after the squeakings of the train and the remembered rumble and clatter of the city. The very robins sing a quiet, glad sort of music out of the thickets, and the song sparrows piping along Boscawen's littered fence rails are cheerfully content in an obviously tremendous world which, till this week, had passed by unheeding. A small, scattered, easy-going sort of town, filled with old men—"the young folks live at a faster clip than we used to, a couple o' decades ago, an' so they go away," the postmaster tells you—a town which seems to be outlandishly perked up in all this excitement over a stamp.

You go into the Postoffice and general store—the same Postoffice where the unsuspecting creator of all this 20th-century excitement issued the stamp, back in 1846.

There is silence among the half-dozen gray-haired men who are waiting for the mail to be sorted, a silence until you mention the stamp. Then everybody draws near and manifests interest of the keenest sort.

"I've been all through the history of the town", Fred James, the postmaster tells you, "looking for the name of the postmaster who issued that stamp. Can't find him, though. Too bad. Yes, sir, everybody up here is lookin' for copies of it. Turnin' attics and cellars and barn lofts inside out these past few days.

"It seems hardly likely, does it. One stamp worth $12,500. But it's so, I guess. I had a fellow write me from Philadelphia a good many weeks ago about that stamp. He wanted to know if we had any more of them and he sent me a picture of the stamp out of a catalog. It doesn't look worth a cent. That was weeks and weeks before they sold it in Paris, though. I didn't have any idea it was worth so much then. It looks as though Boscawen was going to be put on the map pretty much, before this thing gets through."

"Did the Government run the mails then?"

"Why, I guess so. Think it was about 25 years after they took over the mails that stamp was issued here. Just about. There's nothin' in the history of the town about the stamp, though."

"How did it happen that the postmaster issued a stamp here when the Government was running the postal business?"

"I had an idea that the Government gave postmasters authority to issue 'em if they wanted to", he answered. 'But it doesn't look as if we'd find any more of 'em in Boscawen (sadly). I suppose folks did with 'em then what folks do with old stamps nowadays. They probably used 'em and then thought 'em no use and destroyed 'em.

"Everybody's lookin'. Been lookin' for a week. Huntin' in attics and everywhere for more. I called up everybody I knew who had curios and stamps and told 'em, but no more stamps turned up. One of the funny things is that the hunt is turnin' up all sorts of antiques folks didn't know they owned, furniture, and old glassware and dishes and all sorts of things. There's more antiques in Boscawen this minute than Boscawen ever expected it had in all its life. Just think of that stamp, though, goin' from here to Europe to that German fellow. He was a wiseacre, all right, that fellow. $12,500! ! ! Good night!"

THE OTHER DANIEL.

I tried to jog his memory about old-time postmasters, but he didn't remember beyond his own youth. "Charles E. Chadwick had the job for about 30 years, when I was a boy. I remember him. Then there was Charles W. Carter. He was a Democrat under Cleveland. I got it after he went out. Say, wait a minute; maybe M's Kenneval could tell you somethin'. She's old man Fulsom's daughter, you know, and he collected stamps and curios here for years before he died. They offered him as much as $20,000 for his stuff once, but he refused. M's Kenneval's been lookin' through his collection to see if there's any of those old stamps in it. She couldn't find any, but maybe she'll remember if her father remembered hearin' who was postmaster when the stamp was issued."

He rang on the phone, but the Kennevals were not at home.

"I heard old Dan'l Webster tell about them times", cut in George Watson, who was listening to the discussion with interest. George is more than 70 years old, and his sparse white hair and bent form is belied by the sharp twinkle of his shrewd eyes.

"Dan'l was a relative of the other Dan'l," said he, "the great Dan'l, you know?"

"The God-like Daniel?" I inquired.

"That's him. Well, Dan'l I was tellin' of was a relative of his, an' his father, old Eliphalet, used to be postmaster, an' Dan'l helped round the place. It was in them days that folks used to have to pay for letters and get 'paid stamps' to send 'em.

"Webster died some 10 years ago, an' he was an old man then, the old doctor was. His father used to live side of the Postoffice, so I suppose he must have been postmaster. Postoffice was here when I was a boy, an' its been here off an' on ever since. Mostly on."

"That stamp you talk about, young man, was like the stamps I remember as a boy.

"We used to have to pay all the way from 5 to 20 cents to send a letter, in them days. Postage came so high that folks used to write on the letter so's you couldn't read it unless you held it up to the light. The letter didn't look like it was very long and so they was able to cheat the mails that way. You paid by the length of the letter. That five-cent paid stamp was for a single letter. Double ones cost more. Just think of that, now! A stamp sold here in this Postoffice f'r five cents years ago, costin' $12,500 in Paris today! ! !

"Well, they used to cheat the Gov'ment then like they do now anyway. That ain't changed any. I remember another way they used to cheat was to . . ."

DEACON RAYMOND.

"I got it", said the postmaster. "You go over next door and see Deacon Raymond, Edgerton Raymond. He'll know somethin' about this stamp business. He's interested, an' he's one of the oldest men in town and remembers things pretty sharp."

"Another way that they used to cheat the Government them days was—" went on Mr. Watson.

But here Joe Stone, chief of police, chief of the Fire department, janitor of the school, truant officer and chief mail carrier of Boscawen, came in.

"Know if anybody's got hold of any of them stamps yet, Joe?" queried one of the bystanders.

Joe hadn't heard, though he knew everybody was on the trail and had been for days. He and his assistant, Mr. Fairbanks, were frank in declaring, however, that they'd like to lay their hands on just one stamp apiece.

It might be bothersome if many of them were found as a result of the search which Boscawen women were making, the chief of police thought, for that might attract all sorts of people to the town, and you never could tell what sorts of people might be included in any such collection.

I went over to see Deacon Raymond. The deacon is a hearty, magnificent figure of a man, with clear eyes and a long white beard and a powerful frame, powerful even now, after his 80th year has passed him by. He, too, had heard all about the stamp. (Everybody in Boscawen has had no other topic of discussion for five days).

"What I don't see", said Mr. Raymond, who once served in the New Hampshire Legislature, "what I'm tryin' to see is how any stamp could be worth that much money; $12,500 is a lot of money. I don't see how that stamp could be worth so much."

I spoke of millionaire collectors and their willingness to pay high prices to get what they wanted. Deacon Raymond shook his head. "It seems impossible. It has seemed that way since I first heard of the story.

"I came to this town in 1850, as a boy, and I remember the torchlight processions they used to have then. Politics ran high, my boy, back in the 1850s. Things were pretty hot. The postmaster used to be a Democrat here one term and a Republican the next. It was nip and tuck, and nobody stayed in office here long. When the Republicans got in they cleaned out every Democrat from the top down and the postmaster would have had to go. And it was the same when the Democrats got in.

"So I don't remember who was postmaster when that stamp came out. There must be a record of him somewhere, but I don't know where, unless maybe in the town library. That stamp has got folks pretty much excited up here, though they don't get so worked up as they used to, gone 60 years. But I guess the hunt won't turn up any more of 'em. It seems likely, though, that he issued more of them than just one, doesn't it?"

Deacon Raymond delved into town history for me and declared that there are 40 ways of spelling the name of the town. "I just got a list of the ways you can spell it last week," he declared.

Back in the Postoffice Postmaster Fred James was turning the leaves of a huge, fat, brown-covered book. "I got the history of the town," he explained. "You might want to see in it that Boscawen is the only town of that name in the world, and that it was named after Lord Boscawen, who lived in England, though he never came here, so far as I can learn."

"I got another woman who is huntin' for the stamp," he went on. "I called her. It's Lizzie Choate, who lives up the road a piece. She's got one—"

I jumped. "Grab your camera", I hollered to the photographer. "Talk about luck."

"Wait a minute", said Mr. James. "She's got one and she don't know what it's worth."

"Is there an automobile handy? Where does she live?" I demanded.

"About five miles up the road. You can't get up there, though. Roads are too bad. Floods and everythin'. Ask the carrier."

"But the stamp. You say she has one of those stamps." His calmness failed to pacify me in my excitement.

"It's a three-cent paid stamp, issued in 1858", he explained. "She is wonderin' what it's worth."

I recovered.

And while the reaction was setting in Fred went on to tell me about Daniel Webster—the Daniel Webster—and how he lived for three years in Boscawen and studied there and knew folks.

"Another way they used to cheat the Government in them days—" George Watson was leaning against the candy counter. "They used to draw pictures instead of writing, like this: They'd put a picture of the children an' write after it, 'are well.' An', of course, everybody knew that meant 'the children are well. It was just as easy as rollin' off a log. I remember once—"

Two animated young damsels had arrived on the scene, each one of them about as tall as a tall drink of water.

"What would you do if you found a stamp worth $12,500?" we asked Justine Pillsbury, aged 2½ and a descendant of the famous Webster family. She looked at us, round-eyed and speculative. Her sidekick, however, was not so deliberate. Miss Barbara Fairbanks, aged 3, daughter of the assistant chief of police, answered for her.

"We'd buy hoops, wouldn't we, Justine?" she offered.

"Ayuh, uhuh!" gulped Justine.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR.

Man must have a hobby—a sort of safety valve through which he may work off his surplus enthusiasm, something to sort of take his mind off the heavier things of the world, a recreation, perhaps, in which he may find rest and pleasure even though his faculties trot right along. For some it's golf; for others it's the camera; while others collect coins or old books.

And there's the stamp collector, who, while piling up a store of valuable curios in the way of little paper stickers used by various countries for the purpose of forwarding mail, gets a valuable education in geography, watermarks, perforations, cancellations, ornithology, zoology and half a dozen other "ologies".

It's an interesting hobby and the deeper into it one goes the more interesting it becomes. It's a big man's hobby, as well as a little one's, for while there are stamps valued at a few cents, there are others, like the one penny Mauritius of 1847, which is so valuable that it is not even catalogued, and of which only ten are known to be in existence, and the two cent Hawaiian of 1851, catalogued at $5,000.

There are professors at Michigan Agricultural College who spend their spare time in adding to their stamp collections. There is one big business man in Lansing who has a collection famous throughout the entire state of Michigan, and there are "kids" in town who are devotees of the game.

It's a fascinating hobby and the "kids" take to it like a duck takes to water. And any old time the "kid" brings home a few funny looking foreign stamps and begs for a few cents with which to purchase an album, don't let him get away before placing a large O. K. on the proposition, for if there were more kid stamp collectors in the country, there would be a marked decrease in the business of our juvenile courts.—Lansing (Mich.) Capital News.

THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF BELGIUM.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

CHAPTER XI.

The 1869-81 Series.

Leopold I died at Laeken on December 10, 1865, just a few months after the new stamps bearing his portrait had made their appearance. It was decided, therefore, not to immediately replace these stamps with others bearing the effigy of the new king, Leopold II, and they remained in use about four years before a change was made.

During this interval numerous designs showing the new king's portrait were submitted to the administration by various artists and engravers. Finally the designs submitted by Mr. H. Hendrickx, a Belgian artist, were accepted as being the most suitable, and as the new Minister of Public Works, Mr. A. Jamar, decided to make a clean sweep the same artist was entrusted with the task of furnishing new designs for the low values. A Royal decree, dated November 13, 1869, authorized the issue of the new stamps, viz.:—

"LEOPOLD II, KING OF THE BELGIANS.
To all present and to come, Greeting.
Be it decreed:—
Art. 1.—Postage stamps of a new design are to be made and will be issued to the public for the purpose of franking articles transmitted by post.
Art. 2.—Of the above mentioned postage stamps those of 10 centimes and above will hear Our portrait, and those of a less value than 10 centimes shall bear the arms of the kingdom.
Art. 3.—Our Minister of Public Works shall determine the values and colors of these stamps, as well as the dates when they shall be brought into use.
Art. 4.—The postage stamps issued by authority of Our decree of September 25, 1865, may be used concurrently with those of the new type until a date to be fixed later by our Minister of Public Works, who will also fix the date until which they may be exchanged, and who will also take all the steps necessary for the execution of this decree.
Brussels, November 13, 1869,
(Signed) LEOPOLD."

On the following day a ministerial decree was issued stating that the new 1c and 10c stamps would be placed in circulation next day, i. e., the 15th of November. On December 12th, a further decree was published announcing that the new 2c, 8c and 20c stamps would be issued on January 1st, 1870, the 5c and 30c on March 1st, and the 40c and 1 franc on April 1st.

The only entirely new denomination was the 8 centimes which value was to have been included in the series of 1866-7 as explained in the last chapter. A 6 centimes stamp, in carmine, was also to have been issued but apparently it was found that the use for a stamp of this demonination would be so restricted as to make it more or less unnecessary and it never got beyond the essay stage.

In 1874, Belgium, like most other countries, became a signatory to the Universal Postal Union and the uniform tariff agreed to for international correspondence made a 25 centimes value necessary. This new value was issued in 1875, together with a 50 centimes stamp for letters of double-weight, the two stamps being authorised by the issue of the usual decree, viz.:—

"THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS.
In view of the treaty, dealing with the formation of a General Union of Posts, which was signed at Berne on October 9, 1874, and was ratified by the law of March 1, 1875, and in particular of paragraphs 2 and 3 of the said treaty:
And in pursuance of the Royal Decree of November 13, 1869, authorizing the Minister of Public Works to fix the values and colors of postage stamps, and also the dates of their issue:
And in pursuance of the Royal Decree of May 10, 1875, fixing the tariff in Belgium on correspondence carried abroad by the post, in accordance with the Treaty of Berne;
BE IT DECREED:—
On and after July 1st next, the public will be able to procure 25 and 50 centimes postage stamps . . . . the colors to be as follows:—
25 centimes stamp, yellow.
50 centimes stamp, grey.
BRUSSELS, June 7, 1875.
(Signed) A. BEERNAERT."

Less than a year later it was found that there was need of a stamp with greater facial value than 1 franc to obviate the necessity of using a number of stamps in making up the postage on bulky packets. Particularly in the case of insured packets was a stamp of higher denomination necessary and it was finally decided to issue a 5 francs stamp. This was placed on sale on April 1st, 1878, and was preceded by some official instructions which we reproduce:—

"No. 1508.
POST OFFICE, No. 728. TELEGRAPH DEPT. No. 508.
Concerning the Issue of a 5 Franc Stamp.
March 14th, 1878.
By virtue of a Ministerial Decree, which is given below, the issue of a 5 franc stamp has been authorised for April 1st, next.
As the demand for this stamp will be limited, only offices of first, second, third and fourth class will be provided with them, and such offices will receive their first supply during this month.
Should these stamps be asked for at any other offices, they should be procured by the officer in charge from the nearest office stocking them, and should be paid for in cash; this only if the stamps required cannot conveniently be requisitioned at the usual time when stamps are ordered: should these stamps be required especially urgently at any office where they are not stocked, but where it would appear that the needs of the service are such that they should be, they may be specially requisitioned.
Should any office receive a manifestly insufficient supply it is hardly necessary to say that more should be requisitioned immediately.
In the book of account, numbered B 3, the 5 franc stamp should be entered in one of the spare columns provided for the purpose.
The Director-General,
(Signed) VINCHENT.

DECREE
THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS.
In pursuance of the Royal Decree of November 13th, 1869, authorizing the Minister of Public Works to fix the value, color and date of issue of postage stamps:—
BE IT DECREED
A 5 franc postage stamp, red-brown in color, will be issued to the general public on and after April 1 next.
BRUSSELS, March 6th, 1878.
(Signed) A. BEERNAERT."

The above described three stamps, on account of the later date at which they were issued, are usually listed as a separate series in the catalogues. But the designs are similar to those of the earlier issued denominations, they were drawn and the dies engraved by the same artist and engraver respectively, and as they are undoubtedly supplementary values of the same series, they are best dealt with here.

The values 1c, 2c, 5c and 8c were intended for the prepayment of newspapers, printed articles, etc., and these are all somewhat similar in design. They fall naturally into two pairs of which the 1c and 2c are very much alike and again the 5c and 8c are almost precisely the same. In the case of the 1c and 2c the Belgian arms are shown in the upper part of the design, surmounting the central oval. The arms consist of a lion rampant on a small circle of solid

BURGER & CO.
Nassau St., NEW YORK

... with a crown above, royal emblems projecting from the sides, and the national motto "L'UNION FAIT LA FORCE" (Union is Strength) on a ribbon scroll below. The last letter of the motto is much cramped and the two former letters of FAIT are obliterated by a medal ornament hanging from below the lion. Below the central oval is the Belgian lion reclining on a tablet which bears the simple inscription "BELGIQUE". In the oval itself are numerals denoting the value on a solid ground with "CENTIME (S)" below, part of these letters being obliterated by the lion's head. At each side of the upper portion of the oval are laurel and palm leaves at left and right respectively, while in the upper corners are ornaments from which are hanging formally disposed fruit and foliage.

That separate dies were engraved is proved by many small differences; notably the details in the crown, the division of the letters in the motto, and the shading of the large lion.

The 5c and 8c follow the general design of the others and have the same details though often differently disposed. The name "BELGIQUE" is in white letters on a solid ground, the ornaments at each side of the name and the floral background all rest on elaborate pillars. Again there are small differences between each showing they were from entirely different dies. It will be noted that while the name of the country is now shown for the first time, the word CENTIMES appearing in the preceding issues has been eliminated.

The designs of the values from 10 centimes to 5 francs inclusive all have one point in common—the portrait of King Leopold facing to left, appears on a background of solid color. Otherwise they are all quite dissimilar both as regards the borders and inscriptions. Even the portrait is concerned they are not exactly alike. The 10c, 20, 30, 40c and 1fr are somewhat similar and the 25c, 50c and 5fr are also a litttle alike but a careful study shows that for every value an entirely distinct design was engraved. It is hardly necessary to enter into a detailed description of the different designs as the accompanying illustrations are more adequate than any written description could be. It is interesting to note, however, how very different they are in some respects. One would expect to find a similarity in the inscriptions at any rate, but the artist seems to have exercised his ingenuity to avoid repetition of even the most prosaic particulars. The 10c, 30c and 40c show numerals of value only—nothing to indicate whether centimes or francs—and while the 10c shows only the name of the country, the 30c also has "POSTES" and the 40c elaborates the inscription to "POSTES DE BELGIQUE". The 20c shows the name and "CENTIMES" twice, while the 50c has the name of the kingdom expressed as "ROYAUME BELGIQUE".

Leopold II, Louis Philippe Marie Victor, was born in Brussels in 1835, so he was thirty years of age when he ascended the throne. He married on August 22nd, 1853, the Archduchess Marie Henriette of Austria, and by her had four children—the Duke of Brabant, who died when ten years old, Princess Louise, Princess Stephanie and Princess Clementine. The portrait on the stamps failed to give satisfaction and while contemporary writers averred it was "nothing like him" and the public set up a howl of protest, it must be conceded that the series is not unattractive. At any rate the Belgians had time to get used to them for some of the values were in use for thirteen years.

The designs, as we have already stated, were the work of a Belgian artist, M. H. Hendrickx, and the dies were engraved on wood by M. A. Doms. On the 1c, 2c, 5c, 8c, 10c, 20c, 30c, 40c and 1fr stamps the initials of both artist and engraver appear in the lower portion of the design; those of the former on the left and those of the latter on the right. These letters are in such microscopic characters that on some values they are difficult to decipher. On the other three values, the 25c, 50c and 5fr only M. Doms initials appear.

The plates presumably consisted of 300 subjects as before as the same "harrow" perforating machine continued in use, and these were made by the electrotype process. In fact, apart from the fact that the dies were engraved on wood instead of steel, the stamps were manufactured in the same manner as those of the preceding issue. They were printed in plain white paper of fairly thick substance.

Collectin's gittin' awful complex,

If yer have or haven't got 'em.

But now with such parphernalyer,
You have merely just begun.

And a watermark detector,
And a Guide to Stamp Collectin',
And the latest "price reflector".
And the dealers send you 'provals
Of some microscopic error,
Which they'll trade off for some paper—
(On which you've written "pay to bearer".)
And the stamps themselves is awful,
Makes yer wonder if yer sane.
What with criss-cross variations
In the early stamps of Spain;
And a whole slough of surcharges
Of accidental variety,
And holdups, bold and daring,
In the name of Charity.
And these modern Nicaragwan mongers
Would laugh Seebeck to scorn,
(The whole durn crew is drunk I guess),
'Cause early one fine morn
They surely thunk of a new way
To git the stamp collector's jack,
'Cause they took a bunch o' railway stickers
And surcharged 'em on the back.
And heretofore thar was me
Bein' kind o' interested
In this here Nicaragaway.
Surely funny are the ways o' humans
To surcharge 'shillin' on a penny—just for fun,
Then turn around and take a shillin'
And surcharge it for a penny one.
Modern stamp collectin's complicated,
But when all is said and done,
Though collectin's gittin' awful complex,
Gee, fellers! Ain't it fun.

The Most Detailed Catalogue of United States Postage Stamps in the World

is the claim we make for the STANLEY GIBBONS PRICED CATALOGUE OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES (Part 2), for 1922. This catalog will be a special edition for the United States, without illustrations of United States stamps, and will be ready about April 15.

Price $2.40 Post-free

The exceedingly interesting issues of the United States from 1847 to 1882 have been profoundly studied during the past few years by some of the most brilliant philatelists of the day and numerous articles have appeared in the philatelic press of America, but the publishers have hitherto failed to use this material.

As we think it is to the interest of all concerned, both collectors and the trade, we have made an attempt to write a list of these stamps more in accordance with their importance than any priced list that has hitherto appeared.

We have included a great number of types, retouches, plate varieties, shades, and paper varieties, and have priced the bulk of them at what we believe to be their current market value, most prices being based upon our own somewhat considerable stock.

If American collectors appreciate such a catalogue of their own stamps, we shall be glad if they will send us any corrections to this list, and also any suggestions for extending and improving it.

Other countries, such as France, Sicily, etc., etc., have been entirely re-written, the prices have been revised throughout, and hundreds of rarities are now priced for the first time.

We think collectors will find this the best and most accurate priced catalogue that has ever appeared. [34

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—Among all our subscribers we have no better friend than John Kay of Detroit, Mich. Every now and then he sends in the name of a new yearly subscriber from among his philatelic acquaintances in Detroit. If we had a goodly number as interested in boosting the Weekly as is Mr. Kay, we should soon attain the 10,000 mark.

—C. P.—Of the Trinidad and Tobago, 1915, Red Cross, with date 21.10.15, it is said that 100,000 were issued. The same number was also issued of the 1916, bearing the figures 19.10.16.

—Albany, N. Y., has organized a Boy Scout's Philatelic Society with some twenty members. B. F. Schmidt, 87 S. Allen St., has charge of the publicity end.

—In the Weekly of April 8 appeared a Maxwell Krause advertisement in which the headline read:—"$1.93 for 35c". This mistake was followed by a second one in the text of the advertisement. The adv. should read:—$193 for 35c". Elsewhere in this issue the firm's announcement will show the correct wording.

—It might interest you to know that on April 5th, a number of the philatelists of Colon and Cristobal, were brought together through the efforts of J. W. Coffin, Chief Clerk, Port Captain's Office Panama Canal, and to an extent by the writer, for the purpose of forming a philatelic club. We organized on the above date with sixteen members, this number has since increased considerably. We have, also, quite a number of applications for membership to be acted on. Mr. Herman Schureck was elected president of the club, Mr. Maximino Walker, vice president; Mr. J. W. Coffin, secretary and treasurer. As a name the Philatelic Society Isthmus of Panama was decided upon. That there is a great need of a Philatelic Club in this section, where there are so many collectors, is obvious.—L. J. Granie.

—We organized the Anacortes (Wash.) Philatelic Association here a month ago with a membership of fifteen, and have some very interesting meetings. The membership consists of about thirteen boys and two girls, being mostly among the Boy and Girl Scouts. We are planning to get a set of card lectures from the Stanley Gibbons, Ltd., which include cards showing the different stamps and a talk on them.—Mrs. C. L. Dwelley.

—The Jax Novelty Co., whose ads have been seen in our columns in the past, have placed on the market an ingenious substitute for the glue pot. It is called the "gloo-pen", a novel mechanical mucilage fountain. Note the announcement elsewhere.

EDITORIAL.

Abraham—A good many months ago, a writer in this paper made the suggestion, as accompanying a fine picture of President Lincoln that we printed, that a fourteen cent stamp be added to our current set and that it bear the likeness of Lincoln. Later, Mr. Aug. Dietz of Richmond, Virginia, whose forthcoming book on the Confederacy and its stamps will be a most important production, sent us another historical picture, from the other side of the Mason and Dixon line, illustrating an interesting philatelically historical side-piece to that of "the best friend the South ever had." The picture that Mr. Dietz sent is one of a photograph from which Charles Ludwig, of Hoyer and Ludwig, lithographers, Richmond, Virginia, made his drawing on stone for the first postage stamps of the Confederacy, the five cent green of 1861. Mr. Dietz says that the photograph is preserved in the Confederate Museum, (White House of the Confederacy) in Richmond. "President Davis is said to have 'sat' for this photograph for that purpose; and a careful comparison will show how well Ludwig 'caught' the likeness. 'By special dispensation', I was permitted to use this relic and the print is the exact size of the original card. The legend 'Our President' appears in pencil on the original." The proof that we had made of the picture sent by Mr. Dietz shows up very well and we hope that it will be almost as satisfactory when presented here.

Abuse—In an issue of the Plate-Printer, a Washington publication that is official journal of the Plate Printer's union, the statement appears in the course of an article applauding the appointment of Louis A. Hill as the new director of the bureau of printing and engraving that the country is "flooded from coast to coast" with many counterfeit issues of government securities, including postage stamps and internal revenue stamps. That is coming it rather strong, but never fear, the philatelic avengers will soon pick up the trail and run down the forgeries with their trusty pocket glasses.

Argued—The following remarks taken from a letter received from Mr. Dwight C. Rawlings, Chicago, will be followed with interest: "You have touched upon a subject that is in the minds of many collectors and especially of the one who finds that he is exceeding his original appropriation of money for stamps, as he becomes more intent upon adding to his collection. I think that it is advisable to speak frankly on the question and though you have said at different times in the past that no one should buy more stamps than one can afford to buy, that generality is not sufficient to cover the investment question as relating to the propriety of converting funds that are in securities, into stamps. I should like you to encourage an open discussion on the subject as its importance to me seems o be considerable. As it is admitted that marketability is so large a factor in realizing on stamps, what efforts are being made to improve conditions in this regard? Will it not be through the instrumentality of collectors that matters will mend?"

Added—In referring to the questions of Mr. Rawlings, we may answer them hopefully. The steady increase in the number of dealers of the better class expands the market for collections, and the competition created by the dealers themselves in acquiring desirable stock has a tendency to favor the seller. The sales departments of responsible societies give an outlet but the auction sale of the established dealer is regarded as the readiest means to cash in on stamps. A bureau such as the American Philatelic Society is establishing is a decided step progressively, even though it is to handle stamp effects after the death of the collector. We suppose that this committee is the result of the efforts of collectors to meet a condition that caused the stamp investor some concern. What we are aiming at is to so broaden the popularity of philately as to make it a standard pursuit or profession in the estimation of the non-collecting public. When stamp collecting is regarded not as a thing apart but as segment of everyday life, then the market for stamps will be broad and buoyant to the advantage of all who have to do with them.

Assigned—We are informed that the suit instituted by Mr. John A. Klemann of New York, against Mr. George H. Grinnell of Los Angeles, California, arising from the sale of certain Hawaiian missionaries, has been placed on the court docket at Los Angeles, California, for May 31st, 1922. This celebrated case has attracted wide-spread attention, involving as it does the considerable amount of sixty-five thousand dollars. After a postponement of the trial from the date set originally, it is likely that the hearing will be begun on the date mentioned. The question of the genuineness of the stamps will be one of the important points for settlement and it is anticipated that the proceedings will be of absorbing interest. It is likely that both parties to the controversy will be armed legally to the teeth and that there will be numerous witnesses. All comment is reserved, of course, in so far as any individual opinions are concerned while the case is in the shadow of the court.

Advised—A reader writes to say that the reference to the name of Berger-Levrault of Strasbourg, as the publisher of the first list of postage stamps reminds him that M. Berger-Levrault died at Nancy, France, in 1903, he having been born in 1826. Consequently, he was thirty-five years old when he printed by "autographic lithography" his twelve page list of stamps in September, 1861. The third edition of the catalogue, and this time consisting of sixteen pages, was printed from type in June, 1862. François George Berger-Levrault was really an amateur and published his list merely to impart information and give a substance to the pursuit in which he was so deeply interested. In fact, so early as in June, 1863, he published a list of stamps that he wanted to buy; it was printed in English. It was at the close of the '60's when his publishing activities ceased. "I learn that M. Berger-Levrault did not continue his interest in stamps as he grew older but known that he exchanged letters collectors in this country in the e days and Mr. C. H. Mekeel at one corresponded with him. Too recognition cannot be given this worker in the field and I am glad you have referred to him as one work is to be lauded." We are gla say that a copy of this first list re in one of our philatelic libraries in country.

A PHILATELIC LIBRARY.

By W. S. GARNER.

I believe that every local stamp organization should have a library, run in a systematic manner, so that each member can have access to it and increase his knowledge along philatelic lines, whether he is a general collector or a specialist.

The society should subscribe for all worth-while stamp magazines, whether weekly, semi-monthly or monthly and a card index should be made of all leading articles for ready reference, giving the subject of the article, the author, magazine, date of publication, volume number and serial number. In addition, I would request that each member be on the lookout for articles published in the daily press and other magazines not of a philatelic nature, with a suggestion that such articles be cut out and turned over to the librarian, to be mounted in a scrap book and card indexed, so they can be read by the various members of the society with both profit and pleasure.

Each society should purchase all good hand books, such as the Severn-Wylie-Jewett publications; the Stanley Gibbon's U. S. Library Volumes I to V, covering U. S. stamps from 1847 to date, including Departments, dues, etc.; the Boston Book on U. S. Revenues and any other books which have been published on philatelic subjects, whether obsolete or in current use, a list of which can easily be secured at any large public library.

All of this would lead to a fund of information, which would be of incalculable value to each member of the society and might have a stimulating effect in encouraging members who have specialized on countries to write articles which could later be incorporated into handbooks of countries which now have none.

Instead of merely being collectors, the members of each society would learn that there is more to stamp collecting than the possession of such stamps as strike their fancy and would increase their knowledge many-fold and their enthusiasm along philatelic lines would interest others who are not now collectors and doubtless increase the number of collectors and also the membership of the local as well as the national societies.

MAJOR C. S. HAMILTON, Q. M. C.

Major Hamilton, whose picture appeared in the WEEKLY for April 15, is a long-time philatelist. He was born in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1882, and commenced collecting ten years later. From 1905 to 1907, he specialized in Philippines and later changed to 20th century British Colonials. From 1913 to date, he has been specializing in Mexican Revolutionary issues.

Major Hamilton entered the army as Second Lieutenant in 1902, was promoted to Captain in 1916, Lt. Col. U. S. Army in 1918, and Major in the regular army July 1, 1920.

Our soldier philatelist is also possessed of the literary talent and we have already printed several productions from his pen. We are hopeful that in the near future something pretentious in character dealing with the Mexican Revolutionary stamps may be seen in the WEEKLY.

THE TORREON SURCHARGE.

By MAJOR CHAS. W. ELLIOTT.

As a Mexican specialist I was much interested in the article by Major Hamilton, printed in your issue of April 15th, on the "Victoria de Torreon" surcharges. I am inclined to doubt the accuracy of Major Hamilton's estimates of the numbers printed of these surcharges, as I believe there to have been more than he indicates. There is no doubt whatever that the stamps were originally issued at Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, and not at Torreon or any other place. They were, however, available for use at any Mexican postoffice controlled by the Constitutionalistas. I have in my collection four superb covers bearing the stamps, one postmarked at Juarez, April 4th, one at Torreon (registered), April 11th, and two from the town of Nacozari, Sonora, postmarked April 10th. All but the Juarez cover bear stamps originally obtained on April 3rd and 4th from the postoffice at Juarez and carried to the other towns and employed to frank letters written on the dates mentioned. In all cases my correspondent (the letters are all addressed to me at Galveston, Texas), took the precaution to add United States postage to the envelopes (2c) as at this time the Transitorio issue of the Constitutionalistas was not recognized by the United States postal authorities as valid and letters entering this country bearing these stamps were supposed to be marked Postage Due.

My four "Victoria de Torreon" covers are stamped as follows:—

Juarez, April 4th—One 2c, one 4c and one 4c without surcharge.

Torreon, April 11th—Two 2c and one 1c (one of the 2c has the apostrophe variety).

Nacozari, April 10th—Three 1c and one 2c.

Nacozari, April 10th—Two 4c and one 2c.

I have also one of the 1c unused. I believe that Major J. R. Jacobs, Infantry, U. S. A., another Mexican specialist, has a number of these surcharges in his collection. They are extremely scarce, especially the used variety. I have never seen any of the higher values. I agree with Major Hamilton that they are much underpriced in Scott and if any one cares to offer them at catalogue prices, I should be glad to do business with him.

"SHANGHAIED" ON SHANGHAIS.

By C. S. WATSON.

I was interested in the article of Maxwell Krause's regarding Shanghai sets. This is one in many that any reliable dealer has a proper bone of contention against. To emphasize Mr. Krause's letter, I have just received from my Shanghai correspondent advice that for some little time these stamps have been off sale and can no longer be purchased in China, because of the rapid rise of the Shanghai currency, or Mexican dollar. Formerly it was the supposition that because of the restrictions against which this stamp was placed on sale, it would be a second Guam set, and I fear some dealers bought accordingly. Out of 165 sets which we have purchased, 150 sets have been turned over at prices around $6.00, and the last consignment which we received, was bought against such a high rate of exchange that our profit was practically nothing. Fortunately, we have no quantity of these on hand so that we are not bound to suffer, but it does seem a funny thing that a set can be purchased in Washington for less than $3.00, when it can not be purchased any longer in Shanghai at a much higher price.

I sincerely think that dealers will have a right to offer Shanghai sets which came originally from the Chinese post office at one price, and those coming from Washington for Philatelic purposes at decidedly another.

COMPETITION
A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.
I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.
Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

UNITED STATES — BLUISH PAPER
The Bureau always has had difficulty in perforating our stamps correctly due to the fact that the sheets are moistened before being engraved and the paper does not always shrink uniformly throughout the sheet. Back in 1908 they experimented with a specially prepared paper with a certain percentage of rag in the hopes that such paper would not shrink. These experiments resulted in the famous 1908 series on "Bluish Rag Paper." These have always been rare and comparing the number issued with some of our other varieties, they should cataolgue much more. I can offer fine mint copies with full gum at the following prices: Only one copy of some values.

3c Deep Violet (325b)...Cat.	12.50	Net $10.00
5c Blue (327b)	40.00	32.50
6c Red Orange (328a)...	5.00	4.00

13c Blue Green (331a)...	50.00	30.00
15c Pale Ultram. (332a)	6.00	5.00

Then, too, there are two other stamps that the Bureau issued while experimenting, this time with perforations—

2c Carmine (388) .....Cat.	1.00	Net $ .60

1c Gray Green (438)	.12	.07

UNITED STATES.—Paris during the first week in April was the scene of the auction sale of the early portion of the United States stamps from the world famed collection of the late M. Ferrari de la Renotiere. I say "portion" for this small lot certainly does not constitute his entire holdings. While there are present quite a few choice pieces there are many missing that he supposedly had. Few people actually knew what he really owned for during his lifetime he hesitated to show his stamps to anyone resulting in many surmises as to what he really possessed. Those so fortunate as to view any of his treasures saw only certain portions.

From the catalogue of this sale we find illustrated on the entire covers the only known copies of the Boscawen and Lockport postmasters. Judging from their appearance, they are not in very fine condition. He has three copies of the Annapolis and they look so fresh and fine that one is almost led to believe that they were made to order. These copies are not likely to cause the Scott people to change the remarks in their catalogue that "the authenticity of this envelope has not yet been fully established".

In the way of Baltimore Buchanans, he does not begin to compare with the Gibson lot. There are two 5c and one 10c and several envelopes. The 10c is on the cover addressed to the Rev. R. H. Ball and thereby hangs a tale. The Misses Ball, principals of a small school for girls in Washington learned from one of their students that old stamps commanded premiums. Result, a hunt in the garret, the finding of this cover and its sale during the late nineties through Mr. Townsend for $3,000.00. I knew the Misses Ball quite well when I lived in Washington and a few years after this find among the papers of their father, they showed me another cover upon which there was a 10c that had been knawed off by mice with simply a piece of the figure "10" attached to the envelope by the red wafer. Only three copies of this stamp are known, the others being the Crawford copy now in New York and the Worthington copy which was owned by Mr. Gibson.

M. Ferrari had an Alexandria but this was not on the cover. The auction catalogue incorrectly states that only three copies are known, for, as a matter of fact, five are known—four on buff and one on blue. Crawford had one on cover and this is now in New York. Worthington had a buff and a blue on cover and these went to Philadelphia, Frank P. Brown acquired one when he bought the Tiffany holdings and this passed to a Boston collector and the Ferrari copy made five. The last two are off cover, the others on.

The sale included four Brattleboros and a Millbury off cover as well as several New Havens. There were exactly twenty-five St. Louis all off cover, including fourteen 5c, ten 10c and one 20c on gray lilac. As M. Ferrari was a client of the late C. H. Mekeel at the time of the Louisville find, it is supposed that many more fine St. Louis will be sold later. There were less than a dozen 5c New York, including a very fine R. H. M. A sheet and a number of singles, as well as a 5c on cover, made up the Providence postmasters. The later cover, by the way, shows the dated town postmark covering the stamp and cover, a most unusual combination.

The regular issues with few exceptions were rather weak. The most unusual item was possibly the pair of 90c 1860 imperforate. Heretofore there was some doubt as to whether a pair of this variety existed. There was also a pair of the 30c, making three such pairs known to date. There was an entire set of the 1861, August issue, but the 24c was trimmed, the 90c straight edged and some of the others not so fine. One lot, bunched all together contained a 3c, 5c and 30c grilled all over. A 15c 1869, was the only invert. There was illustrated an 1869 15c imperforate, but in this day and age we require a pair to prove anything.

I feel confident that outside of the few choice postmasters that this is simply a forerunner of finer things to come. M. Ferrari was quite partial to blocks and unusual pieces and these are evidently being held for later sale.

Speaking of unusual pieces, Mr. J. M. Bartels tells me that a used block of four of the 1869 24c, with inverted center, was owned by the late William Thorn and that he saw the block on two different occasions. It was supposed to have been in the Crawford collection, but when this was acquired a few years ago by a well known dealer, it was not among those present. It would therefore not be surprising if it should later turn up in the Ferrari collection.

Shanghai Surcharges—I have recently had the opportunity of checking up the shades of the new Shanghai surcharges, distributed through the Philatelic Stamp Agency and taken from the second printing recently despatched to China and find that these stamps can be distinguished from the first printing. The 12c and 50c, however, are really the only two values that differ sufficiently to warrant catalogue recognition. It is difficult to describe colors with sufficient exactness to enable their separation, but one having both issues together will be readily able to distinguish them by the following information.

EARLY POSTAL SERVICE IN BARBADOS.

Transcribed from "The History of Barbados" by Sir Robert H. Schomburgk (London, 1848), pp. 188-190, by LOWELL J. RAGATZ.

Public notice was given in September, 1810, that thenceforth a mail would be made up at the General Post Office in London on the second Wednesday of every month, and be forwarded by a packet to Surinam, Berbice and Demerara, to return to Great Britain by Barbados, where she was to remain twenty-four hours, touching afterwards at Martinique.

The benefit of the great invention of our century, the propelling vessels by steam, was extended to the West Indies, and a new postal arrangement in the intercourse between England and the colonies was determined upon in 1834, to the following effect, namely, that on and after January, 1835, a communication would be established every fortnight to and from the West Indies and Falmouth. The mails in consequence were despatched from England on the 3rd and 17th of every month by sailing packets to Barbados, whence they were conveyed by steamer to Jamaica; the sailing-packets calling on their way to St. Thomas at the different islands, and waiting at that harbour for the steamer from Jamaica previous to their return to Falmouth. The steamers Spitfire and *Flame*r, with the Columbia, then attached to the fleet of the West India station as an auxiliary, were appointed to this service. At that time the passage out and home was calculated as follows:

Steam vessel from Barbados to Jamaica, calling at Jacmel,	6 "
Steam remains at Jamaica,	4 "
Steam from Jamaica to St. Thomas,	5 "
Steam from St. Thomas to Falmouth,	31 "

In January, 1842, the Royal Mail Steampacket Company was established, and their splendid vessels, of 1,800 tons and 300 horse-power, commenced the mail service between Southampton and the West India Islands, performing the first voyage, nearly as above mentioned, in about sixty days. The first West India port which they make is, according to the present plan, Barbados, which they reach generally in twenty-one days.

The establishment of an inland post has been agitated for some time, and a number of documents to that effect were laid before the House of Assembly on the 15th of September, 1846, which detailed the plan of establishing an inland post, upon the understanding that a guarantee should be given by the Legislature of the island to protect the Postmaster-General against loss to the revenue. Under this condition the proposition was approved of by the Lord's Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury on the 1st of April, 1846.

According to the proposed plan, twenty messengers are to effect daily a general delivery throughout the country districts, at the rate of four-pence for each letter.

CANCELLED-TO-ORDER.

By FABIAN F. LEVY.

I am pleased to note your items regarding the "cancelled-to-order" stamp. I think that you are right in saying that they cannot be regarded as "used" copies, and certainly they are not "unused"—so just what are they?

At a recent auction sale I purchased a lot of Bahamas, advertised as "used on piece or original cover". I did not see the stamps, and am not interested in stamps on covers, and irrespective of what they would have been, I would have removed them from the piece of cover. Imagine my surprise to find that they were a queen's head (Scott's No. 30) and an Edward (No. 37), on one piece and a queen's head (No. 31), and a George (No. 53) on the other piece. Both were nicely and lightly cancelled at Nassau on the same date in 1921, both cancellations being well centered over each pair of stamps. Furthermore the pieces of paper on which they were pasted were identical in size and quality. It was certainly a disappointment to one who seeks for genuinely cancelled stamps.

$193 NORMAL PAR VALUE FOR 35c

The Austrian Crown has a normal par value of 19 3/10 cents. I have a few genuine 1000 kronen bank notes, normal par value $193 each, which I offer, while they last, for 35c each. An interesting souvenir, even though they never return to par value.

COLLECTIONS FOR SALE!

PORTUGUESE COLONIES

An excellent accumulation of 1500 different stamps from Portuguese Colonies only (no Portugal) all in excellent condition, mounted by countries in three blank books. Catalogue value will be about four hundred dollars. Included are many scarce and popuar sets such as the Vasco da Gama issues (surcharged) complete for all of the Colonies. Most of the stamps are unused and mint. The next few years will see rapid price increases in Portuguese Colonials and only a very fortunate purchase enables us to offer a collection of this merit at practically one-sixth of catalogue! As only four collections are in stock, an immediate order is advisable.

SPECIAL PRICE $67.50

TEN THOUSAND VARIETY COLLECTION

This collection embraces both 19th and 20th Century issues and covers a wide range of countries. Catalogue value is high enough to make it an attractive buy even from a dealer's standpoint. All the stamps are different and mounted in ten blank books ready for pricing or transferring. Regularly priced at $300.00 and our special quotation holds good only while present stock lasts.

PRICE $197.50

TWENTY THOUSAND VARIETY COLLECTION

An assembling which bespeaks for itself the highest amount of praise and recommendation. Twentieth Century issues are in the majority, but there are also a goodly number of 19th Century stamps both used and mint. We guarantee every stamp to be a distinct variety and the collection is entirely free from the many revenues, telegraphs, unlisted minor varieties, etc., etc., which are found in all of the "imported"packets offered for sale in this country. The same collection—plus these unwelcome varieties—is offered abroad at prices ranging from $1700.00 to $2000.00. We have only one in stock, which is priced to clear—at practically cost.

WHOLESALE APPROVAL DEPARTMENT

We have made a specialty of approval consignments to dealers for many years and during that time have established a service which is perhaps unequalled either in this country or abroad. We are prepared to make up complete stocks ranging in value from $100.00 to $5000.00 for those who wish to enter the stamp business. Our stock is comprehensive and prices are reasonable in the extreme. Let us know your requirements immediately!

THE MATTER OF INDICES.

We recently published our 1921 index and 1920 is in the hands of the printer awaiting use in our columns. We are indebted to A. H. Pike of Buffalo, N. Y., for the great pains he has taken in connection with this work. 1918 and 1919 will be covered by him in the coming months and then our publication will be completely indexed from 1901 to date.

Mr. Pike is planning to have the volume for 1922 indexed December 31, 1922, and is open to suggestions as to the scope of an index for our publication. He has in mind particularly the matter of arrangement. Communications pertinent to the subject may be addressed to Mr. Pike at 80 Grant St., Buffalo, N. Y.

EDUCATION IN STAMPS.

Stimulates Order and Neatness Among Young Collectors.

Postage stamp collecting plays a more important part than many persons recognize in the education of young collectors in habits of neatness and order. In discussing this beneficial phase of philately, Fred J. Melville, one of the best known stamp authorities of Great Britain, says in The London Telegraph that many boys who have passed under his observation as keen and intelligent collectors have acquired a love of order and symmetry which was absent from the schoolboys' collections of earlier days. They have cultivated an artistic preference for quality rather than quantity, and he cites the example of a boy scout whose album he was examining a short time ago. Turning over the pages, there was one which was disfigured by a badly damaged stamp.

"The boy saw it and promptly took it out," says Mr. Melville. "It may have been a wrench to reduce his numerical total even by one, but the boy had got the right idea and many a time I have seen a lad of 10 or 12 years turn down a proffered specimen because it was not quite perfect. Such discrimination is worth encouraging, and there are many adult collectors who would do well to acquire an equal preference for the perfect rather than be content with the second-rate specimen."

Mr. Melville takes his text on the habits of order and neatness stimulated by careful philatelic study from the introduction by the Rev. Dr. H. A. James, Principal of St. John's College, Oxford, and late headmaster of Rugby School, in a little handbook on "Stamp Issuing Countries and Their Currencies," lately published in London by Stanley Gibbons. Dr. James is a well-known collector in English philatelic circles and he calls attention to many of the educational values of stamp collecting for young people. Among these is a knowledge of geography.

"I am quite aware," he says, "that a collector, young or old, may not take the trouble to discover where a less-known country is or to find out that Antigua is not in Australia or the Cape Verde Islands in the Mediterranean. But that type of collector will get little or no intellectual gain out of stamp collecting, any more than a student of English literature who could not distinguish between the art of Shakespeare and of Sheridan, of Pope and of Walter Scott, would achieve such from his own province of study. But if the budding philatelist cares to identify on the map the place (say) of the island colonies of Great Britain or France or of the old Balkan kingdoms and their modern successors, he will learn much that is useful, much (for instance) of the rearrangement of Europe as the result of the late war."

His most important conclusion, according to Mr. Melville, is that "the study of philately will teach the value of close and accurate observation; minute distinctions of watermarks, perforation, shade of color, details of design, character of paper, and so forth, make all the differences between the common stamp and a valuable rarity. And the successful search for such differences will be found helpful in many another sphere, perhaps of a more serious kind, such as botany, entomology, and the like Indeed, there are few departments of life in which a trained power of observation is not of greater or less value to the possessor."

Dr. James emphasizes the qualification "intelligent" because the mere accumulation of stamps without some knowledge of the countries of origin, the history, and the differences of detail in the stamps collected, is not philately at all.

One cannot imagine, adds Mr. Melville, that the mere accumulation of old stamps would hold any fascination for the King or for the Lord Chancellor and the thousands of men and women of rank and distinction who find delight in the pursuit of philately.—N. Y. Times.

PRECANCEL PARAGRAPHS

By H. S. DICKEY.

Albert E. Lawrence has a 1c U. S. envelope of about 1887 issue (No. 2547) precancelled Goshen, Ind., quite a nice item I think. In fact, many other U. S. envelopes were precancelled that will finally come to light. I remember my grandmother had about a dozen precancelled U. S. entire 1c envelopes and wrappers, but as I didn't care much about common 1c U. S. envelopes, I did not save them. I recall distinctly that two of them were Ohio cities. I regret I didn't keep them.

When old timers start to comparing notes and talking stamps, the beginner can learn more from them than he can from a dozen books, especially if he keeps his eyes and ears open.

Brooklyn, N. Y., used a blue official seal precancelled down, used by the Chas. Williams Stores. (A fine item).

Two cent Rock, Ark., (up) is another rare stone.

Two cent Jefferson, Iowa, is another rare Iowa; (Iowas never have been common.)

Five cent Morton, Ill., is out in a pretty new fancy type.

Twelve cent Wheaton, S. Dakota (down) is sure a rarity.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., is out in both small and large types. Fine stuff.

Philadelphia, Pa., is now putting a period after Pa., on some of its precancels and those "dots" are sure hard to find.

Ridgeway, Pa., (up) on 9c perf. 10 looks like its O. K.

Eight cent Pine Bluff, Pa., (up) on 1912 issue are real rarities without bluffing a bit.

Nine cent Shamokin, Pa., (up) is another precancel that isn't as much of a sham as the name indicates. It's a "Darb", this is a new word I heard at the show, and I think it means that it's a dandy.

Three cent Torrington, Conn., inverted coils made me sit up and take notice.

Eight cent Rimersburg, Pa., (down) red ink, is one I'll bet Dr. Mitchell hasn't got in his world famous aggregation.

Four cent Westboro, Mass., (down) looks like a good one, as also does the one cent Westfield, Mass.

Twelve cent Wythesville, Va., (down) purple ink is another that makes your eyes brighten up a bit.

And last, but not least, here's a glad smile from "Smithville", Texas, (such is fame). Nevermore need any one ask "what's in a name", as the 3c Smithville, Texas, settles that question forever.

Shades of Napoleon, but here's a new one, i. e., 5c and 10c Napoleon, Ohio, precancels. "Git for home, Bruno".

Richmond, California, 11c is another fine one. Richmond, Ind., will have to take a back seat now, as California has her beaten on rarity.

Six cent Greenville, Ill., is another, so I guess all the "Green" folks don't live in Texas.

Seven cent Manitowac, Wis., inverted, is new to me, and let me say that a fine collection of Wisconsins are as hard to gather up as a bunch of hens' teeth.

Two cent Meadville, Pa., inverted, must be named after Gen. Meade of Civil War fame.

Three and ten cent Appleton, Wis., also four and seven cent Wausau, Wis., are rare Indians.

Try our "4 for 1 packet." Satisfaction or money back. 100 diff. For., 9c; 200 diff., 15c; 500 diff., 75c; 1000 diff., $1.98. 14 diff. Br. Cols. free to appls. G. W. WELSH, Box 212, Spring Grove, Pa. [tf*

Stefansson's occupation of Wrangell island, nominally for Great Britain and actually for Canada, is designed to make good a claim which could never rest on the mere fact of British discovery. It adds another to the many striking instances of the extension of British sovereignty by energetic subjects without the knowledge and even against the will of the colonial office. London cares nothing about Wrangell island, and Ottawa little. New Zealand was saved to Great Britain in 1839, by the spirited colonizer, Edward Gibbon Wakefield, only when the French were on the point of taking possession. In Hawaii in 1794, a council of chiefs asked for British protection, and a naval lieutenant hoisted the British flag, while in 1822, Kamechameha II confirmed the protectorate, but the British government would never acknowledge the acquisition. Tahiti, which leads in the export tonnage of South Sea novels, was discovered by the British in 1767, and a British flag hoisted, while in 1825, Queen Pomare was eager for a British protectorate; but Louis Philippe of France was allowed to take over the island. The Fiji islands all but slipped from the careless British grasp—W. T. Pritchard saved them, to the intense indignation of the colonial office. Australia for years after 1867, labored to effect British annexation of eastern New Guinea, but the British resisted until they found that the Germans had gobbled half.

Islands as Carlyle said of tools, belong to those who can use them. Under international law the mere hoisting of a flag, without continuing occupation, avails nothing.—New York Post.

DUPLICATES.

By L. H. BRIGHAM.

Every collector has more or less duplicate stamps which he has acquired in some way or other. These stamps are useless, but perhaps there are stamps among them which some collector friend lacks, and he, in turn, may have duplicates which would add to your collection. The thing to do then is to "swap stamps" with these other collectors.

Stamp collecting has no more enjoyable occupation in connection with it than "swapping stamps." The writer, even after twenty-three years of continuous collecting, gets the same enjoyment from "swapping" today as he did when a boy. If you have duplicates that others desire and they have none to give you in return, sell them the stamps they want and become a stamp dealer on a small scale. There is a lot of fun in doing this, too.

Now a word about keeping your duplicates. About as much care should be paid to keeping these properly arranged and in good condition as is paid to keeping your collection. No more discouraging situation can be imagined than to go calling on a collector friend for the purpose of swapping stamps with him and to have him bring out an old shoe or cigar box cram-jammed full of miscellaneous stamps, all mixed up in one grand, glorious lot. When the contents of the box are dumped out upon the table there is a certain fascination about going through a lot like this and seeing what one can find; but, at the same time, it is a most discouraging occupation to have to turn two-thirds of the stamps face side up in order to see what they are.

And then the "junk" mixed in with the rest of the stamps—torn stamps, soiled stamps, stamps still sticking to corners of the envelope, common one- and two-cent United States stamps, etc. All these "undesirables" detract from the appearance of the remaining "decent" stamps to such an extent that one is apt to consider that your duplicates are a sorry looking lot and scarce worth bothering with.

Sort out and throw away all of this "junk" enumerated above; classify your stamps; put the British colonies by themselves; revenue stamps in another envelope. Then, when a collector friend comes to exchange stamps with you, instead of being disappointed with what you have, he will be encouraged to look through the contents of all of these neatly arranged envelopes containing your duplicates.

If you are the possessor of an unusually large lot of exceedingly good duplicates, it is advisable to mount them up by countries or grades in some sort of a blank book or perhaps arrange them on cards or in books made up of a series of "pockets" extending across each page or card, for holding the stamps without hinging them. Either of the methods mentioned above is really the best way of keeping these stamps because: The stamps are then protected from continued handling; there is some attempt at arrangement; one can tell at a glance exactly what you have to exchange, and the stamps themselves are easily transported from place to place by simply slipping the book or cards into one's pocket. It also allows one to mark prices, catalogue numbers, etc., beneath each stamp.—The Haversack.

"TITIANS" IN STAMPS.

RARE POSTAL SPECIMENS THAT COMPARE WITH NOTABLE PAINTINGS IN VALUE.

By F. W. CRANE.

Postage stamp collecting has always been regarded as a genial hobby, excellent for schoolboys as an education in geography and national rulers, provided that hard-working fathers were not asked for too many pennies or nickels to help the youngsters fill their albums with new specimens. But since some collector paid $32,000 for what has long been recognized as the rarest stamp in the world, many of those former school lads, now perhaps helping boys of their own to fill up an album, have been wondering how much richer they might have been had their old collection not been given away or sold for a mere song.

The payment of $32,000 for a postage stamp, which is likely to stand for many years as the record price for a single stamp, is not only the biggest event in the philatelic world, but has had the effect of elevating the former schoolboy hobby to a place equal in dignity as well as financial cost with that of rare books, engravings and even paintings. The coin-collecting hobby has never furnished anything which has brought so high a price. The highest price paid for a coin, according to Thomas L. Elder, was $10,000, paid several years ago in Europe for a unique specimen of a large gold piece struck by Eucratides, ruler of the ancient Asiatic land of Bactria two hundred years or so before Christ. Mr. Elder thinks this coin is now in the Louvre. Unlike the postage stamp, this early coin has a real intrinsic value, as it contains nearly $500 worth of gold, being about the largest gold piece ever coined.

KING OF ENGLAND AS COLLECTOR.

Until the dispersal of the wonderful collection of postage stamps gathered by the late Count Philip von Ferrari, the present King of England held what might be termed the princely rank in philately of having paid the highest price for a stamp. That was in 1904 when, as Prince of Wales, he paid $7,250 for the finest known unused copy of the first Mauritius 2-penny stamp, 1847, with the words "Post Office," on one side of Queen Victoria's head instead of "Post Paid." There is a 1-penny stamp of the same issue which is almost as rare. Of these two types there are known to be about twenty-five or twenty-six copies, but several are in damaged condition.

The stamp which has just produced the philatelic sensation is an 1856 issue of British Guiana, the 1-cent value, black on magenta-colored paper. It has long been acknowledged as the rarest stamp in the world. No other copy of that value has been discovered. From the philatelic standpoint, its value is enhanced by the fact that it was a regular Government issue. For years it has been called the gem of the Ferrari collection. The new owner has the satisfaction of knowing that he possesses something which no other collector will probably ever obtain. The actual sales price was 300,000 francs, but as the French Government exacts a tax of 17½ per cent. on purchases at auction, the successful bidder had to pay 52,500 francs additional. The value of the French franc on the day of sale was 9.1 cents, making the total equivalent in United States money $32,077.50.

This British Guiana stamp was printed by Baum & Dallas of Georgetown, who also published the Official Gazette. In the center of the stamp is a fully rigged sailing ship, produced from the same block from which was printed the vessel at the head of the Shipping Intelligence in the Gazette. Above the ship is the motto, "Damus Petimus," and beneath is another Latin motto, "Que Vicissum." Framing the central design are the words, "British Guiana Postage —One Cent." All of the stamps in this 1856 issue were initialed when used and the unique one-penny copy bears the initials E. D. W. on the face of the design. The best guess made by the most enthusiastic stamp expert prior to the sale was that it might bring as much as $10,000. It was another instance of how greatly values for the rarest postage stamps have outstripped the experts' speculations, for in the first portion of

Gibbons Stamp Circular

This snappy little publication is mailed free for nothing—not even postage—once a month unless the editor goes fishing or yachting. This season of the year therefore is a good time to write for a copy. This circular is not mailed to substitutors, kid collectors, send-em-back-unregistered fiends and such like. Postcards also go straight into the waste paper basket. Serious and interested collectors would do well to send for a copy and get on the list free before we close the offer with the ten thousandth name. [H

I am just breaking up two beautiful collections recently purchased in single copies and blocks of 4. The 20th Century is practically complete and many, many rare blocks in the 19th Century.

Mr. Collector send me your want list.

H. F. COLMAN SECOND NATIONAL BANK BLDG., WASHINGTON, D. C.

the Ferrari sale last June, Fred J. Melville, the leading postage stamp authority in England, estimated that the unique pair of the first British Guiana issue, 1850—the rough-looking circular stamps, would bring 100,000 francs, whereas it sold for 210,000 francs, which with the tax added, made the price at the time equivalent to $19,049. The pair were the 2-cent variety and the fact that they were highly canceled and on the original envelope materially enhanced the value. A wealthy French tobacco manufacturer, M. Burras, was the buyer.

This 2-cent British Guiana stamp ranks high up among the scarcest known postage stamps. All of the circular 1850 issue of that country are scarce. They are of the crudest type, the design being nothing more than an irregular circle, within which are the words, "British Guiana. 2 Cents." Of the other six or eight stamps which dealers place among the rarest philatelic specimens are the 2-Penny blue Mauritius, as previously mentioned, the 2-cent blue Hawaii "Missionary" stamp, 1851, of which the finest known copy brought $14,150 in the Ferrari sale last June, and three or four of the little known Postmaster's stamps of the United States issued in 1846, one year before the first Government issue. Among these are the Postmaster issues of Boscawen, N. H.; Alexandria, Va.; Lockport, N. Y., Baltimore and one or two of the inverted centre stamps of the United States 1869 issue. Of these "error" stamps, a beautiful unused copy of the 15-cent value sold for $4,100 in the Worthington sale in this city in 1917, the highest recorded auction price for a stamp sold in America. An inverted centre of the 30-cent value, unused, sold at the same time for $3,550. For a used copy of the same value, with centre inverted, Colonel E. H. R. Green paid $1,500.

"Missionary" Stamps.

In the brief list mentioned of the rarest stamps in the world, the 2-cent Hawaii of 1851 holds a high place. It is almost unobtainable. In the same set were 5 and 13 cent values. They are more common, but a really good copy is worth fully $1,000. They have been called "Missionary" stamps because practically all of the known copies have come from letters written by the early Sandwich Island missionaries to friends in this country.

If America has lost the rarest stamp in the world in favor of the King of England, or of some other British collector, it is interesting to note that some of the choicest specimens of the early Postmasters' stamps will come back to this country. The second highest price for a single stamp in the recent Ferrari sale was $9,600, paid by Arthur Hind, a wealthy manufacturer of Utica for the only known copy of the Boscawen, N. H., issue. There is no artistic charm in the stamp, as it merely bears the words, "Paid 5 Cents." It is, however, on the original envelope and postmarked at Boscawen. The stamp is printed on bluish paper. It was issued by Worcester Webster, a relative of Daniel Webster. He was the Boscawen Postmaster in 1846. The Government had just fixed a definite letter postage of 5 and 10 cents, but failed to issue stamps until 1847. In the meanwhile, a dozen towns and cities issued stamps by the Postmaster's authority, and as the Government tacitly recognized their postal use, they posssess a genuine standing in philately. This Boscawen stamp was for some years owned by H. E. Deats, a well-known collector of New Jersey.

The Ferrari copy of the Alexandria Postmaster stamp is reported to have been sold for $6,000 to an American collector. This is one of four known copies of the 5-cent value on buff paper. About twenty-five years ago one of these copies was purchased by the State Treasurer of Maryland, Thomas L. Shryock for $800. George H. Worthington of Cleveland, who, before the dispersal of his collection had the finest collection in this country, afterward got it and he also got a second copy, paying about $2,000 for each. One of these Worthington copies is now owned by Albert H. Caspary of this city.

The rarest Alexandria stamp is a 5-cent value on blue paper, of which only one copy is known. It is now in the Henry C. Gibson collection of Philadelphia, and if offered for sale it is believed it would bring $10,000 or more. The history of the stamp is romantic and is thus described by J. M. Bartels of this city, who knew the family who found it and who offered $3,000 for it, but the stamp was sold to Mr. Worthington:

The stamp was found in 1907 by Mrs. Fawcett of Alexandria while looking through some old papers. Mrs. Fawcett was a widow, her husband having been a dentist. The family was one of the oldest in the place. I knew the Fawcetts as I had lived in Alexandria for several years and when she found the stamp she wrote me in Boston about it. Before I could get it, she had sent it to a relative in Philadelphia, a lawyer who had just incorporated a stamp company there and he gave it to the dealer. After I offered $3,000, I believe it was offered to Mr. Worthington for the same price and he took it. The money that Mrs. Fawcett received was very acceptable to her as she was in reduced circumstances. I remember asking her, some time later, if when she discovered the stamp she would have taken $1,500 at once, and she said she surely would. In my estimate of the rarest stamps I would place this blue copy of the 5-cent Alexandria in second place, as $10,000 for it today would be a fairly reasonable price."

The Alexandria stamp was issued by the Postmaster of the time, Daniel Bryan. The design is more artistic than the Boscawen stamp, the figure of value being in the centre of a circular ornamental border and with the words, "Alexandria, Post Office."

There is only one known copy of the Lockport, N. Y., stamp, which was discovered several years ago and sold by the finder for less than $100. Of the Baltimore stamps about a dozen copies of the 5-cent value are known and only four of the 10-cent value. Three copies of these are black on white paper. There is one blue paper copy which is unique and is in the collection formed by the late Henry J. Duveen. One of the three copies is owned by Mr. Caspary, and one was in the recent Ferrari sale. It is a beautiful copy on the original envelope addressed to the Rev. R. H. Ball and was found a few years ago in Washington by his daughters. The late Count Ferrari paid $2,700 for it in 1897. The design is very simple, consisting of a narrow rectangle of faint lines with the signature of the postmaster, James M. Buchanan, written over the printed value.

Other Rare Stamps.

Other rare Postmaster stamps are those of Millbury, Mass., New Haven, Brattleboro, Vt., and the 20-cent issue of St. Louis. New York issued Postmaster stamps in 1846. They were issued by Robert H. Morris, who was Postmaster in 1846 and are of one value, 5 cents. The design is more elaborate than most of these early issues, having a well engraved head of Washington. The color is black. Several thousand were used before the regular Governmental issue in 1847, and as a result they are fairly common, copies being obtainable from $25 to $100 according to condition.

John A. Klemann, head of the Nassau Stamp Company, and who purchased in 1915 the Earl of Crawford's magnificent collection of United States stamps in forty-one large volumes, believes that the high prices lately paid for rare postage stamps will have the effect of boosting the prices for fine stamp specimens all along the line. It shows, he says, that the very best things in any hobby are always in demand. Collectors are far more discriminating today than in former years. The particular collector will turn down a rare copy of a stamp if a single perforation is missing. That is the reason why stamps of the same value and issue often vary so much in price. Mr. Bartels, E. B. Power of the Stanley Gibbons firm and Hugh M. Clark of the Scott Stamp and Coin Company all concur in the view that the purchase of the rarest stamps is a much better investment than could be made in many other ways.

In addition to the King of England who has one of the finest collections of Great Britain and British Colonial stamps in the world, the King of Spain is an ardent collector and several years ago while visiting Paris the French Government presented to him a choice collection of old and current French stamps. In this country Colonel E. H. R. Green, Congressman Ernest R. Ackerman of New Jersey, Charles Lathrop Pack, President of the American Forestry Association, Alfred Caspary, a Wall Street broker, Alfred F. Lichtenstein, head of a large dye corporation, and Arthur Hind of Utica have a high standing as discriminating postage stamp collectors.

Colonel Green has a choice lot of United States stamps and he created something of a sensation in 1918 by purchasing for about $20,000 the only known sheet of 24-cent airplane stamps, the first issue in this country, with the centre inverted. There is a story that the sheet was handed out to a buyer at the Washington Post Office, but he turned it back because of the error in the printing. Another man, quicker to appreciate its possible value, bought the sheet and sold it to Colonel Green. The sheet originally contained 100 stamps but has since been cut up, Colonel Green retaining a large portion. Single copies of this error are now quoted at $700 apiece.

Congressman Ackerman makes a specialty of several South American countries and United States. He has a unique collection of the 5 and 10-cent values of the first Government 1847 issue, having 250 to 300 copies bearing different postmarks on original envelopes from as many towns and cities. Mr. Pack limits his collecting to twelve countries. He is said to own the finest collection of Canada and Queensland stamps in this country and of the rare "Sydney views" of New South Wales he has more than 1,200 fine copies, in all the different plate stages. Mr. Lichtenstein has the best collection of the stamps of Switzerland in America.—N. Y. Times.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—H. Schatz withdraws the complaint filed against the Universal Philatelic Exchange. His books have been returned. In writing us Mr. Schatz has the courage to use a picture postcard showing a full set of fifteen U. S. stamps in the original colors. Our subscribers should understand that it is clearly against the U. S. laws to use cards of this kind in their correspondence.

—W. F. Ferguson sends for our inspection a communication received from one who while formerly a collector has now ceased to be interested in philately. His letter to Mr. Ferguson indicates that he is no longer interested and suggests that his name be taken off the mail list. Our correspondent feels that this is a case of courtesy which should be brought to the attention of our readers.

—The Floral City Stamp Co., Springfield, O., has an accumulation of stamp papers, mostly foreign, which it will donate to any stamp club paying cost of carriage.

—P. R. Low of Bath, Maine, has on hand some back numbers of the WEEKLY between 1911 and 1915. He will be very willing to dispose of these to some stamp club that will pay the cost of transportation. Subscribers desiring missing numbers will do well to write Mr. Low.

—J. A. Thompson, Great Falls, Mont., calls our attention to the fact that he possesses a strip of 2c. Trans-Mississippi with the postmark cancellation across the three stamps as follows:—"U. S. Mil. Sta. No. 1 S. F. Cal.—Cavite P. I. Nov. 22. '98." This is without question a most interesting cancellation.

—S. W. Hacker, Peru, Nebr., has just issued a revised list of U. S. post cards. It is offered in this issue at 12c. Mr. Hacker will send this new list free of charge to any collector who purchased one of the first edition. Just return the old list with postage for reply.

—In looking over the Toronto Globe my eye caught the headline "Stamps." The editor who wrote the article must have been a "stamp fiend" in his boyhood days, and if he wants to return to the game he will find familar names among the stamp dealers of New York and St. Louis, who are still sending out sheets of stamps "on approval." No doubt these dealers are finding many customers among the sons of the fathers, for the acquisitive habit has not died out in this later-day generation. The only difference is that it costs more nowadays to accumulate a representative collection. If only we gray-headed, but juvenile-spirited, stamp hobbyists who have returned to our first love, had only persisted through the years, how happy we could be in finding the penny values had turned to dollars, enabling us to bask in the sunshine and listen to the waves beat upon some smooth sandy shore both winter and summer.—CHAS. H. BALL.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

Notice is given elsewhere of the change of address of the C. S. Watson Co., Inc. It is tangible evidence of steady growth in the firm's business, and we bespeak for the Watson Co. a goodly share of the transient trade that Boston enjoys.

THE SEVEN CENT VERMILION.

By J. W. Sampson.

Chapter III.—The Continental Print.

In April, 1873, the Continental Bank Note Company, having been awarded the government contract for supplying postage stamps for the ensuing four years, took over the plates then being used by the National Bank Note Company and began printing.

The designs of the 1870-71 issue being entirely satisfactory, the only change made was to add an identification mark to each of the dies (except the three higher values) so that the Continental product might not be confused with that of its predecessor.

Rates and Uses.—The seven cent rate to Germany, via England, still prevailed and continued effective until the adoption of the uniform Postal Union rate of five cents, July 1, 1875.

In addition, the seven cent rate to Denmark via Bremen and Hamburg, was adopted in 1873, the previous Denmark rates having been ten cents via England and seven cents via Stettin only.

But the use of the 7 cent stamp was by no means confined to these countries and to the Austrian States. Export and import houses, having quantities of the vermilion stamp on hand, found it convenient in making up higher rates, and some of the most interesting examples show the 7 cent used with the 2 cent, 3 cent and 6 cent denominations to make up the 1873-74 rates of ten cents, sixteen cents and twenty cents to France, the ten-cent rate to Switzerland, etc.

Beyond this, the 7 cent stamp in conjunction with the 15 cent was an "easy combination" in making up the twenty-two cent rate to Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, and the new twenty-seven cent rate to China, while a cover is occasionally seen making up the postage-plus-registration rate to other foreign points.

While issued primarily for foreign service, however, the 7 cent stamp of the Continental printing was destined to fill an emergency need at home, on domestic mail. This emergency need was the result of a lowering of the registration fee, from fifteen to eight cents in 1874. Prior to that time, the 7 cent stamp was seldom used on domestic mail, except in a strip of three, making the twenty-one cent rate for a registered letter of double weight (fifteen plus six cents). But the new registration fee, eight cents, made the rate on a letter of one-half ounce or less eleven cents, and on a double weight letter fourteen cents. As there was no eight cent stamp, a seven and a one were frequently used with a three, or a seven and a pair of twos were employed, on registered domestic letters that took the single postage rate, while a pair of sevens was the natural combination for the registered double rate letters.

Plate Varieties.—The Continental Bank Note Company took proofs of their "secret mark" die in a wide range of colors, and these proofs on India paper are beautiful examples of the engraver's art.

Joseph P. Ourdan was the name of the engraver who cut the identification marks in the die, and as his name appears in the Continental's records in various places in connection with this stamp, it may be assumed that he also took charge of the transferring of the design to the plate. If this assumption is justified by the facts, Joseph may be credited with having done a very neat job—for the philatelist.

One plate only was made, No. 22, and this number was engraved with the imprint of the Continental Bank Note Company, in four positions on the margins of the plate. The plate was of 200 subjects, like the National plate, but with arrows at top and bottom as a guide in cutting the sheets into two panes.

Many interesting shifts and defects occur in this Continental plate, and a few of the more distinct are illustrated here.

Figure 3 shows a pronounced doubling of the numeral and letters in "7 CENTS", so plain that even the inexpert shift-hunter cannot fail to see it without a glass. The position of this is 1R,—the first stamp in the top row of the second pane,—and the stamp is therefore always found with a straight edge at left, and usually with a trace of the arrow showing at the top. If perforated all around, as occasionally seen, it is sure to be a reperforated specimen.

Figure 4.

A NOTABLE EXHIBIT.

(This clipping is from the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican. It gives the particulars of a stamp exhibit under the auspices of the Waterbury Stamp Club which opened April 22 and continued through the following week. As an encouragement to other stamp clubs, we think it wise to reprint the article in full. Not only is it well written, but it demonstrates a splendid degree of activity upon the part of local philatelists. Such an exhibit must be of lasting benefit to philately and we congratulate this club upon its enterprise.—W. O. W.)

A letter carried by what was probably the first aerial mail in history is shown at the exhibition opened by the Waterbury Stamp club in Mattatuck hall Saturday. It is a private letter written in Paris by a French officer and sent to a woman friend in London "Par Ballon Monte." It is dated, Paris, September 29, 1870. The time was in the early part of the Franco-Prussian war and the writer in his letter says that the balloon provides the only way by which he can mail his letter.

The letter is written in French but a partial translation is made. The French officer speaks of the enemies as "Bismarck's sweet lambs" and says: "We are out for blood because we have to be." The present attitude of France toward Germany which goes back to that war makes the text of the letter even more than usually interesting at this time. This rare and interesting letter is found in the collection exhibited by Paul Hamilton.

The exhibition of stamps was pronounced by visiting collectors as one of the best ever shown in the state. Much interest was evidenced in the exhibition by the number of visitors present. The collections are beautifully arranged and two members of the stamp club are present at all hours of the exhibition to give any information desired. The exhibition will be open all this week thru Saturday from 2 to 6, and from 7.30 to 9.30 p. m. The committee in charge is composed of Rev. Anthon Gesner, Willis M. Hall, Lamont A. Hall and W. D. Pierson.

The collection of William Pierson, president of the club, includes the remarkable issue of stamps of King Edward VII's reign which show the nude form of a woman with a hat on her head in the face of the monarch. The stamps are shown and the photographed enlargements showing in detail how cleverly the artist put the figure in his work. The discovery of the pictured woman was made by a stamp collector and once discerned is very plainly seen. The woman in the face of the monarch is shown in all the stamps issued by Edward's reign with the exception of those for New Foundland and Canada.

Mr. Pierson's collection includes stamps of Great Britain and colonies, principally of the West Indies, and a complete set of Irish Republic stamps surcharged on current English stamps.

The collection of John P. Elton includes the Waterbury postmarks made famous by the late Postmaster Robert W. Hill. When Hill was postmaster time hung more heavily on the hands of postmasters than it does now and he employed some of his spare minutes in fashioning various designed postmarks out of cork. These included cats, bears, leafs, harps and anything else that his fancy dictated. Finally he used a donkey as the cancelling mark on his stamps. To that time his artistic efforts had gone unnoticed but the donkey caused a communication to be received from Washington suggesting that it was beneath the dignity of the department to use such a cancellation mark.

Mr. Elton has a large number of these cancellation stamps of Mr. Hill's that are now much sought by collectors. His collection also includes United States 19th century stamps, a fine collection of reprints made by the government in 1876, stamps of the British possessions in North America, New Foundland, Canada, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia.

M. R. Taschenberg has on exhibition a fine collection of United States stamped envelopes from the earliest issues up to the present time. They are largely in unused condition and include many freaks in printing.

The collection of C. H. Webster includes curiosities and oddities in United States and foreign countries, their earlier issues of stamps. There is an extensive collection of United States revenue and match and medicine stamps.

E. G. Hart's collection includes stamps of the South American countries.

J. P. Sawyer has a good collection of United States revenue stamps and L. A. Alexander has a collection of United States early reprints and Canadian revenues.

An interesting collection is that of H. C. Upson of letters before postage stamps were in use and postal cards.

R. W. Walker has a collection of United States department stamps and a complete set of unused stamps of the Columbian issue of 1893 and of United States stamps surcharged for use at Shanghai, China.

The collection of F. Jones is of Siamese stamps and that of T. W. Beard of United States aeroplane and recent European issues.

The collection of Rev. Anthon Gesner includes rare old stamps on the original envelopes principally of the United States, Canada and Confederate states.

Willis M. Hall shows a collection of United States 20th century issues. A particularly interesting stamp in his collection is that of an inverted center one cent Pan-American stamp of the issue of 1901. The collection of L. A. Hall includes old British Colonials, United States errors and old original envelopes.

Honorary members exhibiting include H. P. Atherton of Springfield, Mrs. Louise Kellogg of West Hartford, Dr. Bowers of Bridgeport and Olin H. Clark of Hartford. Mr. Atherton's collection includes early issues of United States stamps and the famous two-cent black Jacksons. Mrs. Kellogg shows a rare collection of Rumanian stamps and Dr. Bowers' collection includes rare stamps of the early German states. Patriotic envelopes of the Civil War period are included in the collection of Mr. Clark.

EDITORIAL.

High—Advices from Paris describing the three days' sale of the third section, of the Ferrari collection, tell of the successful outcome of the great auction sale, whose third day's session included some of the famous postmaster provisionals of the United States. The attendance was so large that officers were requisitioned to prevent the room from being rushed. The sale of the "only" British Guiana stamp which was duly reported in some of our newspapers by cablegram, loaned a piquancy to the sale. We find that the largest price on the third day's sale, when the United States stamps were sold, was 105,000 francs for the Boscawen, N. H., provisional, only one copy of which is known. A Baltimore ten cents on cover brought 60,000 francs and an Alexandria realized the same amount. The Lockport, N. Y., was knocked down for 75,000 francs and the New Haven, used, for 50,000 francs. These prices do not include the 17½% tax that is collected by the government. We remember that over twenty-five years ago, Mr. I. A. Mekeel established the record price for a stamp, by the sale of a Baltimore ten cent on the cover for $4,400. It is well to have definite prices on the Boscawen and Lockport provisionals. Collectors in this country seemed to have difficulty in obtaining catalogues of this sale and it is certain that the distribution of them was much curtailed in this part of the world.

Hear—We find a dispatch in the Chicago Tribune to the effect that a suggestion of interest has been made to the Italian government that it commemorate the Genoa conference by the issue of a million postage stamps of the denomination of one lira. According to the Tribune's head-line the Genoa parley "may reward stamp collectors." We suppose that they still strike off medals to celebrate historic happenings but it is certain that postage stamps are now the most favored means that may be taken to loan distinction to an event of moment. Where once collectors were inclined to decry such issues as being "unnecessary" it is now considered something of an honor to have a special issue of stamps mark an occasion that is really worth while.

Hits—Another writer of a "best seller" gives tone to his story by a touch of philately. Indeed, F. Scott Fitzgerald in his latest work, "The Beautiful and Damned," sends a shaft or two that hits very near the bull's-eye. He speaks of Anthony Patch whose favorite diversion, until he was fourteen years old, was his stamp collection. His store of stamps was large or in the author's words "as nearly exhaustive as a boy's could be—his grandfather considered fatuously that it was teaching him geography." It seems that Anthony continued his correspondence with a half-dozen stamp and coin companies and "new stamp-books or packages of glittering approval sheets" came to him almost by every mail. Like the true collector, Anthony was always occupied seemingly in transferring his stamps from one book to another, and he had scant patience with the one who interrupted his play with stamps. Every month he spent his allowance for stamps, and then at night he liked to lie awake cogitating upon their variety "and many-colored splendor." Mr. Fitzgerald handles the subject with so much finesse that we know that he did not gain his philatelic experiences second-hand and we suppose that the "I knew him whenners" could tell when he was an avid approval sheet fiend up in Minneapolis or wherever it was that he spent some of boyhood's happy hours, as Dulcy would have it. We certainly are pleased that the modern school of writers find it fashionable to dress up stamp collecting in some way or other, in their productions.

One of the earliest critics in a constructive sense of our postal administrations was one who wrote on postal reform under the initials, "B. B." So early as in 1840 did he begin to draw the deadly parallel between the "inept" and cumbersome methods used by our post office department and the sensible regulations adopted by certain other countries. This leads us to the subject in mind which is to revise the earliest date of the advocacy of the uniform rate of two cents for prepaid postage. We find in Harper's New Monthly Magazine for November, 1852, the following evidence on the part of B. B., of broadest vision: "Letter postage should be reduced to a uniform rate of two cents prepaid. This rate has been successfully adopted in Great Britain. It has increased the letters and the income of the post office. It is the revenue point, sufficiently low to encourage the people to write and to send all their letters through the post office; and yet high enough to afford ample revenue to pay the expenses of the department. If this rate is adopted, it will defy all competition for none will attempt to carry letters cheaper than the post office."

When the Echo de la Timbrologie announced that it was going to choose by vote of its readers the ten handsomest stamps, we were interested to see if the results would follow the accepted lines and whether our own country would have place in the findings. The contest was restricted to the stamps that were the apple of the eye of the older collectors and the later stamps, such as the one dollar Omaha, two shillings and six pence Falkland, 1898, etc., were not eligible. First place was given to the 1849 Belgium, 10c brown, the first stamp issued by that country. Number two was the four pence blue Cape triangular; three, the five shilling violet, medal type, New South Wales, 1861; four Nova Scotia, ten cents vermilion; and the fifth selection was the U. S. ninety cent of 1869. Greece, Ceylon, Two Sicilies, Queensland and France all were given place. We are somewhat surprised to find that the ten cent vermilion Nova Scotia has supplanted the 12½ cents black Nova Scotia which usually was returned a winner; and the absence of the one penny black of Great Britain will be observed by those who remember former competitions of the kind.

A correspondent who picks up the gauntlet in favor of the much-abused Neurope issues and makes our contention sound that after all comparatively few attempts are made to brazenly take the collector into camp, ends his defense with the remark that it must not be forgotten that the stamps in almost every case were made for postal purposes, as well as for sale to collectors. He does not see why we should pick on the poor European countries and he asks for more tolerance for these weaker stamps. We have a suspicion that our reader is tilting at wind-mills as there is no concerted movement to ostracize the stamps. On the contrary, these issues are being treated as well as could be expected or better.

THE HOME OF THE POSTAGE STAMP Joseph V. K. Wells Manager. BURNT HILLS, N. Y.

THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF BELGIUM.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

The 25c and 50c values, as we have already observed, were issued as a result of the newly formed Postal Union establishing uniform rates for international correspondence. The former value displaced the 30c and other changes in foreign postal rates made the 8c unnecessary. Consequently both denominations were suppressed and a special order dealing with the matter was distributed to postmasters, viz.:—

"DEPARTMENT OF POSTS.

Concerning the return of the 8 and 30 centimes postage stamps to the Chief Stamp Distributing Office.

March 14th, 1878.

The Minister has ordered that no more postage stamps of the 8 and 30 centimes values be issued after May 31st next. Any of these stamps remaining on hand in any office after the above date must be returned to the officer in charge of the Chief Stamp Distributing Office, at Malines, by registered post, before June 10; they must be accompanied by a consignment note, in duplicate, made out in the form specified below. . . . It is to be understood that any 8 or 30 centimes stamps in the possession of the public will still be available for use postally.

For the Director-General,
Inspector-General Delegated."

Until late in 1882, all the stamps were perforated by the Administration with the machine having a gauge of 15 which perforated an entire sheet of 300 stamps at one operation. Then, according to Mr. Westoby, a new machine (or machines) was introduced, which gave a perforation of 14. The new machines were constructed on the comb principle perforating three sides of a stamp at one time, when the sheets were carried forward to receive the next row of perforation. Some of these comb-machines are constructed to perforate the sheets beginning from either top or bottom, while others perforate from the sides. The Belgian machines were of the latter style. The 1c and 2c are both recorded entirely imperforate.

Some of the values were in use for many years, consequently there were a great many printings. Mr. de Bont has compiled some statistics which we give, though we fear they cannot be implicitly relied on as accurate. Of the 1c and 10c we are told there were nine printings, giving a total of 220,200,000 stamps of 1c and 71,190,000 of 10c. But as all these, with the exception of 4,200,000 1c and 690,000 10c, are said to have been perforated 15 either the figures are incorrect or catalogue quotations for the perf. 14 stamps are ridiculously low. There were six printings of the 2c and 20c denominations and the totals of the first five, all perforated 15, are said to be 1,749,000 stamps of 2c and 4,140,000 of 20c. The sixth printing is said to have been very small and there must have been an additional large printing of the 2c, at any rate for this value, perf. 14 is not, according to the cataloguers, much rarer than the perf. 15 variety. The totals of the other values are given as follows:—

25 "	68,400,000	"
30 "	31,800,000	"
40 "	9,300,000	"
50 "	4,380,000	"
1 franc,	7,830,000	"
5 francs,	48,000	"

Naturally as the stamps were so long in use and there were so many printings, this issue is prolific in shades. The blues and greens (1c, 2c, 10c and 20c) in particular, provide a number of very striking and distinct shades and even the rare 5fr comes in two marked shades.

For a time experiments were made with fugitive inks which produced stamps in much brighter colors than those printed with ordinary inks. Scott lists five values as "printed in aniline colors" under the date "1881" and perf. 14. But other values besides those given were undoubtedly printed in fugitive colors, notably the 20c and 40c, and as the use of this color commenced in 1881, when the 15 perforating machine was in use and continued for some little time after the new 14 machine was introduced, the Scott description is misleading to say the least of it. In fact, as all the stamps in regular colors are listed as perf. 15, one is lead to infer that the 14 gauge is an invaluable test in identifying the stamps in fugitive colors. But, as stated above, the aniline colors come with both 15 and 14 perforation and in other values than those catalogued. As they are usually hard to distinguish with certainty, and are at best a minor variety of interest only to specialists, they might well be deleted from the catalogue.

How many plates were used we cannot say, but it seems hardly possible, if the figures given by Mr. de Bont are only approximately correct, that the same plates could have been used from start to finish in the case of such denominations as the 1c, 5c and 10c, where such enormous quantities were printed.

The specialist will find numerous varieties of a minor character, such as broken frame lines, flaws, malformed letters, etc. Scott lists some of these, such as S of CENTIMES omitted, CENTIME omitted, CENTIVE and CENTIMF. The two former are evidently due to defective printing and the two latter varieties may also be due to the same cause. It is questionable if their philatelic status is such as to entitle them to catalogue rank, though the well-known BELGIGUE variety in the 1c seems to be of better standing. This was caused by accident to one of the clichés some time during the later printing of this value and it was continued through the changes of color made in 1884. Shortly after that, according to M. Moens, it was corrected. The error occurred on the second stamp of the eleventh horizontal row.

We have seen the 10c and 50c of this issue on what appears to be laid paper and other values are also said to exist. Our own opinion is that it is merely an accidental variety due to some peculiarity of printing for it is pretty certain no really laid paper was ever used by the Belgian government for its postage stamps.

Before concluding this chapter, it will perhaps be of some interest to complete the history of the 5 francs stamp. This value was primarily intended to be used on insured packets but the demand for it was much smaller than had been anticipated. The numbers sold in the ten years it was available for public use being as follows:—

1880	3080	"	1885	4733	"

None were sold to the public after 1888 but it was used to denote the receipt of money paid to the Post-office, and also for balancing the accounts of Post-offices, when money was paid from the account of the Savings Bank Department. When used in connection with savings bank business the stamps were cancelled by means of a continuous wheel canceller providing the "bar cancellation" listed in the catalogues.

In 1893 certain regulations were amended to such a degree that there was no longer any use for the 5 franc stamp and, also, various post-offices were asked for the stamps from time to time and to save further "annoyance" of this nature the Administration issued a special order suppressing the stamps. It was announced that they would cease to be available for postage after October 31st, 1894, but that any in the hands of the public might be exchanged for other values.

A few months later it was rumored that there was a considerable stock of

NEW DISCOVERY
UNITED STATES—ERROR
1922, 1c green, Perforated 11.
Horizontal Pair — Imperforated Between
I have recently obtained a few mint pairs and blocks (the available supply) of the current 1c green, imperforated between the horizontal pairs. These will probably be listed as Scott's No. 409b. They are errors similar to the 5c blue (Scott's No. 413a), the 50c lilac (No. 426a) and the 1c surface print (No. 435c), all of which are quite scarce and much sought after.
These must not be confused with those of the 2c and 20c showing blind perforations, for they show no traces whatsoever of perforations. Only a few are available, and specialists in United States stamps should express their interest promptly. It will be recalled that the other 20th Century U. S. errors of perforation are selling today at much more than the price at which they were first offered, and even then, the commonest are practically unobtainable.
What else do you require in the way of late U. S. BLOCKS from 1890 on?

Information regarding new issues and varieties will be gratefully received. We cannot give the addresses of correspondents.
The chronicle of United States is edited by PHILIP H. WARD, JR., Box 4216, Germantown, Phila., Pa. The foreign chronicle is edited by PERCY C. SMITH, 40 Packard Ave., West Somerville, Mass. Correspondents will please be careful to send their matter to the right address.

UNITED STATES.—Mr. W. A. Langdon has located the current 1c green, perforated 11, on unwatermarked paper perforated by a machine that had one of its wheels loose resulting in one vertical row without perforations. This wheel became loose or moved out of its regular place in such a way that part of the pane shows blind perforations while several of the pairs escape the wheel entirely so that there is not the slightest trace of the wheel even on the gum. Result—a horizontal pair imperforate between. Two other such horizontal pair varieties have occurred, namely the 5c blue Scott's No. 413a and the 1c surface print No. 435c. A vertical pair of the 50c imperforate between is known, Scott listing this as No. 426a. Of the 5c two pairs are known, one being found in New York and the other in the far west. Of the 50c but one pair is known, this having been located in an office around Boston. The 1c surface were found in larger quantities in Detroit. In the case of this last variety, the perforations are missing between the ninth and tenth vertical rows of stamps, hence every pair has a straight edge on the right. It is unknown in any other way.

1c green, Horizontal pair, Imperf. between.
I have recently come into possession of an 1847 5c orange brown on cover which is of more than passing interest and differs from any that have come to my notice heretofore. The stamp itself is cancelled in blue with four bars within a circle, that is a blue grid cancellation but differing from those so well known and used by a number of cities. The cover bears a blue postmark within a circle reading "NORWICH—WORCESTER. R.R.—Sep 25." The cover is addressed to Hartford, Conn., but as the letter is missing I cannot tell where it originated.
Rarities tempt the counterfeiter and it is not surprising to note that the rarest of all of the provisional 2c on 3c envelopes, the one of which there are fewest known, should come upon the market with a fake overprint. We have to thank Mr. J. M. Bartels for information regarding same. It seems that a person residing in Florida and learning of the rarity of the Daytona variety, being unable to obtain them from the post office attempts to make them by securing a rubber stamp somewhat similar, and applying the surcharge himself. In doing this work, however, he overlooked some of the peculiarities of the genuine which it is just as well not to mention at this time. He even goes further than the Postmaster himself for while the genuine were all die A or H on white he surcharges the Die A, E, F and H on white and the Die A on blue. To begin with this was a fatal error for it is not conceivable that a Post Office of the size of Daytona would have all of these in stock. In addition he offers 500 on blue with the imprint, applied privately and not by the government, of one of the local concerns who state in their letters to Mr. Bartels that they know nothing about them and had none revalued. Experts will be able to distinguish these varieties and it is suggested that whenever these are purchased the purchaser request the dealer to initial the copy. Those handling the genuine have been doing this for sometime for they realized the possibilities of counterfeiting and any of those distributed previous to this time will gladly be initialed for the original purchasers. There were only about a hundred in the genuine find and most all these came from Mr. A. F. Gamber who was in Daytona at the time. I secured practically his entire lot and from an examination it was possible to note certain details which Mr. Bartels explains are missing in the case of this new lot.
The same party offers the 2c postal with a large figure "1" overprint and states that these also are from Daytona. No surcharged postals were made at the time and as the stamp for overprinting the envelopes had been destroyed there will be great difficulty in producing more that will pass muster.
Mr. George P. Smith reports a new Philadelphia overprinted envelope and the Rev. Viggo M. Hansen has found a new variety from San Francisco.

BECHUANALAND.—Some months ago specimens of the 1d. Union of South Africa postage stamps overprinted "Bechuanaland Protectorate" found their way into this country, and we received a block of 30 from a client who was unable to give us any information about them. We sent a specimen to the Postmaster of Mafeking, who kindly made enquiries, and who writes to us as follows:—
"I beg to inform you that it has been ascertained that the Bechuanaland Protectorate Government obtained a supply of 1d Union of South Africa stamps overprinted 'Bechuanaland Protectorate' to be used as Revenue stamps only. The supply amounted to £6 10 0, and the Bechuanaland Protectorate Government distributed the stamps in question to various Magistrates in different parts of the Protectorate. The supply soon became exhausted and none are now obtainable."—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

The 15c of 1921 issue has also been surcharge like manner in gold color. The 1c, 50c and 1col stamps of the 1907 i surcharged "Oficial" have been fur overprinted "1921-22". The 25c of same set as above has also received "1921-22" and also "20 cts.".

these 5 franc stamps on hand and that the Belgian post-office intended to sell them at auction in one lot. The rumor was accepted with a good deal of reserve at the time, but in April, 1895, the Government published a lengthy document in which the whole of the remainders, which it turned out amounted to only eight sheets, or 2,400 stamps, were offered for sale by tender. Bids were accepted for the lot or for lots of fifty stamps though no tenders were accepted for a less number than 50. The document is hardly of sufficient interest to quote but it is of interest to observe that "the stamps will be sold just as they are, without any warranty" was one of the conditions of sale. This seems to have worried many would-be bidders for it was feared the stamps might be reprints. The stamps were sold on June 25th, there being comparatively few tenders, which ranged from 200 to 40,000 francs. The latter was not considered as the tenderer was not present in person and the stamps were sold to the next highest bidder, Mr. G. Schildnecht, for 36,000 francs. They, therefore, cost the purchaser 15 francs each.

The total quantity sold to the public from 1878 to 1887 was 45,600, as shown above, which with the 2,400 remainders makes the total of 48,000 said to have been printed. But as those sold would have been used for postage and bear postal cancellations these figures do not, apparently, make provision for the large number that were used officially and were cancelled with bar obliteration. While the above figures have usually been accepted as correct, as well as the statement that there were only two printings of the 5 franc stamps, it is possible that Mr. de Bont's statement of the case may be more accurate. We give his synopsis of the different printings and quantities, viz.:—

"First Printing.—February, 1878. Printed in Belgian ink on thick Chinese paper. 33,000 copies.

Red-brown.

Second Printing.—June, 1878. Printing in inks manufactured by Messrs. De La Rue & Co., of London, on a thinner Chinese paper. 14,700 copies.

Pale red-brown.

The stamps of this printing were only supplied to a few first and second-class post offices. When the stock was used up, stamps of the first and third printings were supplied.

Third printing.—November, 1881. Printed in vegetable ink, giving fugitive colors, on slightly thicker paper. 11,400 copies.

Deep red-brown."

The three shades mentioned can undoubtedly be found and Mr. Westoby announced some years before Mr. de Bont's article appeared that the 5 franc was printed in fugitive color. The total, as given above, is 59,100 stamps, which, if we take the other figures of 48,000 as being correct insofar as they relate to numbers sold over the counter and remainders, would give 11,100 to have been used officially.

HOW TO START WITH PRECANCELS.

By VICTOR W. ROTNEM.

A hobby is a pastime that a person enjoys when he desires to forget his frets and worries. It is a veritable God-send to the busy man who has a dozen perplexing problems playing on his over-worked brain. As he plunges into an entirely different field of activity he forgets all his troubles.

What shall that field be? Precancels are intricate enough to be interesting, but at the same time they permit organization to fit the varying desires of the collector. They are accessible but at the same time they are relatively scarce as compared with specialization in regular postal issues.

There are first of all four major type divisions to be recognized. These types are applied to the sheet of 100 stamps by the use of ordinary printing presses, and therefore we get the term precanceled, or canceled before. The type positions may be horizontal or vertical, depending upon which suits best the town name. These vertical and horizontal overprints may be found both normal and inverted, but the former exists in the greater number.

The 1895, 1898 Trans-Mississippi, 1902, 1903 Louisiana, 1907 Jamestown, the 1908, 1910, 1912 Panama Pacific, the 1914 perforated 10, and the 1917 perforated 11, all these sets come precancelled. Every large city of the country now uses precanceled stamps for third class, printed matter, and for fourth class, parcel post; at Christmas time a great number of smaller places use them during the rush spells, for these efficiency labels save a vast amount of work for the postal clerks. If all intricacies were to be noted, excluding watermarks, we could no doubt safely estimate on fifty thousand possible varieties.

Oh, but you say this field is too large, I would be ridden by my hobby if I were to become a victim to "precancels". But now, remember our statement: precancels are intricate enough to be interesting but they permit organisation to fit the varying whims of the collector.

You live in a community, your town may use precancels, cities near your town use precancels, the large cities in your state use them. In fact, it is very probable that a collection of the precancels from your state (unless it be some of the more western states) would be an interesting little side line by itself. In the first place many of the items, altho very scarce when considered from the viewpoint of the country, are very accessible to you. You have the economic advantage of being near the source of supply. You can gather the precancels that come in from near your vicinity and you have a valuable economic good that can be traded with other collectors.

If you desire to broaden your activities as you obtain the precancels of your own state, you always have the neighboring states, or you might do as one collector did, complete the perforated 11 set as far as it was precanceled by the twenty largest cities in the country.

The Pilgrim tercentenary stamps make an interesting profitable side line, as do the victory and aeroplane stamps. It is an interesting search to complete the offset stamps, the 1c, 2c, and 3c, from the twenty large cities. The 13c stamps, precanceled, make as pretty a display as one could wish. The rotary specialist can search a long time for a page of rotaries precanceled. The perforation collector has his opportunities too.

A PANAMA RARITY.

Emil J. Rall sends us the following clipping from the Star and Herald, published in the Canal Zone. It mentions a very interesting variety of a Panama envelope surcharged "Canal Zone:" A stamp probably the only one of its kind, is in the possession of Lucien Granie of Front street. It is a Panama two-cent stamp printed on an envelope, as is sold at the Canal Zone post offices but the red part has not been printed and all there is is the profile of Balboa and the words "Canal Zone" across.

Mr. Granie purchased a packet of stamped envelopes at the Cristobal post office and discovered one which had not got the red part printed on it.

In order to increase its value and have it postmarked Mr. Granie mailed the envelope to the Star and Herald representative on the Atlantic side and now proposes to send it to Scotts of New York for valuation.

It may be worth $1,000.

OUR BOOK REVIEW.

We have received from B. Gordon Bushnell, publisher, the Perf. 11 section of the Standard Precancelled Stamp Catalog. This catalog lists the precancelled stamps of U. S. perforated 11, with the universal type system and other illustrations. The book is dated April, 1922, and the arrangement is copyrighted. The price of the section is 60c, postpaid and it may be obtained from Mr. Bushnell, 2648 Northwestern Ave., Indianapolis, Ind. The publisher of this catalog is entitled to a great deal of credit for the public spirited manner in which he has dignified the collecting of this very interesting side-line of U. S. stamps.

PHILATELIC HUDSON.

By WENDOVER NEEFUS.

I have for years had the fond hope that my native city of Hudson—a little place of but 12,000 inhabitants, yet a city incorporated in 1785—the third in New York State—might have a stamp club. Lack of material for membership has always been the drawback and so my hope was postponed from year to year.

In January last the thought came to me that the material for membership might be developed, if not found. I called to my aid two or three real collectors of high school age and we decided to attempt the formation of a club. Newspaper notices were gladly given by our daily papers, and our first meeting on a Saturday night brought two boys. We decided that perhaps Saturday afternoons would be a better time and notices were again run and our next meeting was attended by nine. These nine decided to form a club, which we determined to call "Columbia County Collectors Club," and the nine became its charter members. Columbia County is a small county with only 45,000 inhabitants, but a county strong in history as Martin Van Buren, President of the United States from 1837 to 1841, and Samuel J. Tilden, who received the greatest number of popular votes in the Presidential election in 1876, but was defeated by Rutherford B. Hayes in the electoral college, were both Columbia County men and actual residents of the county for years.

Our club is not burdened with lengthy by-laws—a hundred words covers the necessity. Its membership is opened to any resident of the County of Columbia of whatever age, and there are no dues. It has the usual officers, but its funds, property and management is placed in the hands of its adult members, who are known as a Board of Advisors. Thus its complete control is in the older members but it is not the policy of the Board of Advisors to exert its powers, except in cases of necessity.

The officers elected are High School boys. During the two months and a half of its existence its membership has increased to 32, only one of whom lives outside of Hudson. Meetings are held weekly at my offices, and a short business meeting is first held in strict accordance with parliamentary rules. After this a short talk of some kind is given, generally illustrated by an exhibit of some kind. The last half-hour of the meeting is given to selling and exchanging among the members.

I am very much gratified with the success that has been attained in this short period of time. The meetings have an average attendance of 15, and are more orderly than I would believe possible with a group of boys from 8 to 18, but most of them are Boy Scouts, which probably accounts for discipline. Tongs are very popular, and pocket stock books and approval cards have replaced the usual tin box and note book. Some of the boys have developed very keen eyes for varieties and unusual things.

A very pleasing proof of the interest of non-collectors in our club was the gift to it of three lots of stamps by persons, who read of its formation. These stamps have been assorted by some of the boys, called an Expert Committee (and they like the term and the rest of the club envies them their privilege). The season has now been closed and each boy given a credit of five cents catalogue value for each meeting attended, which he selected from the assorted gift lots. Proud boys are they who drew 35 or 40 cents catalogue, while some others only got 25 cents. I know it has been an incentive to some boys to attend regularly.

Next October, the club will again open up and all memberships must be renewed. That eliminates a padded membership roll, for many boys pass from our hobby as quickly as they take it up. And the big thing next fall is going to be a public exhibit. Cards six by ten inches are to be mounted and displayed in some store window, and the name of the owner placed on each card. Some boys have already stated that they have two sets they would like to show and I wonder if it is the sets or their names that inspired the suggestion.

I am already working on plans for next winter, as I want to make it an entertaining and useful one for the club. If any club or individual has some material that may be of use to our Hudson Club, I shall be glad to have it and will be personally responsible for its care and return. I have in mind articles that may be read to the club, beginners exhibits that have an instructive nature, or suggestions of games and contests not too far advanced, for much of my material was developed by the members interesting new boys.

If I may be of assistance to any philatelist in a small place who has postponed his club hope from year to year, as I did, I shall be very glad to help to the best of my ability. It takes time and patience, but is our hobby not worth it? Although I am a dealer my work is for the hobby, and the only thing I know that my Hudson boys have against me is that I refuse to sell them any stamps.

I have always been interested in the boys—the men of to-morrow, whom we the men of to-day have a moral duty to start right, whether in our homes as the fathers of our children, or as philatelists with knowledge and experience, as the philatelic fathers of our boy collectors—and the appreciation that these boys express in their interest in the club, in their eager questions and in the manly salutations on the street are over-payment to me for the time expended.

WATERBURY, CONN., STAMP EXHIBIT.

By A. T. GESNER.

We have about the finest exhibition of stamps ever displayed publicly in the State of Connecticut—we think. We have 150 lineal feet of cases filled with choice selections of stamps from the best collections of this city. A feature of the exhibit is the great variety of interesting Waterbury cancellations, which with United States and British Colonials occupy the most case-room.

Dr. W. C. Bowers of Bridgeport has three sheets of Saxony and Luxemburg, in unused condition, which catalogue over $1,700.00. Other honorary members of the Waterbury Stamp Club who have loaned stamps, are Mr. Olin H. Clark of Hartford, who has some remarkably interesting patriotic covers of the Civil War period, taken from his collection of 2,800 varieties, which is probably not excelled by any in this country.

THE THIRD FERRARY SALE.

By FRED. J. MELVILLE.

New and Sensational Records.—The Ferrary sale in Paris continues to score new records, and the general anticipation of some sensational prices at the third sale, on April 5th-7th, has been fully realised. The previous record price for a single stamp has been very nearly doubled, and in the three days approximately 2,800,000, or nearly 3,000,000, francs were paid for a mere portion of the Ferrary treasures.

A Cosmopolitan Crowd.—The scene at the Hotel Drouot before and throughout the sale was much like the crush at the former sales, only somewhat more congested, and even more cosmopolitan. There was a good sprinkling of American collectors and dealers eager to escort the rarest of the Postmasters' stamps back to the land of their birth.

The Scrimmage.—The excitement throughout was at a high pitch, and the discomfort was even more pronounced than heretofore. To begin with there was inadequate regulation of the queue awaiting admission to the building. There were really two queues, one at each of two doors, and only one door was opened, with tormenting results. A cup-tie final was not in it for the grimness of the determination of the crowds to secure front seats. A sensational criminal trial could scarcely have attracted a more heterogeneous company. The élite of the stamp world jostled with the riff-raff of the Paris slums. About 260 people were jammed in the sale room, and on the ledge at the back—the royal boxes, if you like—was a row of the wildest looking rakes you ever saw. These ames damnées were not there to bid. Heaven and the French Government alone know what they were there for.

Comparatively few of those present were bidders, and certainly not more than about thirty were buyers.

Monsieur Lavenir's Protest.—There was an "incident" at the start. Mons. A. Lavenir, the President of the Société Francaise de Timbrologie, got up with Gallic excitement and commenced a speech of protest to the French Government on the way people were being treated at these sales. He complained that distinguished representaives from Great Britain, the United States, and other countries should have to scramble and fight for their seats. From the hearty way in which Mons. Lavenir's protest was applauded by the congested company we may gauge their feelings at the inadequate organization of the accommodation.

British and American Visitors.—Among the British collectors present were A. Leon Adutt, J. P., T. Allen, Anderson, W. Dorning Beckton, W. Houtzamer, Hugo Griebert, C. Nissen, and R. Roberts. Of the Americans there were Alfred F. Lichtenstein, J. Santiago Rachitoff, Edward Stern (of the Economist Stamp Co.), A. H. Caspary, etc.

The Catalogue Descriptions.—There were some criticisms of the descriptions in the catalogue. In a sale of this character, under the auspices of the Government, and where lots cannot be returned after purchase, it is of the utmost importance that the descriptions should be precise, and that defects should be distinctly pointed out. The complaints showed that many of the stamps were defective, though not so described, a notable example being lot 291, a block of 4 1c. black on red British Guiana of 1851, which had a very prominent crease, extending right down the two right-hand stamps.

The Selling of the Solitary Guiana.—The chief interest in the first two days centered in the British Guiana 1 cent stamp of 1856, the only known copy, and a poor-looking thing, rubbed and faded, and with clipped corners. Some weeks ago I hazarded a guess of £8,000 for this stamp, and the estimate was not so far out. The bidding started quite low and for a time it looked as though the stamp was going to be knocked down for something under £2,000. But quite suddenly there started a battle royal between Mons. Burrus, who has already secured some of the greatest gems in the collection, and Mr. Hugo Griebert.

Rival Claimants.—In a succession of rapid counter-bids these two brought the figure up to 300,000 francs, at which figure the auctioneer knocked it down. Then there was a new excitement, for each of the gentlemen claimed that the 300,000 franc bid was his. In England, I suppose, the stamp would have been put up again, but not so in France, and it was a graceful act on the part of Mons. Burrus to withdraw and leave the stamp to the distinguished visitor. Mr. Griebert was acting, it is understood, for Mr. Hind, an American collector.

The Record Price for One Stamp.—The 300,000 francs works out at £6,250, but there was also the 17½ per cent. tax, which the purchaser had to pay, which brings the figure up to £7,343. Presumably there would be commission or other charges, so the purchaser will have paid not far short of my estimate by the time he gets the stamp into his collection. Had there not been the mistake as to whose was the 300,000 franc bid, these two keen contestants might have gone on easily and swiftly to 400,000 francs.

Few Bargains.—Bargains? Yes, there were bargains secured, as there always will be at big stamp auctions. But on this occasion they were few and far between. One English dealer bought a small lot of New South Wales for 325 francs, which contained a very rare watermark variety, easily worth £20. Lot 302 was a wonderfully cheap item also, a very fine copy of the 2d. "Post Paid" Mauritius, première gravure, with the error "PENOE," which was knocked down for 16,000 francs.

High Prices Prevail.—On the other hand, there were many things that were very dear. The mint pair of the 12d. black Canada, laid paper, lot 216 fetched 38,000 francs or, with tax, approximately £910. A strip of three 15c blue Argentine, 1862-63, lot 178, fetched the astonishing figure of 6,000 francs. Taken generally the prices were on the very high side all round.

The Total to Date.—The total of the three days' sale was, with tax, two and three-quarter millions, bringing up the total realised by the Ferrary sales to date to close on 6,600,000 francs, or £137,500.—Stamp Collectors' Fortnightly.

PREPARATION FOR MOUNTING.

By L. H. BRIGHAM.

Thus far we have learned the value of collecting only those stamps which are clean, first-class copies, and what kind of a book it is best to mount them in. Now comes the very important operation of properly preparing them for mounting.

Stamps which have paper or parts of old hinges attached to the back of them should never be placed in an album. If one does not carefully follow this instruction the book soon becomes bulky, due to the fact of there being so many extra thicknesses of paper between the leaves.

The most convenient method of removing paper or other particles adhering to the back of the stamp is to immerse the stamp in slightly warm water. The toughest of paper and the heaviest of gums will soften and loosen up to such an extent that the stamp can be easily removed from the paper if allowed to soak for fifteen or twenty minutes—thirty at the most. The old-fashioned method of "steaming them off the envelope" is long since obsolete, and a slow, tedious process at best.

It is not always advisable to place bi-colored stamps in water, as the colors will ofttimes blur and run, thus spoiling the appearance of the stamp. Such stamps should be "floated" on the surface of the water until the paper loosens. Many bi-colored British Colonial stamps have a tendency to "run." These should be carefully separated from the others when a bunch of them are to be soaked.

Stamps should not be put into water in bunches, because after once touching the water they will stick together in small lots instead of floating around separately. This means that the stamp in the center of each of these little bunches does not get properly moistened, and the paper, as a result, fails to loosen. These stamps should be put into the water one at a time and given a push underneath the surface with one's finger.

Correct drying is a most important item in connection with this operation. A large sheet of blotting paper is the best surface on which to lay stamps which have just been removed from water. Stamps should in every instance be laid flat down upon their faces. The blotting paper holds the stamp perfectly flat because it immediately fastens onto the surface and draws the water from all points in the surface of the stamp at the same time. It is this fact which prevents the stamp from curling when drying, as would be the case if a surface other than a piece of blotting paper were used.

It will be found that some stamps have a certain amount of sticky gum left on the back of them after the paper is removed. It is advisable to remove as much of this as possible before laying the stamp face down to dry. Doing this prevents the stamp's warping, curling, or stiffening when the gum begins to dry again. This surplus gum can be easily removed if the stamp is taken between the thumb and fore-finger before it is taken from the water and the gum gently rubbed off into the water.

Some stamps will curl when drying, even when dried on blotting paper. These can be easily smoothed out by placing them between two thin sheets of clean paper and running a warm flatiron over them. Care should be taken that the iron is not too hot. This operation should never be performed on an unused stamp with gum on the back of it, as the warmth is likely to melt the gum to such an extent that it will stick to the bottom sheet of paper.

If stamps are found which are rather soiled, these can ofttimes be much brightened up in appearance if a small piece of soft cotton cloth is saturated with clean benzine and the surface of the stamp gone over with this preparation. It will do no harm to rub the stamps quite hard in order to remove the soiled spots. It is advisable before using the benzine to soak the stamps in water as this at least loosens the dirt if it does not entirly remove it.—The Haversack.

THEODORE CHAMPION

PARIS 13 rue Drouot PARIS, FRANCI

WHO BOUGHT THE 1c BRITISH GUIANA?

Several of the leading stamp collectors and dealers said yesterday they believed the King of England was the purchaser of the British Guiana postage stamp which sold for 352,000 francs, or $32,077, at the Ferrari auction in Paris last Thursday. That the stamp has gone to a British collector and would not come to America was the impression among dealers because the successful bid was made by Hugo Griebert. His name is well known among dealers here and abroad. For many years he was one of the leading stamp dealers in London. A nervous breakdown last Fall caused him to retire from business and he sold his valuable stock of stamps to the Stanley Gibbons Company of London, one of the oldest postage stamp firms in the world. Mr. Griebert has been acting as agent for some of the big English collectors, and he made several purchases at the two previous Ferrari sales.

The King of England created somewhat of a sensation several years ago in the philatelic world by purchasing what is said to be the finest copy extant of the rare 2-penny stamp of Mauritius, blue in color, 1848 issue, with the words "Post Office" on the sides of the stamp instead of "Post Paid." Very few of the earlier issue were printed. The copy obtained for the King's collection cost about $7,500, a record price then for one stamp. King George's collection, one of the best in the world, is especially rich in early Great Britain and British colonial issues.

"If the King of England should prove to have been the buyer," said J. M. Bartels of 116 Nassau Street, "he will not only have a gem to add to his British colonials, but will have the satisfaction of knowing that his collection possesses something unique in postage stamps. It is the only copy of the 1856 British Guiana issue of the 1-cent black on magenta ever discovered, and it is the only stamp of any regular Government issue of which only one copy is known.

"The late Count Philip von Ferrari owned the British Guiana stamp more than thirty years. To the best of my recollection, he bought it from an old London stamp firm, Pemberton & Co., for about £50. It has been widely known among philatelists as the gem of the Ferrari collection."

The stamp is not what collectors would term a perfect copy. Its four corners have been clipped slightly, but the design, showing a full-rigged ship with two Latin mottoes, is intact. How greatly the value of rare stamps vary in different copies of the same issue is seen in the fact that the 4-penny stamp of this same 1856 British Guiana set is fairly common, and Mr. Bartels said he recently sold one of that issue for $40.

The name of Colonel E. H. R. Green, son of the late "Hetty" Green, was mentioned as another probable buyer. Colonel Green is one of the most enthusiastic collectors in this country, and it was known that he commissioned an American agent who went to the Paris sale. It was learned that Colonel Green was not after the British Guiana specimen, his interest lying in the United States stamps, of which the Ferrari collection contained choice copies.—N. Y. Times.

Gibbons Stamp Circular

This snappy little publication is mailed free for nothing—not even postage—once a month unless the editor goes fishing or yachting. This season of the year therefore is a good time to write for a copy. This circular is not mailed to substitutors, kid collectors, send-em-back-unregistered fiends and such like. Postcards also go straight into the waste paper basket. Serious and interested collectors would do well to send for a copy and get on the list free before we close the offer with the ten thousandth name. [H

H. F. COLMAN SECOND NATIONAL BANK BLDG., WASHINGTON, D. C.

BARBUDA OVERPRINTS, 1922.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

Not since 1900 has the list of stamp issuing countries in the British West Indies been added to. In October of that year the Cayman Islands (until then using the stamps of the parent colony, Jamaica) ranged itself with the others by bringing forth ½d and 1d stamps in the commonplace De La Rue keyplate design. The beginning was a small one "to see if the venture would pay," before further sums were spent on duty plates, etc. That the venture did pay, and pay well, the catalogue will witness, and the line engraved series of 1921-22 runs to 14 values, starting modestly with the farthing, and finishing with the 10s.

But the newest member, Barbuda, enters with a series of 14 values, and if population is any judge, with much less reason than the Cayman Islands. At an Extraordinary meeting of the Executive Council of Leeward Islands, held at the Court House, St. John's, Antigua, on Friday, 24th March, 1922, the Governor (Sir Eustace Fiennes, Bart., late Governor of Seychelles) with the advice of his Council, ordered that on and after 1st July, 1922, special stamps should be used in Barbuda—these to be the current series of Leeward Islands stamps overprinted "BARBUDA."

Until now the less-than-a-thousand members of this community have gotten along with two series of postage stamps —i. e., the Presidency issue of Antigua (of which Barbuda is a dependency), and the Leeward Islands Colony series. Mails from the Island are very small, and covers bearing stamps of either series, with the Barbuda cancellation, are not at all common. With the issue of the overprinted stamps, those of Antigua will be retired, but the Leeward Islands unoverprinted stamps will continue on sale concurrently, as in the other presidencies of the Federation.

"Barbuda" has appeared before on postage stamps. On the stamps of Antigua, issued July 3rd, 1903, the seal of the Presidency as shown thereon, bears the inscription, "Edwardus VII, D. G. Britt. Omn. Rex F. D. Ind. Imp. Sigil. Inss. Antiguae et Barbudae."

The island of Barbuda, lying about 25 miles north of Antigua, of which it is a dependency, has an area of 62 square miles. It is of coral formation, and is very flat, its highest point being only 205 ft. above sea level. Reefs surround the island, and strong currents set in to shore, making navigation in these waters very dangerous for sailing craft. There are no streams, but wells furnish a good supply of water.

The growing of Sea Island cotton is the staple industry, and over 90 acres are under cultivation. The cotton is ginned locally. Indian and Guinea corn, beans, peas, cassava, potatoes, etc., are raised, and considerable trade is carried on with Antigua in turtle, dried fish, etc. There is also a Government stock farm to encourage the breeding of horses, mules, sheep, etc., for export.

Barbuda was settled by a party of colonists from St. Kitts, under Sir Thomas Warner. The early settlers were so harassed by the Caribs, that they were forced to leave, but later, they returned. In the 18th century the island was granted to the Codrington family, and was used by them as a shooting estate, and also as a stock farm from which to supply their estates in Antigua with animals. Disagreement with the Government in the closing years of the 19th century led to the seizure of the island by the Governor of the Leeward Islands, and in the subsequent legal proceedings the position of the Governor was sustained.

As a dependency of Antigua, Barbuda is controlled by a staff comprising a manager, an assistant manager, and an overseer. A magistrate visits the island two or three times a year to settle any disputes which may arise among the members of the small community.

Small sailing sloops afford the only means of communication with the other islands—the average time for the passage between Antigua and Barbuda is 5 to 6 hours, but conditions are very often unfavorable.

There is but one town, Codrington, on the east side of a large lagoon, with a population of 900 odd, who are descendants of the slaves introduced by Col. Codrington. "The village consists of wattled huts thatched with palm leaves, with paths between them scarcely wide enough to walk in, so closely are they huddled together. It has been called 'more thoroughly African than any other village in the New World'." The whites in the island number less than a score.

Like many others in the Caribbean the island was the resort of pirates and buccaneers in olden times, and there are yet to be seen the ruins of two old forts, —one at the River Anchorage, with a fine Martello tower, and the other at Spanish Point, at the southeastern extremity of the island.

The Philatelic Dictionary
Cloth Bound PRICE $2.00 Post Free

THIS great book is now in the bindery and we are prepared to take orders accompanied by cash. The expense in producing it has been so great that we feared a $2 price would not be possible. The authors, B. W. H. Poole and Willard O. Wylie, publicly acknowledge their indebtedness to Messrs. C. A. Howes and Chas. S. Thompson for assistance rendered. W. W. Jewett of the Jewett Printing Co. has also taken great pains as a producing factor in this great achievement.

The book is handsomely bound in green cloth with appropriate lettering, and no student of stamps can do without it. It represents the high watermark in philatelic book publishing and especially from the standpoint of the general collector.

On these advance orders the Dictionary will be mailed direct from the bindery at Long Island City, N. Y., some three or four weeks ahead of a Portland or Beverly mailing.

BRITISH CENTRAL AFRICA AND NYASALAND PROTECTORATE.

By FRED. J. MELVILLE.

CHAPTER II.

Stamps of the British South Africa Company Overprinted "B. C. A."

ISSUE I.—The first issue of postage stamps for the British Central Africa Protectorate was created in 1891, by overprinting the issues of the British South Africa Company with the large Roman capitals B.C.A. The denominations current at the time in the Company's territory of Southern Rhodesia were fourteen in number, 1d, 2d, 4d, 6d, 8d, 1sh, 2sh, 2sh 6d, 5sh, 10sh, £1, £2, £5, £10. The original stamps had been engraved by the London firm of Messrs. Bradbury, Wilkinson & Co., Ltd., in taille douce and on thin greyish-white wove paper. The paper has the manufacturers' (William Collins, Sons & Co.) watermark once to the sheet. It consists of a monogram W.C.S. & Co. (the C enclosing the other letters of the monogram), with the word EXTRA to left and STRONG to right. Curved watermarked letters above read PURE LINEN and below WOVE BANK, the whole of the lettering and monogram being in outline characters.

There appear to be slight variations in the sheet watermark. In one variety the number 139 is added below in addition to the marks described above, while in another the words EXTRA STRONG do not appear. The number may have formed part of the watermark in each case, but in one it has possibly been cut away in trimming the sheet. A careful study of the watermark shows variations in the spacing of the letters, particularly the spacing between the letters "W" and "o" of "WOVE".

The paper varies from thin, semi-transparent paper to an opaque paper of medium thickness.

The design of the original stamps (all values) has for its central device the arms of the British South Africa Company:—

Blazon: Gules, the chief semé of bezants, the base semé of ears of wheat, or, a fesse wavy argent between two bulls passant in chief, and an elephant passant in base, all proper: the fesse charged with three galleys, sable.

Crest: A lion guardant passant, or, supporting with its dexter fore-paw an ivory tusk erect, proper.

Motto: "Justice, Freedom, Commerce."

A white arched tablet at the top of the stamp contains the word BRITISH in letters of colour, and a wavy tablet of colour immediately below it contains the white capitals SOUTH AFRICA COMPANY. The value tablet is below the arms design. The whole of the background is composed of horizontal lines of colour. There is a line all round at the extremity of the shading of the background, broken into at the top by the white label containing the word BRITISH. An additional thin outer rule completes the stamps of the values 1d to 10sh. The perforation of these stamps is 14¼.

The inscription of value on the 1d, 6d, 1sh, 2sh, 5sh and 10sh stamps is in words of outline capitals on a bevelled tablet shaded with slanting lines

On the 2d, 4d, 8d there is no tablet inserted, but the value is printed in coloured Roman capitals TWO PENCE, etc., and these three denominations have the value printed in a different colour from the rest of the design.

In the 2sh 6d stamp a bevelled tablet is used, but the ground of the tablet is without any lines of shading and the words TWO SHILLINGS & SIXPENCE appear in coloured sans serif capitals.

The higher values, £1, £2, £5 and £10 have the value tablet similar to the 1d value, but the whole of the design described for the lower values has been enclosed in an additional and ornate scroll work frame, considerably enlarging the size of the stamp.

Messrs. Bradbury, Wilkinson & Co. inform us that the original stamps were only engraved in sheets of sixty stamps, not, as has been suggested recently by a writer on the Company's stamps, in sheets of 240. There were no special printings of the original stamps required for the overprinting, and the Company in each case sent back quantities of the already printed stamps to be overprinted. The overprinting was done at frequent intervals between the years 1891-1894.

Stereos were made from type, and, as the engravers state that only one font of type was used, the occurrence of thick and thin lettering which appears to be fairly regular on the printed sheets must have been due to the stereotyping. The complete sheet of 60 was overprinted at one impression in the case of the low values 1d to 10sh; but in the case of the £1, £2, £5, £10 a few were in each case overprinted singly, as also were the £25 and £50 values used for revenue purposes.

The letters B.C.A. are large block capitals 3½mm high, and a period occurs after each letter. There are distinct variations in the thickness of the lettering occurring on the same sheet which are divisible into thin and thick letters, and there are minor varieties of the stops, which are normally square but occasionally round, and in the seventh stamp on the top row the final stop appears to have joined the right leg of the A.

The stamps were supplied by the British South Africa Company at the request of the Commissioner of the British Central Africa Protectorate, who also administered the Northern Territory belonging to the Company.

The first issue was despatched from London in April, 1891, though we find no chronicle of them in philatelic journals prior to October of that year. With the exception of the 2d, 4d and 8d, the stamps are printed in single colours, and there are but few variations in shades, the 6d having the widest range.

ISSUE II.—In the original series of British South Africa there was no 4sh denomination, and the need of such a value, possibly not alone for postal but also for fiscal use in the Protectorate, brought about the issue of a provisional stamp The words FOUR SHILLINGS, in two lines of heavy sans serif

The Rubber City Stamp Club of Akron, Ohio, deserves a great deal of credit for the showing it has made in the past two years. Starting from a nucleus of about four or five loyal workers, it has brought itself up to a point where an average attendance, always above twenty, can be depended on.

Naturally, they have had to develop a great deal of new material, in fact have encouraged the younger collectors to join, and while the mutual benefits derived cannot be determined at the present day, they are looking forward to the future. However, a great many of the present members are of the class who were collectors as boys, and gave it up, "because they thought it was a kid's hobby", but upon finding others of their class proceeded to dig up their buried "treasure" and take a renewed interest in the game.

The Club believes in advertising, and every opportunity to do so has been made use of. Local papers have been liberal to a great extent, window displays and school papers have been used, but the greatest of all is the fact that the m bers are not afraid to "talk shop" they are proud of the fact that the stamp collectors.

Back of all this, of course, lies fact that there have been workers: years ago they could be singled out now they cover the membership Like all clubs, we have lost some m bers during our existence, but wit that the active membership now between forty and fifty. capitals, were surcharged in black on the 5sh orange-yellow stamp of the 1891 issue. The measurements of the additional overprint are letters 2½ mm. high, top line 5½ mm. long, bottom line 12 mm. from "S" to "S". The issue of the provisional is ascribed to August, 1892. No varieties of this additional overprint have been noted.

ISSUE III.—This provisional stamp was in use only a few months, being superseded by a regular 4sh stamp almost concurrently with the introduction of a stamp of that denomination in the British South Africa Company's set in 1893. The new regular issue 4sh stamp was similar in every respect to the other values except that the value is impressed on a plain white ground in small coloured block capitals, in a separate colour from the rest of the stamp. The colours were slate for the design and vermilion for the value, and the consignment was forwarded in February, 1893.

ISSUE IV.—A 3sh provisional issue was made in October, 1893, being created by overprinting twenty-three sheets (of sixty stamps) of the newly issued 4s slate and vermilion stamp, with the words THREE SHILLINGS in two lines of elongated sans serif capitals in black. The surcharge measures: letters, 2½ mm. high; top line, 7½ mm. long; bottom line, 12 mm. from "S" to "S". The issue is said to have been limited to twenty-three sheets, making a total issue of 1380 stamps.

ISSUE V.—This stamp was replaced two years later (October, 1895) after the British South Africa Company had in March, 1894, prepared and issued a regular 3s stamp for their other territories, by a regular 3sh overprinted B.C.A. The design and lettering of value was similar to the 4sh, but the colour of the design was light brown, and the value was impressed in green.

ISSUE VI. (Provisionals).—In 1895, the stock of one penny stamps having run short, a quantity of the 2d sea-green and vermilion were said to have been permitted by the High Commissioner to be bisected diagonally, and each portion to serve as a stamp of the value of one penny. The permission was given to the postmasters at Blantyre, Chiromo and Zomba, and it is further stated (London Philatelist, V., 236) that this was only for a day or two, and that only fifty of these provisionals were used.

At the same time preparations were made for a properly overprinted provisional stamp of one penny value. The order was entrusted, in the first place, to the local printing office at Blantyre, and the 2d sea-green and vermilion stamp was selected for the overprinting of the words ONE PENNY.

According to Mr. Whitfield King, whose information was derived not many months later (July, 1896) from the Postmaster-General, Mr. J. E. McMaster, "the type was set up to surcharge a sheet of 60, the printer having stringent orders to see that the type on every stamp was identical, so that there should be no varieties. Some proofs were struck off on plain paper and submitted for approval, when some few alterations were found necessary. When at last the types were approved the printer was told to get ahead with h printing, but apparently he found putting a sheet of thin gummed perforated stamps into his printing was quite a different thing to puttir a sheet of plain thick paper, consequ ly, the first sheet came out with the charge misplaced, being much too l so that the bar which should have celled the word 'TWOPENCE' w great deal above it. The printer th upon put the sheet in a second time,

NEWS GLEANINGS.

A new stamp dealer in Chicago has put out his shingle, lettered N. B. Paulson. He has quarters in the First National Bank Building and confines his dealings to the stamps of the United States, of which he has been a keen student for years. A dealer of the type Mr. Paulson is a desirable addition to commercial circles.

We had a visit recently from Mr. E. Kirby who will be remembered as a stamp dealer several decades ago. Mr. Kirby is now a representative in the Michigan Assembly from Van Buren County, Michigan.

A card has been received from Mr. Harry A. Diamant of St. Louis, announcing his safe arrival in England. No doubt Mr. Diamant will return to attend the Springfield convention pepfull of interesting experiences gathered on his European stamp tour.

Our vibrant contemporary, Stamp Collecting, calls the Neurope issues, the Cinderellas of the stamp album and the thought follows that they may be destined to ride in the golden coach.

We have some good things up our sleeve. Several of Mr. Knapp's illustrated Confederate studies are in hand and we shall soon begin to have cartoons frequently subjects by our pet little artist, Irvin, who will set the stands a-going.

The Chicago Philatelic Society, founded 1886, is having the time of its long life and the attendance latterly at meetings has been so large that it has changed Parlor H of the Morrison Hotel to its regular meeting place, on the first and third Thursday of each month. Edd. is Pres.

That Youth's Companion article recently on the statistics of stamp issues in general and our own in particular was a real thing and we may well believe that the "American writer on stamps has made available to The Companion some interesting facts regarding the issuing of stamps."

The Philatelic Gossip has reappeared in twice-a-month form. We urge our subscribers to write for a sample copy at Salton, Kansas, in order that they may get a fair idea of its merits. We are of the opinion that it will prove a valuable asset to philately.

It is requested that all parties having had unsatisfactory dealings with Barker of Toronto write J. Taylor, Acting District Superintendent, G. P. O., Montreal, Que., giving full particulars of transaction.

The firm of Stanley Gibbons, 391 Strand, London, England, has favored us with a copy of their Illustrated Guide for stamp collectors, giving full particulars of the Gibbons' albums, handbooks, catalogs and philatelic requisites with suggestions on "How to get together an outfit". It may be obtained for free from the above address.

THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF BELGIUM.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

CHAPTER XII.

The 1883 Issue.

A few years after the issue of the 5 franc stamps of the preceding series a 2 francs denomination was mooted. In October, 1882, the Timbre-Poste announced "We are about to have a new stamp of the value of Two Francs, the preparation of which has been confided to the nimble hands of Messrs. De La Rue & Co., of London, for the trifling remuneration of 5,000 francs." While this particular value was never issued De La Rue did provide four new stamps for Belgium shortly after the above announcement and also prepared a die for the 2 francs from which "specimens" were printed. One of these was described in the Philatelic Record for January, 1883, as follows:—

"I have seen an imperforate 'specimen' copy of the Two Francs adhesive. The portrait is a profile, to left, closely resembling that on the current stamps. The frame is that of the new Barbados, but letters BELGIQUE above, and DEUX FRANCS below, in white on color. The ornaments in the spandrels are the same as those of the twopence, New Zealand, issued 1874, but are in color on white instead of the reverse. The combination is, I should say, dear at 5,000 francs. The color of the specimen I have seen is as nearly as possible that of the late lamented Venetian-red one penny, De La Rue, of Great Britain."

Although the 2 francs value mentioned above was never issued, four values were produced by De La Rue & Co., as already stated. It appears that the portrait on the preceding set had never been considered altogether satisfactory and as the dies were engraved on wood difficulty was found in making electrotypes from them of the desired clearness. It was also thought that the method of manufacture hardly supplied sufficient safeguards against possible counterfeiting and ultimately a commission was appointed by Mr. Sainctlette, Minister of the Railway, Post and Telegraph services, to suggest something more satisfactory. The findings of this commission practically amounted to nothing more than that steel engraving should be substituted for wood engraving for the dies. Messrs. De La Rue & Co., were approached and entrusted with the preparation of dies for six values—10, 20, 25 and 50 centimes and 1 and 2 francs. According to Mr. Bouvez, this occurred in 1881, and the dies were delivered to the Belgian government on June 1st, 1882. This being so, it is certainly curious that none of the new values made their appearance for more than a year later. On August 29th, 1883, a Royal decree was published announcing "(1) a new type of postage stamp with Our portrait is created for the values of 10 centimes and over; (2) the values and colors of the postage stamps of this type, as well as the date of their issue, will be decided on by the Minister of Public Works; and (3) the present stamps of 10 centimes and over will continue to be used until the existing supply is exhausted". On the same day a Ministerial order was promulgated giving particulars of the values, etc., as quoted below:—

25 centimes blue.
50 centimes violet.
1 franc lilac.
2 francs brown.

Art. 2.—The following colors are adopted for the values of the existing designs below 10 centimes:—

1 centime reseda.
2 centimes yellow.
5 centimes green.

Art. 3.—The new postage stamps and also those that are to be changed in color will be issued on January 1st next."

On October 3rd, 1883, another decree was published stating that the 10 and 20 centimes stamps would be issued on October 20th following and the 25 and 50 centimes on November 1st.

On October 12th, a departmental order was issued to postmasters on the subject of the new stamps and it was stated, among other matters:—

"The first supplies of the new 10, 20, 25 and 50 centimes stamps will be forwarded immediately.

It should be noticed that the new set of postage stamps comprises, among others, a 2 franc value, and also that there are no 40 centimes or 5 franc stamps. Existing stocks of these two values are, however, to be used up."

Finally on December 31st, another decree was issued further postponing the issue of the new 1 and 2 francs stamps until a date "to be determined on later".

The 10 and 20 centimes values were placed on sale on October 20th and the 25 and 50 centimes on November 1st as scheduled by the revised decrees but whether their issue was hurried on account of shortage of stocks of the old types or because the administration wanted to try the effect of the new designs on the public, we cannot say. While the stamps are admirable in their execution so far as workmanship is concerned the portrait of King Leopold was such a caricature that it was evident they would prove a failure.

The portrait is in profile, looking to left, and is the same on all four values. In each instance, it is on a ground of close horizontal lines enclosed within a circular frame for the 10 and 50 centimes and an upright oval one on the other two values. The borders are distinctive for each denomination and on all four the only inscriptions are "BELGIQUE and "POSTES". On the 10c these are above and below the portrait in slightly graded capitals while on small squares in each corner the numerals "10" are shown. On the 20c the inscriptions are also above and below the portrait but are on the oval band enclosing it and the numerals "20" are shown at the sides. On the 25c the numerals are shown on the oval band above and below the portrait while "BELGIQUE" is at left and "POSTES" at right. On the 50c the name is on a straight tablet extending across the top of the design while at the base, on a similar tablet, is "50 POSTES 50". In each instance the spandrels are filled with formal ornamentation.

The dies, as we have already observed, were the work of De La Rue and while Mr. de Bont says the plates were made and the stamps printed by this firm also, other writers all agree that the actual manufacture of the plates and the printing of the stamps took place at the Government Printing Works at Malines. The perforation is of no assistance in settling this point for the Belgium Government and De La Rue were using comb-machines with the same gauge of 14 at this particular period.

The stamps were all printed on unwatermarked paper as before and, owing to the fact that they were so soon withdrawn, it is highly improbable that there was more than one printing of each denomination.

Mr. Bouvez says the numbers printed were as follows:—

10 centimes,	9,000,000	stamps.
20 "	300,000	"
50 "	120,000	"

There are no shades worthy of the name but all four values are known imperforate and regarding these, a footnote in Gibbons' catalogue says, "It is stated that five sheets of each value were issued imperf." There is nothing, however, to indicate they were regularly issued and they are probably proof impressions which some one managed to obtain by favor.

Owing to the fact that the King's portrait was considered so unflattering that he himself raised objections to it and public criticisms were so caustic, steps were at once taken to produce new designs and it was decided not to proceed with the issue of the 1 and 2 franc values. Mr. Bouvez says a number of trial sheets of these stamps were printed and afterwards destroyed, but we hardly think plates were ever made. Essays of the 2 francs printed from the die are known, but if any were ever made of the 1 franc we have been unable to trace news of them.

By J. W. SAMPSON.

APTER IV.—Continental Print (concluded).

rill.—Whether the 7 cent or any r stamp of the Continental Bank e Company's manufacture was regu- issued with grill is not definitely vn by documentary evidence and is tioned by some authorities. The remains, however, that considerable erimental work was done on grills he Continental Company, new ma- es and equipment being installed for purpose, and Mr. Luff states that ral thousand sheets were unquestion- grilled, his informants having been Treasurer of the concern and the erintendent of the department in h the work was done.

hile listed in the standard catalog nused condition only, and regarded many as essays rather than issued ps, the writer has a used specimen he grilled Continental 7 cent which s the O. K. of so many experts that e seems to be no doubt about the ineness of the grill. A solitary can- d specimen, however, does not by means prove that the Continental d 7 cent stamp was issued, or that it was turned over to the Office Department, for essays proofs of issues of that period, in or less finished condition, came on narket through various channels and ould not be strange if a few copies used for postage.

ie size of the Continental grill is x 9½ millimeters, made up of 10 x 12 of points, and the grill is very ly and distinctly impressed.

unterfeit grills are occasionally seen ie Continental 7 cent, but these are ly the crude and easily detected eries of "sharpers" who were not enough to distinguish between the nal and Continental prints. These terfeit grills are usually more like genuine National grill in size and rance.

per.—In thickness and texture, the inental papers vary more widely those used in the preceding issue. paper has been described by various orities as "thin to medium thick e wove", but the range is greater this description indicates. At one me is a white paper, so thin that it ranslucent and clearly shows the m and color through the stamp. At other extreme is a yellowish paper nusual thickness, opaque, hard, and ely different in appearance from the e paper.

hardness the Continental papers also the gamut, from a crisp white bond ugh various degrees of softness to a r very nearly as soft as that used by American Bank Note Company in and later. This softest paper, how- is not of the same texture as the rican, and a careful comparison re- the difference.

-called "ribbed paper" specimens are sionally offered, but the writer con- s that he does not hold them in high m as collectible varieties. The cor- tions, supposed to be characteristic ibbed paper, are very difficult to t.

uble paper, found in several of the r values of the 1873 issue, is not vn in the 7 cent stamp, and the same ie of the "cog wheel punch" variety, e reason being that these experiments not made until 1877, after the 7 rate was abolished and the stamp ntinued. The 7 cent also evidently ed the "chemical paper" experiments.

rforation.—Some rather careless s was done on the perforating ma- s in the Continental plant. Perfo- l 12, the normal distance between of vertical perforations was 21 meters, yet occasionally these rows spaced only 20 millimeters apart, sometimes as far as 22 or even 23 meters apart. As great a variation ars in the spacing between horizontal s, so that the 7 cent stamp is found a maximum length of 30 millimeters een perforations, though its normal th is only 27 millimeters. These variations in the spacing have not only produced a deplorably high percentage of off-center stamps but have also encouraged the activities of the "imperforate" fiend. Stamps from the vertical row next to the center of the sheet, issued with a straight edge on the side, sometimes have the vertical perforations so far over on the other side that several millimeters of the design of the next stamp is visible,—and by clipping the perforations the faker finds it easy to produce a "part perforate" or "imperforate" variety convincing enough to charm money from the pockets of the credulous. Several values of this issue occur in imperforate and part perforate condition, but no authentic specimens of the 7 cent have been recorded.

Specimens with double perforation at sides, and perforated diagonally across the stamp, are sometimes seen, the latter hard to account for except by the theory that the operator of the perforating machine did his best to encourage the use of bisects.

Gum.—The gum used on the Continental 7 cent varies from brownish yellow to yellowish white, and is on the whole lighter in color than the gum used on the National issue.

Color.—The vermilion ink used in the 1873 issue contained less red and more yellow than the National ink, and the characteristic color is generally known as orange vermilion. There is a fairly wide range of shades, from dark to light, but only one shade that is really distinctive,—a very bright orange vermilion which seems to be the result of a variation in the ink rather than merely an over-inking of the plates. Only about 15,000 impressions were taken from the Continental plate, hardly enough to wear the plate perceptibly, and the beautiful, clear, deep impressions sometimes seen, which contrast so strongly with the average specimen and seem to present a different shade variety, are as likely to have been issued in 1874 or 1875 as earlier. In fact one of the finest specimens that the writer has seen is on a cover dated 1875.

Quantity.—The Continental Bank Note Company printed and delivered to the Post Office Department in 1873, from the beginning of its contract period (early in May) to December 31st, 588,500 7 cent stamps. In the twelve months of 1874 it delivered 1,370,000 7 cent stamps. In 1875, from January 1st to the discontinuance of this denomination, 1,120,000 were delivered.

The records of the Postmaster General, as already noted in connection with the National issue, do not take into account the change in printings. The data available show, however, the following distributions of this value:

Quarter Ending		Quantity
Sept.	30, 1873	229,700
Dec.	31, 1873	231,100
March	31, 1874	413,700
June	30, 1874	351,300
Sept.	30, 1874	349,800
Dec.	31, 1874	425,700
June	30, 1875	381,400

Discontinuance.—A circular issued by the Third Assistant Post Master General on June 21st, 1875, stated; "The changes in foreign postage will render unnecessary the further use of the 7, 12 and 24 cent stamps, and they will accordingly be discontinued. In order to avoid the liability of mistake caused by the near similarity in color between the 2 cent and 10 cent stamp, the former will in future be printed in vermilion, the color of the discontinued 7 cent stamp."

The stock of the discontinued values was ordered to be used up as far as possible, but whether further supplies of the 7 cent were forwarded to post offices is doubtful. The Post Office Department records show that there were 422,600 "remainders" of this stamp, but as far as known do not indicate whether this number was destroyed. It seems fairly safe to assume, however, that after the official notice of discontinuance

EDITORIAL.

Come—Still they come. Readers having noticed with approbation, our custom to place on record references to stamp collecting that appear in books, periodicals, newspapers and all other publications, spare no effort to favor us with citations and clippings of the kind. In fact, we are hopelessly involved and we cannot do justice to all of the matter that is sent in to us. We find that no mention has been made of a scholarly contribution to Science, the article having been sent in by Professor T. H. Goodspeed of the University of California. As he says: "I do not remember having noticed any reference in a periodical of this sort to stamp collecting." The theme of the study which is by William Drumm Johnston, Jr., Walker Museum, University of Chicago, is: "The Acquisitive Instinct in Children as an Educational Stimulus." We seize at once on the philatelic piece-de-resistance of the able disquisition: "Consider now the case of the stamp collector who has outgrown the desire for mere numbers. He considers methods of arrangement other than size or color, considering time and country of greater moment. He associates designs with historical events and the portraits with national heroes. He notices the evolution of symbols and designs appearing on succeeding issues of stamps, as well as the progress made in printing and engraving from the earlier to the more modern representatives. Here is being developed the 'scientific attitude of mind,' the expression of that desire to classify, arrange, and correlate fact. The comparing of concepts, of memory images, the formation of judgments, and reasoning enter into the mental process, while instinct is eclipsed by thought. Such a collection will furnish many lessons in reasoning; for in solving the problems arising in classifications the habit of consistent thinking is materially aided." Here, indeed, is high testimony to the intellectual value of philately.

Card—Mr. R. H. Eilers writes to speak of a collection of one penny reds of Great Britain that he secured recently, composed of reconstructed plates from 71 to 224. It contains 32,000 positions out of a possible 36,000; and naturally the former owner had to examine millions of the penny reds in order to build it up.

Cuba—We have come into possession of the following letter addressed to a collector, supposedly, of Hamilton, Ohio, by E. L. Rathbone, Director-General of Posts; the date is September 1, 1899. We read: "These stamps were put on sale on the Island of Cuba this date, Sept. 1, 1899, and are of the first sheets issued." This sheet, showing signs of age, recalls vividly those days so charged with expectancy, immediately preceding the sale of the U. S. stamps surcharged for use in Cuba. The Spanish-American war ended in December, 1898, and the stirrings of pride of possession of a far-flung empire were being felt by Americans. The revenue stamp and other issues occasioned by the war had given a keen edge to philately in this country. It should be mentioned that the collecting of plate-numbers of our issues, beginning with plate one of the two-cent. 1894, Bureau print, had gained wide popularity here and when their collecting store was destined to become increased by the Cuban surcharged stamps in their fascinating aspect, we were all agog with excitement, to quote the resurgent reporter. If our memory is not at fault the enterprising exponent of peppy philately, Mr. Eustace Bertram Power went post-haste to the island and gathered up armfuls of the plate-number strips (three stamps to the strip) of the seven-day wonders. Times change and customs with them and no stamp may monopolize the center of the stage for long time.

Case—Speaking of change, one may well dwell upon the twilight of the stamp in this country by reason of the advantages possessed by the meter-mail machines. In fact, we find in an issue of the monthly magazine of the City Bank Club an article on the "passing of the stamp." However, it is much too early to talk about the elimination of the postage stamp as it will stick with us for years to come. That its use may become restricted is a conservative prediction but philatelists refuse to show any concern over this prospect. There was a time when the repression of the stamp would have been "viewed with alarm" but now that there are so many stamps to choose from, the collector would perhaps feel a relief if all stamp making were done away with. However, new issues have a tonic effect on our pursuit and we shall not see the day when there is not something new under the philatelic sun. It may not be denied, at that, that postal progress is inimical to the continued growth of the use of the postage stamp. The electric light did not throw gas out of a job and no more will the meter wholly supplant the stamp.

Call—A reader shows us an envelope that was sent from the National Soldiers' Home, Dayton, Ohio, to a point in Indiana, bearing a six-cent Continental, cancelled in blue, in addition to the postmark in the same color, "National Soldiers Home, 1877," and what evidently is the name of the month but is indecipherable.

Cast—The Cincinnati Philatelic Society, Branch No. 46, of the American Philatelic Society, nominated a ticket at its meeting of April 26, 1922, when Wm. C. Michaels of Kansas City, Mo., was chosen for the presidency. Nominations for the Board of Vice Presidents were Major J. A. Harris, Jr., W. W. MacLaren and Otto F. Moses, all of Cleveland. The treasuryship was awarded to Howard H. Elliott of Winchenden, Mass.; Dr. H. A. Davis was named as secretary again and Eugene Klein was nominated as international secretary. Mr. Phillips was named, according to custom, as one of the two directors at large. The nomination of Mr. Michaels as president removes automatically, we suppose, the two other gentlemen and Mr. Michaels as the Kansas City candidates for the vice-presidency. Mr. Michaels is an able man and ardent as a philatelist. Mr. Michaels is one of the oldest members of the A. P. S. and the first convention that he attended was that held at St. Louis in 1899. He then hailed from Horton, Kansas, and at this convention he achieved a record for almost unbroken silence. However, as we live, we learn; and at the Milwaukee convention of 1921, Mr. Michaels had a good bit to say that was germane to the subject, as our highfaulutin friends would say. We wonder if the young Michaels who attended the 1889 convention had any idea then that he would once occupy the throne so admirably fitted then by the mighty John K. Tiffany. None of us have "walked with Shelley" but some of us have talked with John Kerr Tiffany, perhaps the greatest of them all.

WASTING THE TIME OF CONGRESS.

A typical example of waste of time in Congress is revealed in the Congressional Record in its official report of the action taken in the Senate on a bill which originated in the House and which has for its purpose the authorization of the use of special cancellation stamps in certain post offices. The bill as reported by the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads provided:

"That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by him, to permit the use of special canceling stamps as follows: In the Gloucester, Massachusetts, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'Don't, Miss 300th Anniversary Celebration, Gloucester, Mass., August, 1923.' In the Chicago, Illinois, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'Chicago Boys' Week, May 19-25, 1922.' In the Sunbury, Pennsylvania, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'Old Home Week, 150th Birthday, July 1-2-3-4, 1922.' In the Indianapolis, Indiana, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'Indiana Health Exposition, May 19-27, 1922, Indianapolis, Ind.' In the Chicago, Illinois, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, December 2nd to 9th, 1922.' In the Chicago, Illinois, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'Pageant of Progress Exposition, Chicago, July 29 to August 14, 1922': Provided, That no permit shall be granted for a longer period than six months and the duration of the event to be advertised: Provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize the expenditure of any postal funds or appropriation either for the purchase of special canceling stamps or post marking dies or for adapting canceling machines for the use of such stamps or dies or for installing the same, but all expense shall be prepaid by the permittee.

"Section 2. That any permission granted under this act is hereby revoked in the event the Government shall find it expedient or necessary to use special canceling stamps or post marking dies for its own purposes."

When the bill came up Senator Jones of Washington moved to amend it by inserting "In the Tacoma, Washington, post office, dies bearing the words and figures 'See Rainier National Park via Tacoma, season June-September, 1922,'" and Senator Moses of New Hampshire offered an amendment to insert the words "In the Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and the Dover, New Hampshire, post offices, dies bearing the words and figures 'Three Hundreth Anniversary of the first settlements in New Hampshire, 1623-1923.'"

These amendments were adopted by the Senate and the bill was passed. It must now be submitted to the House again. If the Representatives pass it as amended it will go to the President for his signature.

In such transactions the time and thought of Representatives, Senators and President are diverted from the serious business of government to trivial matters which should be wholly within the jurisdiction of an executive department. If Congress wants to have special cancellation stamps used to advertise local celebrations, fairs and festivals it should enact a statute authorizing the Postmaster-General to grant the necessary permission under such restrictions as it may think wise. If there is objection to the practice, it should be prohibited. But for members of Congress to spend their time enacting bills such as that which we quote above entails a useless expenditure of time and energy which should be devoted to the important problems before the national lawmakers.—N. Y. Herald, April 19, 1922.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—The Costa Rica with bar cancellations should not be advertised in the WEEKLY on the basis of catalog value. Advertisers will kindly note.

—On April 26 the Philatelic Society of Pittsburgh, Pa., gave a farewell supper in honor of N. A. Georgantis, who will shortly sail for Greece on an extended visit. We are indebted to William Moss, Sec., for a copy of a very novel menu card. There was a large attendance and the "Turn on the hot air" gave opportunity for no fewer than twenty to participate in the post prandial part of the Program.

—The Marks Stamp Co., Toronto, Can., has sent us their Wholesale and Retail Pricelist No. 66. This firm claims to be the largest wholesale and retail firm of stamp dealers in British North America and we know of no one who would dare question this statement. The book before us with its listing of items by the 100 and 1000 is tangible evidence of the extent of the firm's stock. All kinds of accessories are also noticed.

—A mistake has occurred in the pricing of the Newfoundland coronation stamps in the advertisement of the Home of the Postage Stamp, Joseph V. K. Wells, manager. In the WEEKLY of April 29, the price was made $3.50, where in previous issues it had been $3.65. The firm will allow the new price to stand.

—A. H. Pike, Sta. G, Buffalo, N. Y., favors us with the numbers of the Collectors Digest, issued in 1922, and we are greatly impressed with the specialistic work that this publication is engaged in. Mr. Pike is greatly interested in philatelic literature and in the indexing of the same. The magazine also covers post markings. Our best suggestion is that if you are interested in this publication and what it stands for, you send for a sample copy.

—Noticing J. W. Sampson's article in this week's MEKEEL'S in reference to the lines across the frame of the 5c, No. 283, I looked over about thirty copies from one of our stock books and found one with about six lines and another with all of them opposite the lines on the shoulder. Here is a chance for Phil Ward to find out if any of the old plates are still on hand and which one shows this, which should be classed as a minor variety.—HARRY B. MASON.

SOMETHING ON HIS MIND.

When a Lime Juicer has something on his mind he writes to The Times. Not being a member of that tribe (for nine generations past) I was surprised, though not altogether displeased, at seeing my former letter to you in print. Neither am I a dealer and I never expect to be one despite the tone of the letter. I am a collector, "pure and simple(?)". Being new at this game, information is what was and is sought. I'd like to get your (?) point of view. Why should a black thread on a Swiss No. 40 be worth 20% more than one with a yellow thread which has been made black by the cancellation ink and when you can't find any threads in the first place? Personally, I collect postal adhesives and get a good kick out of it. I would like to collect $50.00 California gold slugs or Texas Gulf Stock but can't afford them. In the meantime I am assembling the greatest collection of real varieties of stamps that catalog 2c and under on the Coast. The dealers have my sympathy but they don't get much of my coin. Most (one exception as per usual) are my friends and I enjoy their acquaintance BUT it seems to me that "Stamp collecting for profit" is a delusion and a snare that permanently hurts a game that I would like to see fostered. Money spent for stamps is not entirely lost and the pleasures are lasting if not built on false hopes.

L. W. WICKES.

on June 21st, 1875, few if any further requisitions for 7 cent stamps would have reached the Department, as public demand must have practically stopped with the adoption of the new five cent rate.

The latest use of the 7 cent known by the writer is December, 1877, and this is not on first-class mail but on a shipment of hardware or machine parts, the stamp being used in conjunction with a 5 cent Taylor and a 2 cent vermilion. Supplies of the 7 cent remaining in the possession of post masters were probably not entirely "digested" for several years after the change of rate, and were worked off gradually to shippers of fourth-class matter as in the example mentioned, or for use in combination with other stamps on registered letters. Several off-cover specimens have been seen, however, with fancy cancellations of a type indicating use in small towns as late as 1885 to 1887. Export and import houses must have had considerable quantities of this stamp left on hand. Since the preceding chapter was written a collector has reported having been presented with a strip of o. g. National sevens, by an old man formerly connected with an importing concern in Philadelphia, and our informant states that the donor remembers having "a drawer full" of these 7 cent stamps, all in strips, in his office for many years after 1875. Whether these mint gems and others of their kind were eventually used on mail, or became the prized possessions of philatelists, we can only conjecture.

COMPETITION
A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.
I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.
Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

NEW DISCOVERY
UNITED STATES—ERROR
1922, 1c green, Perforated 11.
Horizontal Pair — Imperforated Between
I have recently obtained a few mint pairs and blocks (the available supply) of the current 1c green, imperforated between the horizontal pairs. These will probably be listed as Scott's No. 409b. They are errors similar to the 5c blue (Scott's No. 413a), the 50c lilac (No. 426a) and the 1c surface print (No. 435c), all of which are quite scarce and much sought after.
These must not be confused with those of the 2c and 20c showing blind perforations, for they show no traces whatsoever of perforations. Only a few are available, and specialists in United States stamps should express their interest promptly. It will be recalled that the other 20th Century U. S. errors of perforation are selling today at much more than the price at which they were first offered, and even then, the commonest are practically unobtainable.
What else do you require in the way of late U. S. BLOCKS from 1890 on?

UNITED STATES.—In a recent Chronicle attention was called to a number of the choice United States items that were going to be sold at the April 7th session of the Ferrari Sale. Mr. Edward Stern who has just returned from Paris kindly sends us early information as to some of the prices realized.

In estimating the prices paid in dollars I have figured the French franc at 9.10 and have added the 17½% tax which is charged by the French Government. The "rara avis" of the United States section was the only known copy of the Boscawen Postmaster Provisional and this stamp which is on the entire cover was purchased for Mr. Arthur Hinds at about $11,225. This same gentlemen, by the way, purchased the famous 1c British Guiana variously said to have been purchased by the King of England, Col. Green and Mr. Caspary. The other unique postmaster, the 5c Lockport on cover brought $8,000. The Alexandria on buff, off cover, one of four copies known and the 10c Baltimore on cover, one of three known, each brought $6,500. This is a great amount, less than two similar stamps are supposed to have recently changed hands in this country. A 5c Baltimore on cover brought $500 and another $430. The 5c envelopes sold from $300 to $375 while an entire 10c Baltimore envelope found a new home at $6,500.

Two fine Brattleboro off cover sold at $800 and $850 and two cut rather close at $225 and $235. A Milbury unused brought $1,800. Two Annapolis sold at $60 and $105 each while a third showing somewhat different postmarks brought $2,800. New Havens sold at $500, $2,100 and $5,000 in accordance with condition. A simple frank of the New Haven postmaster and franks of postmasters of those days are not scarce sold for $200.

A fine 5c Providence on cover with the town postmark hitting the stamp, very unusual indeed, sold at $620 while a mint 10c brought $35. A superb unused vertical pair of the 5c St. Louis on greenish came to New York at $695 while single used copies sold from $60 to $110.00, according to condition. Single copies of the 5c on gray lilac sold from $55 to $80 while a copy on pelure paper moved at $170. A mint 10c on green brought $225, used copies from $60 to $105, while one on gray lilac sold for $110. Two pelure 10c brought $65 and $175 respectively. A 20c on gray lilac cut into at the bottom corner sold for $250.

In the regular issues many fine things were grouped together. For instance the only known pair of the 90c imperf. 1860, Scott's No. 39, was sold with one of three known pairs of the 30c, a single 30c, two single 24c and a 5c 1851 all unused at $8,350. A bisect of the 10c 1847 on piece of cover was sold at $130. A mint 1c August issue of 1861, $900, a 3c at $29, a 5c at $375, a 10c at $100, a 24c with some perfs. trimmed at $112.50, a 30c at $550 and a straight edged 90c at $320, or the entire set without the 12c which is the rarest at about $2,575.

One lot consisting of the 1867 grilled all over 3c mint, the 5c and 30c used, together with other imperfs, and odd grill sold at $1,500. A fine unused 90c 1869 brought $70, while a used 15c invert defective but very fine appearing, $165. A $5 State mint came to this country at $185. Will try and cover some of the rare Confederates in the next Chronicle.

Mr. Sampson in a recent issue of MEKEEL'S calls attention to the 5c issue of 1890, showing the lines of the coat passing through the white surrounding oval at the left bottom. This variety was noted, I think by the Nassau Stamp Company, some time ago. It has always been considered a "double entry" and I think if the sheet is examined carefully it will be noted that if the variety appears more than once each will differ from the other. In other words it will fall into the class with the well known 12c current design from plate No. 6,900. The 10c 1898 with which it is compared is from an entirely new die. Another wonderful "double entry" in these issues is to be found in the case of the 4c 1898 wherein a good portion of the stamp is double.

Mr. George A. Albrecht and Mr. W. A. Langdon call my attention to the fact that they have recently found in their post offices 2c stamps from plates bearing low plate numbers. The only way that I can account for stamps in the 5,000 series coming out at this late day is that either the Bureau has run into some old stock in their vaults at the time of the recent inventory or else with the numerous changes, they have gotten so far back that they have had to fall back on all old plates available.

Mr. J. Hull Wilson informs me that while passing through Frederick, Maryland, recently he called at the Post Office as is his usual custom to learn as to what might be had. He was fortunate in finding that the Postmaster had on hand some of the old 3c green with the 2c Baltimore overprint. He explains that when the 3c stock was sent to Baltimore to be revalued there was included some of the 3c green stamps that had been on hand at Frederick for some years.

Mr. M. H. Ganser calls attention to first class permit mail sent out by the Addressograph Co., much previous to the date of December, 1920, which I gave in my Chronicle of April 22nd as the date of the first metered mail. Mr. Ganser has made the error, like many, of confusing the first class permit mail with metered mail. In the case of the pe a certain number of identical p must be mailed from one place at time and you pay the post office a time you mail the letters. In the ca the metered mail you pay the post so much money and they set your for so many impressions which ma used all at once or as you like. could not have been a metered letter posted previous to December, with official sanction for it was not that month that the Post Office De ment officially authorized its use.

J. O. MOORE, INC., RHEIMS, N. Y.

THE LATE MAJOR E. B. EVANS.

It is our melancholy task to record the death of the doyen of British philatelists, Major Edward B. Evans, at the age of 75.

Nearly forty years ago, it was written that "the stamp-collector to whom the name of E. B. Evans is unfamiliar is not only himself unknown, but can hardly have skirted the fascinating science, in the pursuit of which so many of us are already turning grey."

Major Evans was born on November 3rd, 1846, and started to collect stamps while at Uppingham Grammar School, in 1861. He left there in 1862, the proud possessor of the best collection in the school. There is a note of his first contribution to a philatelic journal winning him a prize about 1864. He received a commisson in the Royal Artillery in 1867, and was sent to Malta, where he met Lieutenant J. Speranza, R. M. F. Artillery, one of the founders of the Philatelic Society, London.

Later, while stationed at Plymouth in 1873, he made the acquaintance of Mr. E. Stanley Gibbons who founded his business in that town, and also of Edward Loines Pemberton, who then resided at Torquay. Referring to this period the Major said it was then "I began to understand how stamps should be collected."

In 1876 he exchanged into a battery ordered to Mauritius, and formed a collection and searched the archives there for information of the stamps of that philatelically famous island. It is to his researches that we owe our very full knowledge of the history of these issues. His paper on the subject contributed to the Philatelic Congress at Paris 1876 received the highest prize awarded by the French Society, and drew the high praise of Dr. Legrand, who wrote:

"Amateurs cannot but be under an obligation to the French Society for having rewarded the efforts made by Captain Evans to solve their difficulties. He has shown philatelists how the materials wherewith to prosecute their science ought to be collected."

During a long interval of service in Ireland he compiled the first detailed catalogue of postage stamps in the English language, and this was published by Pemberton, Wilson & Co., in 1882. He went to Bermuda in 1885, and added to his brilliant services to Philately by research work there.

In 1875 he joined the Philatelic Society, and was the senior member of the "Royal."

His retirement from the Army in 1890 left him the leisure to devote much of his time to philatelic work. Messrs. Stanley Gibbons, Ltd., then newly incorporated as a Limited Liability Company, had just started their Monthly Journal, and offered Major Evans the editorship, which he accepted, and the first issue under his direction (Vol. I. No. 3) appeared in September, 1890. He continued to edit the Monthly Journal with high distinction until the close of its career in 1914, thus editing all but two of its 259 numbers.

He wrote a vast amount in the Monthly Journal, and several of his contributions, notably on the Mulready Envelope and its Caricatures, and his justly famous "glossary" were published in book form. Difficulty or complexity did not deter his philatelic zeal, and his studies of the stamps of the Native States of India are remarkable examples of his thoroughness and great capacity as a philatelic student. It was his capable hand that translated Dr. Diena's fine work on Sicily.

During most of this time from 1890 until the end of the war he was resident in Sydenham, and it was the good fortune of many of us to meet him—and to meet him was to get to love him. A little man with a big heart, the Major had a thorough enthusiasm for stamps, and was ever-ready to go into any problem philatelists took to him. He endeared himself to all who knew him by his unfailing geniality and the heartiness with which he assisted every enterprise that sought to promote the best interests of Philately.

Only a few weeks before his death he had selected one of his most choice philatelic treasures, a pair of the 5c. New York stamps used on the entire envelope, and sent it as a free gift to our publishers for the Jubilee Stamp Auction. In doing this kindly action, he was carrying on his long-maintained interest and support which he had accorded to the Junior Philatelic Society from its inception, a support which was always most active in the succession of the Society's great public exhibitions—*Stamp Coll. The next discontinuance of subscriptions will concern all subscribers whose wrappers bear the numbers 1636 to 1639 inclusive. Just glance at your wrapper immediately in order to make sure that your subscription is paid up. You have ample time in which to renew and be saved the inconvenience of a discontinuance. Moreover, under our new system we are making no plans for furnishing back numbers and subscribers must not expect that we can supply back numbers when we have made every effort to notify them.

We are satisfied that the system we have inaugurated is the only one under which a newspaper can do business these days, and subscribers must understand that free copies of the WEEKLY will not be sent to those who are in arrears.

BRITISH CENTRAL AFRICA.

Cape Town Printing.
Complete Vertical Row, shewing third stamp with double surcharge.

even then the bar was a little too high and not straight. Now, at this point, my memory is at fault; I do not remember whether the printer refused to take the responsibility of printing any more surcharges, or whether it was the Postmaster-General who declined to let him do any more, but at any rate the printer submitted this first sheet of 60 stamps to Mr. McMaster, who passed it, but no more of these provisionals were made at Blantyre. A parcel of 2d stamps was then despatched to the Government printing office at Cape Town, accompanied by one of the double-surcharged stamps, with instructions to have the surcharge as nearly of the same type as was possible."

Mr. King's account of the events is doubtless correct in the main, and tallies with the history quoted from "an unimpeachable source" in Stanley Gibbons' Monthly Journal for October 31, 1896 (VII., 58) :—

"There is a history going the round of the magazines in reference to certain copies of the 'ONE PENNY' on the 2d of the British South Africa Company, with double surcharge. The story is that 100 sheets were sent to the Government printing office at Blantyre to be surcharged; that the first sheet was put through the press twice over, presumably to show the Postmaster how nicely they could do it. The P.M., however, was not satisfied, and sent the other 99 sheets to Cape Town to be adorned; and thus is accounted for a double overprint which differs in type from the single one.

This history comes from an unimpeachable source, and we have no doubt that it is perfectly true; but we think that waste products of this kind should be destroyed, instead of being preserved for sale to collectors."

Mr. King's statement that the sheet of the Blantyre surcharge was "passed" by the Postmaster-General, if it is to be taken as meaning that he allowed them to be used for regular postal purposes, must surely be an error, for the ultimate destination of a good proportion of the sixty stamps so overprinted is not unknown, and the copies are unused.

The chief difference between the Blantyre setting and the Cape Town one is the presence of a full stop after PENNY in the latter, the period being absent in the former. The Cape Town type is heavier and slightly taller than that set up at Blantyre, the O is narrow and elongated in the Cape Town, and more rounded in the Blantyre. The bar of the Cape Town is thick and long (18 mm); in the Blantyre it is thin and short (16½ mm.).

The arrangement of the type in the Cape Town surcharge is not known with any certainty, but from the occurrence, on different rows, of a complete row of double surcharges it is surmised that the surcharge was applied one row at a time. Mr. P. L. Pemberton mentions a sheet which had the fourth row doubly surcharged, and the strip we illustrate herewith shows a double surcharge in the third row.

Another sheet Mr. Pemberton describes leads him to believe that there were two settings. We quote his remarks (Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, XVIII, 171) :—

"Of the Cape Town type there is pretty good evidence of two distinct settings of the surcharge. I have an entire sheet before me, on which the sixth stamps of the second and fifth rows have the two last letters of PENNY set rather below the level of the rest of the word. It is quite certain, judging by this and other evidence, that this sheet was printed from a stereo made up of three horizontal rows of ten surcharges, which was impressed twice on the sheet. With the exception of the slightly depressed NY there is no semblance of a variety on this sheet. Yet there is a well-known and marked variety in which the "Y" of PENNY is dropped considerably below the level of the rest of the word. Several years ago I had an entire sheet in which this variety occurred, but, unfortunately, it was broken up before I took a note of how many there were on the sheet and what positions they occupied. It certainly occurred more than once. However that may be, it is certain that the setting was different from that in which the slightly depressed "NY" occurs. This sheet was memorable for having the fourth horizontal row doubly surcharged; it is puzzling to know how this could have occurred unless each row was surcharged separately, and I am inclined to think that this is the solution."

It does not seem to us probable that the surcharge was printed in any other way than direct from the type, as the number printed was so small, and the occasional irregular depression of a letter or two letters seems to confi[illegible] belief that no stereo was mad[illegible] some of the stamps the O of C[illegible] also slightly depressed, and th[illegible] believe, is a characteristic of sma[illegible] of type widely spaced from each [illegible] and would occur chiefly at the [illegible] ning or at the end of the overpri[illegible] the same time, we would not dism[illegible] possibility of several rows bein[illegible] pressed in one setting, and ev[illegible] would admit of the occasional [illegible] row, if one block of thirty was [illegible] with the top row over-lapping t[illegible] tom row of the upper thirty, thu[illegible] ing the bottom row of the bottom [illegible] unsurcharged, to be filled in by[illegible] ing the top row of the type to [illegible] surcharged bottom row.

In regard to the two varie[illegible] double surcharge, the Blantyre a[illegible] Cape Town types, Mr. Pemberto[illegible] properly points out that "the E[illegible] variety was never issued to the [illegible] whereas the Cape Town type is [illegible] uine error. Both command good[illegible] but the latter is not only more d[illegible] as an issued stamp but is also s[illegible]

GOOD IDEA.

Back in the October 22, 1921, issue, on the editorial page under the side-heading "Score," the editor told of going out with a card with the wording "Smith, Philatelist, Conway Bldg." and accosting business men on the street. The idea was to find what the term "philatelist" meant to the ordinary well-informed citizen. Out of five men accosted, just one had a fair idea of the meaning of the word—and the man did not pronounce the word "by the book."

This editorial stuck in my mind, until recently I sprung the idea myself, in the way of pronunciation tests. I will admit I did not know what was proper myself, as our office dictionary did not have it. After trying other people's guesses, I then went home and looked the word up, and went back over my route with the correct pronunciation of philatelist, philately, etc.

Now, then, why don't you print the properly marked words in MEKEEL'S, so that the words will become known? Run it permanently on the editorial page, say!

Because the ordinary stamp enthusiast does not dare try pronounce the words which he understands when seen in print, the only thing he can say is that he—or some other person—is a stamp collector, or a "stamp fiend." The last term in particular is belittling to the pursuit or hobby. Even "stamp collector" sounds kiddish. If a man wants to admit he is an "amateur" philatelist, it means more than to admit he is a stamp collector or a "stamp fiend."

I have a good friend who for two or three years seemed to be afraid to turn his back on his crack-brained stamp-collector friend, and it was not until I had frequently spoken of the J. C. Morgenthau & Co. sales, (he knew the Morgenthau people as high-up financiers) and spoken many times of various big political lights (our own Congressman, among others) that he lost his fear of me.

Now, then, what I am seriously trying to say is this: If you will print (with proper diacritical marks) these words and keep them where they can be seen by philatelists—under your heading wouldn't be the worst place—where you say that MEKEEL'S is "issued in the Interest of Philately and Philatelists," it would tend to bring the words into use and elevate the hobby in the minds of collectors themselves and the general public.

C. W. GODDARD,

WE CASUALLY MENTION PHILATELY.

THE SPEAKER was C. E. Severn, who addressed the club on the subject, "Effective Speech in Salesmanship." With this rather abstract subject, Mr. Severn suggested some very concrete and practical things to do, among them being that we renew acquaintances with the old grammar and dictionary. Somebody's always taking the joy out of life, but this is constructive work which will pay in direct proportion to the intelligent thought and time devoted to it.—All Chicago Kiwanian.

A STRONG INDICTMENT.

The Malay Conspiracy—Stamp Collecting has had the satisfaction of receiving many messages of approval of its condemnation, in last week's issue of the Straits-Borneo conspiracy. We only wish we could wax even more vituperative over the matter. It seems that the so-called provisional ("Malaya-Borneo Exhibition" on stamps of the Straits Settlements and British North Borneo) are only to be sold in sets, which is proof positive that they are not intended for ordinary postal purposes. Those of North Borneo should be completely ostracized, for we learn that orders for them have to be cabled to the Secretary of the Malaya-Borneo Exhibition at Singapore, which is the only place where they can be obtained. Postage stamps of the Borneo Protectorate are not valid for correspondence posted in the Straits Settlements, and the Borneo labels overprinted for the Exhibition will therefore be nothing more than defaced curiosities. The North Borneo Company have offered such a lot of rubbish that we can only be astounded at this, their latest, temerity. It will be remembered that, when they issued their notorious "Red Cross" provisonals, they pocketed the face value of the set up to the 10 dollars denomination and gave the miserable sum of 1d. per stamp to the Red Cross funds!

Brunei and Trengganu Too!—Writing in regard to our castigation of the Straits-Borneo combine, our good friends, Messrs. Whitfield King & Co., say:—

"Unfortunately, you had not heard the worst of the 'Malaya-Borneo Exhibition' conspiracy when you wrote, as we have since received a circular letter from the Crown Agents advising us that they have received a telegram from the Government of Straits Settlements that the Government of Brunei propose adopting a similar course, and that, as in the case of British North Borneo, detailed orders should at once be cabled to the Exhibition at Singapore, and apparently they will not be on sale at Brunei for bona fide postal use. We hope that no English dealer will waste his money over cables to Singapore for this rubbish, which we do not regard as postage stamps, but merely as souvenirs, and as such their sale should be restricted to visitors to the Exhibition.

"We shall not include either the Borneo or the Brunei surcharges in our catalogue, and will absolutely ignore them. The Straits Settlements are on rather a different footing, as they are sold in Singapore, where, no doubt, they will be available for postage."

We have since heard that the stamps of Trengganu have been subjected to the same treatment. This latest example of Malay temerity has apparently so disgusted dealers (including Messrs. Whitfield King & Co.) who had already cabled orders for the Straits provisionals that they have immediately cancelled these. Stamp Collecting.

A FORTUNE FOR A STAMP.

(It must not be thought that any one particular metropolitan center has a monopoly on philatelic publicity. With the following editorial reprinted from the Boston Herald it is plainly evident that a philatelist of a no mean reputation is associated with this sterling publication. The man who can write an editorial such as this would at least be fitted for an editorial capacity on a stamp paper.—W. O. W.)

Old postage stamps occasionally turn up in disused desks or forgotten drawers, and the householder who finds even one of them worth so much as a ten-dollar bill thinks himself in luck. A postage stamp of British Guiana worth $27,000, long known as the rarest in the world, has just been sold to a Swiss collector who paid that sum for it, with taxation surcharged added, at a public auction in Paris. It was only of one-cent denomination—a tiny bit of carmine-colored paper with the "one cent" on it printed in black—yet what a record it had before finally coming under the hammer! Discovered in the colony by a young man named Vaughan in 1873 as "the only known copy," it found its way to England in 1878, was first sold for a few shillings as a "philatelic curiosity," then finally purchased by the late Baron de la Renotiere von Ferrari for a little more than $500; he deposited it in his world-famous collection, and it remained there for 44 years.

In the interval rumors that another copy existed sent collectors scurrying over the two hemispheres in search of the coveted treasure. While they were gone an alleged copy, for which 20,000 francs were asked, came to grief in France through being denounced by experts as "an absurd forgery." When the war broke out Baron von Ferrari returned to Germany, bequeathed his collection to the Berlin Museum, and died in 1917. Ever since, his property has been under sequestration. and the proceeds of its sale, including the amount yielded by the British Guiana stamp, are to be paid to the reparations account.

Strange indeed have been the adventures of adhesive stamps since the first of them was "invented" nearly a century ago by James Chalmers of Dundee. The British parliament sanctioned their use in 1840, and it took little more than a decade to extend them for postage purposes to the rest of Europe and to various parts of the American continent. Early enough they gave rise to the stamp collector, the stamp album and the stamp catalogue; today there are scores of books dealing with stamps, and it takes one work in two bulky volumes to guard the buyer with the story of the forgeries of stamps.

Why should so many people accumulate these squares and oblongs, whose proper use is to be affixed to correspondence? "Fad" it has been called, but think of it as a source of information and entertainment. A fairly rich collection tells of the vicissitudes of states, sometimes of the rise and fall of forms of government. Great national events are often perpetuated by "commemoration" stamps. There are political and economical lessons to be learnt; look on the new Bolshevist issues ranging from 7,500 to 22,500 roubles. Stamps often carry pictures of crowned heads, presidents of republics, army generals, of fair cities, of landscapes and seascapes. The latest output of Egypt reproduces the colossal statue of Rameses II at Thebes; the newest Armenian stamp visualizes the plain and mountain of Ararat, with a native ploughing in the foreground. Something of all this, with the supply and demand law taken into account, may help to explain why the largest sum ever paid for a postage stamp has just changed hands at Paris.

OUR OWN IDEA.

COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor:—Like many thousands of your readers I was much interested in Mr. Krause's article about the Philatelic Stamp agency selling the U. S. Shanghai set. The collector of small means feels that this bureau is a blessing to him. No one likes to lose money, neither the collector as well as the dealer. But we all have to take a chance. Those of us who paid $1.50 good cash for the Communist Issue, (Rogues gallery) of Hungary lost. This set sells for 25 cents now. Some dealers, not Mr. Krause, however, are trying to belittle the bureau for selling this set at face, calling it an "issue for collectors." I can't see but what the stamps are just as valuable purchased from Washington as if they were shipped to China and back. These stamps were sold at face value, American value, and were not discounted so I can not see how their "philatelic value" is hurt. If they were sold for "philatelic purposes only", under face for say 50 cents a set, then it would put them on the plane of Seebecks. We poor fellows who collect would be glad to see dues and stamps printed for the Philippine Islands sold at face. Let's not complain of the philatelic bureau but encourage it. Collectors of course are sorry for dealers who get caught, but look at those of us who got stung on Neurope. I think your readers would like to hear your opinion on this subject of the Philatelic bureau furnishing due stamps and colonial issues direct from Washington at face, not below face.

Yours very truly,

Clinton L. Chalfant.

A BIT SOUR.

An American stamp fiend, who refused to give his name, paid over $32,000 for one stamp at a spirited French stamp auction a day or so ago. The stamp, a 1-cent British Guiana stamp of 1856, black upon a red ground, was in the famous Baron Ferrari collection. Nearly $5,500 accrued to the state as tax through the transaction.

The average lay mind immediately holds up its hands in holy horror at the idea of this sum of money being spent for a tiny scrap of printed paper. This reaction of protest to huge valuation of things insignificant in size is a common one. Even the common story of the magnates wife with her new $500,000 sable coat arouses less ire, for sables are sables and a coat is a coat, but prithee tell us, what is a stamp? The second common reaction is the one dominant in the sable coat discussion, and that is folks' resentment to one person having luxury when others are without necessities. How dares one man spend for one stamp to stick in a scrapbook a sum that would save starving children in vast areas? Then up rise the defenders of the hobby faith, remarking that all money spent is for the common good as it all goes to general circulation. Then up rise their opponents to remark that $32,000 spent in one transaction in so limited a field as stamp collecting is not going to get to the mass very much. The more we think about it, the surer we are that it was a wise American stamp fiend who refused to give his name when he bought his little stamp.—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

By J. W. SAMPSON.

CHAPTER V.—Covers and Cancellations.

With the exception of stamps issued primarily to cover payment of a registration fee, no postal emission of our government has been so definitely dedicated to a specific use as the 7 cent vermilion, and a collection of this stamp, even though in no sense "highly specialized," contains reminders of historical events that are of general as well as philatelic interest.

Every collector is familiar with the names "Hanover" and "Schlesweig-Holstein," and knows that these provinces were annexed to Prussia in 1866, and that Prussia in turn was amalgamated with Bremen, Brunswick, Hamburg, Lubeck, Oldenburg and Saxony in 1869, as the North German Confederation. At that time, their stamps were superseded by those of the North German Postal District, and it was through treaty with this North German Confederation in April, 1870, that the 7 cent vermilion was made a necessity.

In 1868, the four South German States of Baden, Bavaria, Hesse-Darmstadt and Wurtemberg were made independent and at the conclusion of the Franco-Prussian War, early in 1871 (and before the 7 cent vermilion was actually issued), these four States were united with the North German Confederation to form the German Empire.

During this period Austria had been separated from Germany and was made up of some twenty or more provinces, including kingdoms, archduchies, duchies, margreviates, and counties, the names of which are mostly unfamiliar to philatelists, as only Lombardy-Venice issued stamps.

After these unions were effected, however, mail coming from America continued to be addressed to the various States or Provinces of the German Empire, and to a limited extent to the old sub-divisions of Austria. 7 cent covers addressed to Hamburg, Holstein, Saxony, Baden, Bavaria, Hesse, Prussia and Wurtemberg are not extremely rare, and a few such covers add much of historical interest to a United States collection.

Then the stamps themselves, as well as the covers to which they are gummed, tell a story of emigration, agricultural and industrial development, and postal service rules and customs, through their cancellations.

For example, a 7 cent is almost never seen bearing the postmark of any small town in New England, or the South, but the names of country towns and villages in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, frequently appear. These small town postmarks show clearly where settlement was made by a large proportion of the 2,600,000 German emigrants, who left the Fatherland in the fifty years between 1823 and 1873 and came to this country.

By no means all of this incoming horde became farmers, to be sure. A million or so settled in our larger cities—and the large percentage of Cincinnati postmarks on the 7 cent stamp indicates where they established themselves. Milwaukee, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Baltimore are next in order of commonness on the 7 cent vermilion, if we omit New York.

The New York cancellation, in black and red, appears on many a stamp that franked a letter emanating from another city, as probably 90% of the mail to Germany during the 70's went by steamer from this port. "New York—Transit", "New York—Paid all Direct", "New York—Br. Transit", are common markings, the last mentioned being used on letters that went via. England. It is accordingly an error to consider a red cancellation on a 7 cent stamp a rarity. Beautiful and desirable it may be, but by no means uncommon if it embodies the words "New York," or is a typical New York obliteration.

Then there was a large volume of German and Austrian mail originating in New York, and during 1873 and 1874 there was apparently an indiscriminate use of red and black inks in applying the obliterations. Figure 9 is typical of several New York cancellations used in 1870 and 1871. Figures 10 to 16, inclusive, are of the 1873-4 period and are by no means a complete showing of the designs used. These cancellations seem to have been changed every three to four weeks, with just enough irregularity to upset any theory of systematic use. But

Must Move Them

In sorting a vast wholesale stock accumulated forty to fifty years ago, we have been obliged to throw out thousands of dollars' worth of fine old stuff because of slight to serious defects. They didn't care in those days—(wish they didn't care today). We have put these stamps into envelopes of 30 varieties and should guess the catalogue price at anything from Five Dollars up. The price of each little lot of 30 varieties is

ONE DOLLAR

You will probably reorder because our sorting clerk is ultra fastidious as to condition and some of these stamps are hardly damaged at all.

while the "reasons why" are as yet undetermined, the presence of a few of these New York cancellations in a collection certainly adds much of interest. In this connection it is well to note that these fancy designs appear to have been used chiefly, if not entirely, on outgoing foreign mail, and hence while common on the 7 cent, 12 cent, 24 cent and other high values, are comparatively seldom seen on the 1 cent, 2 cent or 3 cent stamps of the 1870-3 issues.

other cities were close followers. Among these was Louisville, Ky. A bunch of 7 cent covers from that city to Germany, mailed in the fall of 1872, show six different designs used inside of three months,—including in September, a 14-segment oval; in October, a 10-segment oval; in November, an 8-segment oval. The chopping of these ovals into varying numbers of pieces does not seem to have had any particular significance, however, for other designs were used in

No less than 23 of these complex designs have been noted, consisting mostly of stars and rosettes in outline, within circles. Small solid star cancellations are less common on the 7 cent stamp. The Pittsburgh star (solid, inside a 20-(millimeter circle) is most frequently encountered, most of the others apparently coming from small towns.

In these matters of using fancy obliterations and changing them frequently, between, including the simple "cross roads" cancellation shown in Figure 17.

This cancellation (Fig. 17), in different sizes, was also used by a number of other cities, and is one of the most common distinctive cancellations on the 7 cent stamp. Figure 18 shows another almost equally common, this having been used in New York in 1871.

In 1872, St. Louis used a series of cancellations that gave free expression to the imagination of some postal employee. Two of the most interesting of these, illustrated by Figures 19 and 20, appear on 7 cent covers to Germany and are generally known as the "smiling sun" and "spread eagle" cancellations.

Next to shapeless smudges bare and unenclosed grids, targets and concentric circles are perhaps the most common cancellations on the 7 cent vermilion. Nor is this commonness confined to one color, for the "Cincinnati blue" concentric circles are perhaps more frequently seen than any other obliteration of this type, though often held in high esteem by those who have not observed their frequent usage on the 1869 and 1870 issues. The same Cincinnati cancellation in the true green shade, however, while by no means rare is much more infrequently met, and any other design in a "real" green is a rarity.

In degree of scarcity, the writer would rank colored cancellations on the 7 cent stamp as running thus: red, blue, purple or violet, blue lilac, brown and green, the two latter tying for position as the most unusual.

Among the scarce and interesting cancellations appearing on this stamp, aside from those already mentioned, are the blue flower, the wind-mill, the skull and bones, the Masonic emblem, the jack-o'-lantern, and various inscriptions, such as "U.S." and letters of the alphabet. The letters are not the usual postal station numbers, apparently, but more probably the initials of small towns and cities, such as "R", standing for Rockland, Maine. New York and Philadelphia postal station letters and numbers are seldom seen on this stamp, as outgoing foreign mail was ordinarily taken to the general postoffice.

On letters sent direct to Germany the Hamburg receiving mark with date and the word "FRANCO" in a rectangular frame, very frequently hit the stamp, and a 7 cent vermilion with this marking (always in red) is an interesting item and securable by any collector who persistently seeks it. Equally interesting, but much more scarce, are the blue French receiving marks, with date in circle, both Cherbourg and Brest being occasionally encountered. The letters "PD", in frame and appearing in red, applied during a long period to American mail reaching Europe, seldom struck this stamp. One other example of seldom-seen foreign markings is this: the words "Frankfort A.M.—Postexped. No. 4—16-4-72, 3V.M." in three lines, inside a rectangular frame about 35 millimeters long and appearing entirely on two 7 cent stamps. The word "postexpedition" may be translated as "forwarded by."

BOOK REVIEW.

Edouard Locher, 76 Boul. de la Gare, Zurich, Switzerland, sends us for review his complete catalog of stamps issues from 1914 to date. Containing as it does the stamps of the war, those issued in connection with the armistice and the issues of recent years, the book will be of special value to a great host of collectors. The price of the catalogue is 50c and no doubt United States stamps will be accepted in payment.

THE CONTEST.

The contest announced in our issue of April 15th, based on the list of "hidden names" compiled by Mr. Krause was entered into by ninety of our readers who, with almost no exception, gave good accounts of themselves. The following are the correct answers as supplied by Mr. Krause, who offered a five cent of 1847 on cover as first prize:

1.—Greenwood.
2.—Colon.
3.—Fiume (Fume).
4.—Jhind (Ginned).
5.—Baden (Bad N).
6.—Bhopal (Beau-Pal).
7.—Emory (M or E).
8.—Hejaz (He Jazz)
9.—Salem.
10.—Cochin China (Coach in China).
11.—Puno (Phew No).
12.—Benadir (Been a dear)
13.—Ceylon (Seal on).
14.—Deccan (Pecan).

Now our troubles begin. When the "nut" brigade gave Filbert by changing one letter from Gilbert, instead of the orthograpically changed Deccan to Pecan (vide Mr. Krause's list), could we say them nay? Too, the Parma clan with "Par" and "Ma" instead of Bhopal (Beau-Pal) gave us something to think about. Right here, we must admit that the orthoepist had no place in the struggle; he retired early to the side-lines. After making due allowances and adjustments, the following are selected as the prize-winners: First—G. F. Keller, 143 Nassau Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.; second—Allen J. Fisher, 3235 N. 20th St., Philadelphia, Pa., and third—C. R. Beegle, Palmyra, New Jersey. Each of these entrants submitted lists entirely correct, if Gilbert is considered as an alternative for Deccan.

The entries of F. S. Cramer, 1285 Cove Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, and David C. Turnbull, 129 N. West St., Mishawaka, Indiana, commanded our unbounded admiration. Mr. Cramer sent a booklet which is a most clever conception. He surely put the human touch in it and we wish that we could print it in its entirety, but there are about 150 lines to it! But love's labor has not been lost on us.

Mr. Turnbull made up a little dictionary of sixteen pages and cover for his answers; it is a sort of fac-simile of our Dictionary which is now about off the fire; and on the cover is a fine reproduction in color of the five cent, 1847, with red grid cancellation, the brown stamp to the life. This artistic attempt should be seen to be appreciated. We are sending Mr. Cramer and Mr. Turnbull a U. S. stamp each, right out of our own pocket in a fit of painful generosity. Yes, and Mr. Cramer had Pecan, too, but he slipped elsewhere. Well, what's next?

P. S.: Ernest Kelly, The Cordova, Washington, D. C., was the poet-laureate. Among other things he said:

The horse may come, the horse may go;
but Fords go on forever.
A prancing team to taxis (Taxis) tied, is seldom seen, if ever.

NEW EUROPE AND WAR STAMPS.

By W. C. PHILLIPS.

I do not wish to pose as an expert in War stamps, but without exaggeration or conceit, I believe more of these stamps have passed through my hands than any others in America. Especially is this true of the rarer items, and better grade stamps. I do not think there are hardly any sources of supply worth mentioning we are not in touch with, or that anyone has had more experience with market values. After all the only accurate, worth while knowledge of market values is only to be had in the buying and selling of actual goods. Considering this my remarks ought to have at least as much weight as those of persons who actually know little or nothing about these issues, or at best have had a limited experience with them.

I am tired of reading articles, or hearing opinions passed, largely of a sneering nature, by persons who know little about these stamps, and who are not qualified to give an opinion worth serious attention. Most collectors, however, believe what they see or hear. This persistent knocking by collectors, and members of the "trade" has done stamp collecting a lot of harm. There are a host of collectors who are keenly interested in these stamps, and in view of the fact that no one seems to try and give them any encouragement, I am going to try and show those who have collected these most interesting bits of paper, they are not quite such fools as a lot of dealers and collectors try to make them think they are. The American spirit of fair play demands that the stamps get a fair chance.

As to my booming War stamps I can say that they need no booming so far as we are concerned. They are with us and have been for several years, the fastest selling stock we have. Our trouble is not in selling them, but in getting enough of the better class items to fill our demands at a price that will allow us to handle. Not even the good old issues and "classics" sell as well. This is absolutely contrary to what certain dealers with a limited trade preach, who tell the collector he is foolish to buy, that the stamps have no future. Perhaps not, but a lot of wise people have been wrong before. Contrary to the impression many collectors have, but a minor part of our business is in these War stamps. We would have far more to gain by a boom in the earlier issues. Further, I personally have a collection of first issues that most anyone would pay at least a hundred dollars for and not hesitate long, so I am not "grinding any axe" in writing this.

To deviate a bit, I want to deplore here the all too frequent habit some collectors have of referring to everything they do not fancy as "junk". How many times has some collector worked away quietly, gathering together a collection, only to be told when he showed it to some dealer or collector it was "junk" and have his interest killed. Most collectors are too easily influenced by the opinion of some prejudiced dealer or collector. Collect what you want to, what interests you, and pleases you, regardless of the knocks of others. Your chances of being right are just about as good as theirs, and anyway you get your fun out of the hobby, which is after all, the main thing with the real collector.

Speculation is another thing charged against these stamps. Does one expect the collector on the spot, who picks up some of a limited issue, not to get what he can for the stamps? It always has been so and will be. I did not notice any examples of generosity on the part of American collectors or dealers when they picked up 5c errors, 1c Pan inverts, bluish papers, etc., in the post offices, at face. Why is not the chance good in the present case if one ok at the investment side? No why one should not spend real are given. The fluctuations in of the few higher priced items ve been offered, due to exchange ns are the only thing to keep rs guessing. I can truly say that few are priced too high most of ce ones are priced too low in the an catalog and many in the . Though our connections and s for getting these stamps are to none, I have never seen a copy of many stamps priced only a few dollars each. We have had standing orders for years for some of them, and tried everywhere, but unable to get. Of others only a stray copy now and then. Still others priced at a few cents, a several years' search has produced only a dozen or so copies.

On many the present catalog prices are ridiculous. We have sold them to dealers for more than full catalog. Seventy-five per cent of the better varieties we have found impossible to obtain enough of to fill our orders or demands, and our connections are so large that if these stamps were in the market anywhere we could get them. In some cases stamps of which only a few hundred or a thousand were issued are priced at $3 or less each. How long will such small quantities last, or such prices either? If they are so hard to get now, so shortly after their issue, what will they be a few years from now? The truth is that in most cases the supply has been pretty well absorbed of the rarer ones. Without doubt the great majority of these stamps will never be cheaper than now. The circumstances connected with their issue will always make a good demand for them, and last but not least, remember these are mostly European stamps, and will always be in demand by the great army of European collectors. A sufficient guarantee that those not issued in large quantities will soon be absorbed.

I have been surprised at the rapidity with which many of these stamps have disappeared, and in other cases at the real rarity of stamps one would think from catalog prices, could be easily obtained. We hold no stock of the better items, we only wish we did, and doubt if any other dealer does. We have been unable to fill one-half the want lists we received for the rarer items the past year. They were simply not to be had, try where we would.

My own personal opinion, based on experience and actual dealing, not guesswork or second-hand information, is that the majority of the really good stamps, or higher priced items, will show just as good returns if bought intelligently, and held long enough to give them half a chance as other lines. They are today in spite of all the attempts to belittle these goods and turn collectors from them, the best and fastest selling line we have, and we carry everything from number ones up. We know that many have been stuck, so have we by unscrupulous European dealers. That when information was vague at first, prices were asked and gotten which were unreasonable, but exceptions do not prove a rule, averages make the final count. Run over the advertising columns of any American stamp paper the past few years and see how many of the really rare stamps have been offered. You'll see thousands of offers of the cheaper ones, but you'll be surprised if you look for the others. Then, too, every European dealer with a printing press handy has sent lists over here of stuff he did not have in stock, figuring he would get the stamps if he got some American dollars. Getting so many offers has made collectors think there was a big supply, and some of the catalog pricing has even been made on this basis. I have ordered supplies of stamps from as many as ten lists of offers and never got one single stamp. I could almost fill a book with experiences of that sort. Until one knows the real facts a perusal of European lists and offers would make one think these stamps were plenty enough.

Unless another great war develops, a thing which is highly improbable, exchange has without doubt reached the lowest point it will ever hit some time ago. Exchange has been responsible for most of the ups and downs of prices. I say again that in most cases the bottom of prices has been reached if not passed. I have plenty of evidence to back this assertion if space permitted my giving it.

DEATH OF JAS. H. FOUNTAIN.

By Allen H. Wright.

It is with great regret that I announce the death in Los Angeles, Calif., April 30, of James Horton Fountain, aged 68 years. It had been my privilege to know Mr. Fountain for many years, and I have often viewed his collections of post cards, envelopes and kindred things. He was a man of the utmost integrity, most generous in his exchange relations with fellow collectors, and had been held in the highest respect in his community, where, for many years, he was chief deputy city auditor. His death is a distinct loss to the collecting fraternity, which he had honored for many years. He was a member of various societies, including the Postal Card Society of America, in which he had held office on different occasions. Following the action of the United States postal authorities in surcharging the 2c postals Mr. Fountain began a most exhaustive research for all the varieties of this interesting issue, and had practically completed the work at the time he was stricken with paralysis, a few days before death came. As a close personal friend I feel that I could do no less than express my deep sorrow in his death, and to pay my tribute to him as a man among men.

THE MATTER OF MOUNTING STAMPS.

By Frank L. Applegate.

Anent an article from the pen of L. H. Brigham on the subject of mounting stamps he emphasizes the necessity of bending the hinge flush with the top of the stamp. Now while it is true that this is the only method that justifies the use of the term "hinge" as a proper name for our mounts, the fact remains that it is not the only method, nor even the best one, and I am qualified to observe that among many, if not indeed a majority of careful collectors, other methods obtain.

The "hinge" feature has been greatly over-emphasized in my opinion. In making a satisfactory study of the watermark or in applying the perforation gauge it is almost always necessary to remove the stamp entirely from the page anyhow, and having satisfied himself as to the variety and having mounted the stamp in his album the collector rarely has further use for the hinge except to hold the stamp securely in its place.

I prefer a hinge bent well below the top of the stamp for the following reasons: First: Damage. Many a good stamp has been spoiled by attempting to remove hinges from the perforation and while this danger may be minimized by the use of peelable hinges, peelable hinges also remove the necessity for the "hinge" feature. The centre of the stamp is better able to stand the strain of removing too adhesive mounts than the perforated edges. Again the flopping around of stamps hinged loosen at the top, especially in approval, and other books subject to much handling have resulted in many broken perforations and creased, nicked, torn, and otherwise damaged stamps as any collector or dealer of experience will recall.

Cloth Bound PRICE $2.00 Post Free

THIS great book is now in the bindery and we are prepared to take orders accompanied by cash. The expense in producing it has been so great that we feared a $2 price would not be possible. The authors, B. W. H. Poole and Willard O. Wylie, publicly acknowledge their indebtedness to Messrs. C. A. Howes and Chas. S. Thompson for assistance rendered. W. W. Jewett of the Jewett Printing Co. has also taken great pains as a producing factor in this great achievement.

The book is handsomely bound in green cloth with appropriate lettering, and no student of stamps can do without it. It represents the high watermark in philatelic book publishing and especially from the standpoint of the general collector.

On these advance orders the Dictionary will be mailed direct from the bindery at Long Island City, N. Y., some three or four weeks ahead of a Portland or Beverly mailing.

"WOULD YOU KNOW YOUR STAMPS? USE THE DICTIONARY!"

SPECIAL NOTICE | The section, letters H to Z, will be supplied post free for $1. We thus keep faith with those who purchased the first two sections. Apply at once.

EDITORIAL.

Bureau—We have been receiving letters from readers commenting favorably upon the services afforded by the stamp department at Washington that was instituted for the benefit of philatelists and their especial wants. From the tone of the communications, it is evident that these subscribers fear that certain comments that have been made upon the propriety of the department's course, in reference to the sale of the Shanghai surcharges at face, may have a reactionary or disturbing influence upon the authorities who are watching the progress of stamp sales to collectors with interest and attention. We are told in this connection that business is brisk at the government stamp stall and that there is no disposition to turn tail on the venture. We feel that no dealer has any deep-seated conviction that the government's accommodation has not worked to the advantage of collecting; and in the end it will increase rather than curtail his business. The publicity that attended the departure of the post office department in providing this stamp sanctuary was invaluable and it would be unthinkable that it would not have the united support of philatelists. The stamp department must be a permanent improvement and collectors must see that it is kept up. Here let us say that the little whirlwind that the Shanghais occasioned has died down and the supply of the stamps has evidently been exhausted as we are told by one collector that he received his money back but, hold, we stop the presses to say that he has just informed us that the circumstance arose over the fact that he sent his personal check in payment. Uncle Sam is too dinged suspicious to make a stamp dealer.

Bumped—We do not know that stamp collectors have much to complain of on the score of governmental treatment. It is remembered that in 1910, when the current issue of that time came with the star between the imprint and plate-number of the marginal inscription, there was a disgruntled collector or two, evidently of entire sheets but perhaps only of plate-numbers, who wondered at the misguided enterprise of the authorities in multiplying varieties for his eye. The explanation that the stars were the consequence of a plan devised to overcome perforating troubles and reduce the percentage of spoiled sheets by widening the space on the outside of the sheet so as to give more room for the perforating wheels did not impress these collectors. These little designs were guiding-stars that served a practical purpose in identification. All this is in the nature of a preamble to the remark of a stamp collector who voices the opinion in accents acerb that if the government wants to maintain the respect of stamp collectors it should avoid marketing new stamps in the manner that it is selling the new Grant gold dollars, three dollars for the one without the tiny star and $3.50 for the one with it.

Bright—Score another for the "Memory Tests" that are syndicated to a good number of the biggest newspapers of the day. Once before the omniscient propounder of problems had an intelligent question based on stamps, even though we do forget what it was, and now we rub our eyes to read: "What countries have used postage stamps with a continuous silk thread running through the paper of each stamp to guard against counterfeiting?" The day following the answer was given: "Bavaria, Schleswig-Holstein, Switzerland and Wuerttemberg." Who but a philatelist could even attempt to answer so technical a question as this one?

Buzzes—The American Philatelic Society nominations by the Cincinnati Philatelic Society, Branch No. 46, has been completed by the names of C. F. Heyerman, Detroit, and H. B. Phillips, Berkeley, Calif., as directors at large. The list given last week with these two additions has been endorsed by the Garfield-Perry Stamp Club, Cleveland, and the Philadelphia Branch, No. 18. It looks as though Wm. C. Michaels of Kansas City, the nominee for the presidency, will not be able to dodge the lightning. We are glad to hear that some of the members already are sharpening their wits with the idea of speaking right out in meeting at the Springfield convention. Now that the American Philatelic Society is the spokesman for philately in this country, it is proper that a full and free discussion is had on all subjects on which there is a division of opinion. As the society grows, the personal equation enters less into the deliberations at the conventions; and this is as it should be. Differences based on misunderstanding should be dissected publicly. Above all, members should be kept in touch with developments in the work that the society is prosecuting in order that they may give their proxy-holders, if need be, definite lines to pursue. That there will be no lack of meaty subjects for considerations is a foregone conclusion. A lively time is anticipated and surely this prospect is one to allure rather than to discourage.

Births—The suggestion of a correspondent that we give prominence to the pronunciation of philately is a good one and we shall act upon it in some way or other. A few words regarding the origin of the word, philately, are in place. Before 1865, there was no term in universal usage that implied stamp collecting. In that year M. Herpin, one of France's earlier collectors, said: "Is it not strange that in the six or seven years, during which the world has been studying and hunting for postage stamps, no one has thought of giving a name to the attractive occupation which gives happiness to some and fortune to others?" M. Herpin dismissed the inappropriate "timbromanie" as impossible, and somewhat modestly proposed "philately"; and quaintly defended the formation of the word from the two Greek words. He said: "Philately signifies then, the love of the study of all that concerns prepayment. Now that the word is let loose and the new-born has seen the light, in order to increase its happiness and prosperity, we earnestly beseech our young and charming lady readers to be its godmother. 'What!' some exlaimed, 'Do you speak Greek to young ladies? A singular way to please them and secure their patronage!' That means is perhaps better than you suppose. Who knows but that the peculiarity of the request will not prove its best recommendation?" As has been said, the success of the word no doubt exceeded M. Herpin's expectations. It was about 1885 that the word got into the standard dictionaries of the U. S. and Great Britain and now it has a place in all of the big dictionaries. We shall get to the orthoepy of philately, etc., in our next issue.

COLOR CHANGES IN AUSTRALIANS.

As we went to press last month the 1d K. G. appeared at the head office in Sydney in violet instead of carmine, and strange as it may seem its appearance created a certain amount of excitement in local philatelic circles. The 13th was a Monday and when we heard that the stamp was on sale, we sent along for our usual supply, viz., £20 worth. It appeared, however, that the policy the authorities have adopted is only to put the new colours on sale when the old ones have been sold out, with the result that the supply of the 1d violet was intermittent. By Wednesday it was decided to hold over the 1d for a while as the colour clashed with that of the 4d, and they were temporarily withdrawn from sale, but on the Friday they were reinstated.

We know that in one quarter we were accused of cornering the market by buying up all the stamps that were to be had as we had got inside information that no more were to be sold. Needless to say this was all a canard, although quite a number of people believed it. The subject was referred to in a lengthy report in one of our local daily newspapers, entitled "P.M.G.'s Purple Mystery," which was of quite a sensational character.

Needless to say, on the Friday morning plenty of the 1d in violet were obtainable, but strange to relate, they were not put on sale in Melbourne until ten days later, when we received a request from a dealer in that city for a small supply and we have since had requests for this particular stamp from various other parts of the Commonwealth. We do not know exactly when they were put on sale in Melbourne but the issue of these stamps as well as the other denominations has been quite patchy.

Perhaps it might be well to mention here that the postal authorities have decided to fall into line with the resolutions passed at the Madrid Conference and have changed the colours of the ½d, 1d, 1½d, 2d, and 4d. The ½d is to be brown like that of the former 1½d; 1d violet instead of carmine; 1½ green like the former ½d green; the 2d scarlet like the former 1d; and the 4d ultramarine, very much like the 6d kangaroo.

Other changes must ensue, but in the meantime there is a difficulty in regard to the clashing of the new colours with those of the old.

The reason the new 1d was held up was because it was so like the 4d. A large stock of the 4d was in existence and orders came through from Melbourne that the stamps in the old colours were to be used up before those in the new were to be put on sale; consequently, some of the 2d are now available in certain districts where all the old 2d orange have been sold out and yet they are not obtainable in other quarters. We have received quite a number on letters from various districts in N.S.W. and Hobart, but in some of the large centres they have not appeared at all. They were issued here on the 6th inst., but we could not get any idea as to when the other denominations would appear.

In this connection perhaps we might remark on the divergence of views with regard to the blue stamp, for some 3d from various British Colonies are coming along in blue, whereas it is the 4d Australian K.G. which has been changed to that colour and no mention whatever is made of the 3d.

It will be noted that all the denominations which have had their colours changed are those of the K.G. design. What does this signify, if anything? —Aust. Stamp Journal.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—A. C. Gakenheimer informs us that another contest was held on May 2 between the Polytechnic Institute and the Baltimore City College Philatelic Societies, and the former won 41 points to 14.

—A new cancellation is at hand from Indianapolis. It reads as follows in five lines:— "Indiana—Health Exposition—May 18, 27, 1922—Indianapolis—Indiana."

—"The WEEKLY is only out about 8 days and we have received from this adv. so far, 396 orders. We always knew the WEEKLY brought results and with the 'Mucilage Fountain Pen' which we know to be 'just the thing', we say 'a beautiful pair.'"—JAX NOVELTY CO.

—Will Paul Goeppner please send this office the names of the two cities concerned in his change of address? We cannot trace a subscriber alphabetically, as our mailing list is made up into states, cities, mailing routes and towns.

—The Liberty Stamp Co., 3974 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo., has just issued a comprehensive pricelist of stamps in sets. It will be sent to anyone free of charge upon application.

—The Duluth (Minn.) Herald of recent date contained a fine stamp story by Dudley Holland. It was illustrated by some ten cuts of Mid-Europe stamps.

—H. S. Dickey of Newton, Kansas, is at a hospital undergoing a serious operation. Correspondents will understand the reason should there be any delay in matters brought to his attention.

—We have been shown by M. D. Baldwin a specimen of metered mail now in use in New Zealand. The cancellation is upright rectangular in form and is not unlike a postage stamp in general effect. The abbreviation 1d appears in each of the upper corners, while in the upper half of the stamp are the words "Postage Paid". Within a circle in the center of the stamp is the meter number and upon either side in large caps appear "N. Z." In the lower part of the stamp are the words "One Penny" and "Auckland", the city from which the envelope was mailed.

—There is a letter at this office for Willis M. Pott. Who will supply the address?

—The New York Stamp Society celebrated its 18th anniversary with a dinner at Zucca's Restaurant, N. Y. City, on May 4. Dr. Hartley exhibited his collection of Mexican revenues and Baldwin Schlesinger Nevis to Portugal and Colonies. Addresses were made by Eugene Klein, who gave a history of the society, John Klemann, J. M. Bartels, Percy M. Mann, Dr. Lionel Hartley and Baldwin Schlesinger. There were twenty-one present, including two charter members, Eugene Klein and Baldwin Schlesinger, and also six ladies.

UNITED STATES BLOCKS
FINE EARLY U. S. COVERS
SUPERB EARLY UNITED STATES

Have you anything in the way of fine unusual mint blocks of United States, single superb copies used, or unused with full gum, of the issues previous to 1875 or any attractive covers, in fact, anything fine in the way of United States stamps that you would like to turn into honest to goodness, here is your check, cash. Not a case of sending you a check when the snow begins to fall. The money is ready for fine things.

Here of late I have been selling more than I have been buying and am willing to pay full current market prices for real things. Always interested in extra ordinarily fine foreign covers of the First Issue, providing they were issued Previous to 1860. Please remember that little combination—Foreign—First Issue—Previous to 1860. Also anything wonderful in British North America early issues, a single or a fine pair of the 12d black Canada, for instance, or in the way of foreign, a 3pf Saxony on the cover, or possibly a pair or strip.

CONDITION AND UNIQUENESS first consideration, price secondary. To show what I will pay, I just bought from a collector a U. S. Collection which he had purchased from a dealer and the dealer did not have it in his possession hardly a day. What's the answer? He bought it so cheaply that he could afford to almost give it away and consequently the second collector made his profit. If you need money, do not sacrifice your holdings.

UNITED STATES.—Last week I gave at some length a list of prices realized at the last Ferrari sale in the case of choice United States items. This week I will cover the more important Confederate States. It will be remembered that the French franc was worth 9.1 cents at the time of the sale and that a luxury tax of 17½% is collected by the government.

This sale only included the Provisional or Local issues from Aberdeen through Gonzales and contained nothing in the way of general issues which will follow at a later date. Some of the choice pieces changed hands at good prices but a great many sold for much less than they would have brought in New York. An entire Aberdeen, used, Scott's No. 1, sold at $26; a pair of the Athens 5c purple on cover $90, while a single 5c red type I found a new owner at $190. A used on cover, type II brought $270. A very fine unused 2c green Baton Rouge sold at $400, while a cut close copy reached only $180 and a pen cancelled copy but $117. Used copies of the 5c green and carmine sold from $40 to $65, while a 10c blue came to this country at $535.

A poor Beaumont on yellow brought only $42.50, while a pink on cover although not cancelled sold for $275. A pair of Bridgeville on cover reached $700, twenty-eight copies of the Charleston $140, while a wonderful Danville 5c red on piece with an Oct 3 town cancellation brought the top notch price of the Confederates, namely $1,400. A 5c blue Emory on cover sold at $330, a 5c and 10c blue envelope of the same town, in one lot $22.50, a Franklin envelope 5c blue on buff $700, a beautiful used pair of the Fredericksburg $107, while a used pair of the Goliad 5c black on blue moved to $1,225. A single 5c on rose brought $235, a gray $450, and a single black $320. A 10c black on gray sold for $590, while a poor copy of the error "Goilad" on cover reached $112.50. A fine 10c on rose on cover changed hands at $340.

A pair of the 5c gold on blue of the Gonzales brought $385 and as far as we know this is not known on cover in any other way. The stamp mentions no face value, but this color has always been taken as a 5c stamp, for they come in pairs while the gold on garnet travel in single copies so it is assumed to be the 10c value. A copy of the latter, by the way, brought the ridiculous price of $20. None of these are ever of fine appearance for the gold readily wears off.

The Rev. E. M. Gearhart sends a further lot of interesting current revenues for inspection, which are certainly to be classed as more than casual varieties. They are all used and in several cases still attached to the original document. There is a 10c documentary clearly double, the 20c and 50c Stock Transfer with double overprint, and a copy of the 2c with "Transfer" missing. There is one rather minor variety, namely, copies showing the final "R" of "Transfer" broken so that it resembles an "F". It is clearly a broken letter and not an error and it no doubt exists on all the dollar values, through the $10, for the Rev. Gearhart shows us the variety on the $1 and $2. It is to be found at the top of the sheet for the copies are all straight edge at top.

Some months back we chronicled the existence of most of the documentary stamps overprinted "F.D." by rubber stamp and all of these that we had seen came from New Orleans. As the overprint was uniform on the many that came to our attention, we assumed that the surcharge was applied locally by the collector of internal revenue. We never confirmed this information. We are now shown by the same gentlemen, several sold receipts from the New York Exchange with several different types of overprint. These are shown by the surcharge to have been overprinted after they had been placed upon the document, consequently it is difficult to say what form of recognition should be given the varieties made by the several, and possibly many more brokers. Not only the "F.D." are to be found but the "S.T." as well.

BELGIUM.—Mr. Henry Hooreman sends us the 2fr value in the new parcel post set. The color is black and in the centre shows the Coat of Arms with the winged brown and 1,000f grey lilac. All have the printing in the centre in black.

ICELAND.—Mr. W. T. Wilson submits to us the 40aur, King Christian type, surcharged "20 aur" in two lines in black.

MALTA.—We are in receipt of the following from Mr. Louis Carabott:—
"I have to inform you that this afternoon the G. P. O. issued the 6d script watermarked stamps surcharged Self-Government.
I was informed from a reliable source that the 2d King George script stamps were again printed, surcharged ONE FARTHING, and that they have corrected all varieties, that is the 'i' without dot, the broken 'g' and the 'One' not clearly printed.
No 3d stamps with or without overprint are available yet."

NEW ZEALAND.—Mr. R. Roberts informs us of the appearance of a 2d provisional stamp for this country. The ½d Victory stamp has been surcharged "2d" in each upper corner and across the centre of the stamp "Two Pence". The overprint is in red.

PERSIA.—Mr. R. W. Gray, writing from Teheran, January, 1922, contributes the following interesting notes to the Philatelic Journal of India:—
"The rate for foreign postage from Persia was raised a few months ago from 12 chahis to 1 kran (20 chahis), in accordance with the International Postal Conference at Madrid in 1920. The Indian Post Offices in the Persian Gulf have, however, not raised their rate accordingly, so in order to deal with this competition the Director-General of Posts was at the end of last year authorized to maintain the former rates for foreign letters posted at the Gulf ports, by Persian post. But as all foreign Post Offices had been advised of the increased rates, in order to prevent shortages being charged on letters thus franked, the following stamps are used on such letters:—
"The current 12 chahi surcharged by means of a hand-stamp in black:—

I KRAN
BENADERS
(the Persian for 'Ports').

and the current 6 chahi surcharged also in black:—

"These stamps are sold at their original values. Pending the arrival of these stamps, which were surcharged in Teheran and sent to Bushire, the Director of Posts at the latter place has been using a rubber handstamp with 'I Kr' and '10 Ch' to surcharge the 12 and 6 chahi stamps in blue. This surcharge was usually applied after the stamps were stuck on the envelopes and were apparently not sold in mint condition. Stamps thus surcharged were discontinued last November."—Stamp Collecting.

RUSSIA.—Mr. Karl Koslowski sends us another value of the new type of stamps mentioned last week. This is 500r dark purple. Mr. Koslowski also adds "Of this there are so far three values, viz., 500, 10,000 and 22,500r stamps, all of the same design and shape except the last values are on colored paper (buff), a paper that was left over when the Charity stamps of 1914, Scott's No. 207, were printed. On the design is noted the large crude Bolsheviki hammer under whose weight they intended to crush the whole of Europe, judging by Genoa reports. The inscription on the ribbon is Socialistic phrase and by-word "Workers of all Countries Unite Yourself." Mr. Koslowski also adds that the stamp mentioned in last issue surcharged "7,500r" in black has now been overprinted in blue, a cover bearing a pair with black and a pair with blue surcharges having just been received.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—We have received from Henry H. Hart, who was at Singapore at the time of writing (March 31), specimens of the stamps bearing the overprint "Malaya Borneo Exhibition". The surcharge is in black on the three stamps submitted, 1c, 2c and 4c values. Small sans serif capital letters are used for the overprinting, which is in three lines.

to Mr. G. N. Beulah, of Boston, Lincs., will doubtless cause some excitement:—
"I could not get the new watermarked 2½d stamps here (Tunapuna), but managed to get them in town. They told me at the post office that they are really not for sale yet (why, I can't imagine).
"They have just issued some new 1d stamps in brown, only 160,000 of them, and there are not to be any more.

ADHESIVE ADVERTS.

The idea of having advertisements on the backs of postage stamps is by no means new. Thirty years ago Mr. Barratt, of Pears' soap fame, offered the British Government a big sum to have their name printed on the reverse side of all the halfpenny and penny stamps then current. The offer was declined. In the meantime, however, several sheets had been prepared in the way suggested, and the stamps from these got into circulation and are much sought after by collectors today.
In 1893 the New Zealand Government made a contract with a business firm in Wellington for the right to advertise on the backs of the postage stamps of that Dominion. The contract, which was for three years, was terminable by the contractors at the end of twelve months. For some time pills, soaps, and other miscellanea were puffed in this way, but the "sticky back adverts." were not a success from the contractors' point of view, and they accordingly exercised their right to determine the agreement.
Several firms printed their names privately on the gummed side of early British postage stamps, but this publicity was short-lived, for the announcements were literally licked out of existence.
The P.M.G.'s decision opens up a new terror for philatelists, who, at any rate if they are specialists in the stamps of Great Britain, will be obliged to collect specimens of all the various adhesive adverts., even including printers' errors or other varieties in the wording. For to the serious stamp student the back of the label is almost as important as the front.
We need only offer one suggestion to the Advertising Manager of the Post Office. Let him arrange for the stamps to have gum of various succulent flavours, and there will no longer be any cause to doubt the truth of the saying "Sweet are the uses of Advertisement"!

JAMAICAN PICTORIALS, 1921.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

1s Statue of Queen Victoria.

In The Gazette of December 9th, 1920 (vol. 43, No. 50), the 1s value of the pictorial series was forecasted for appearance on the following day:—

"Stamp Office, KINGSTON,
6th December, 1920.

The following is a description of a shilling adhesive stamp to be used for Postage and Revenue purposes.

This stamp will be put into circulation on Friday, 10th December, 1920.

The design of the stamp is denoted by a Statue of Queen Victoria. At the top of the design is printed

JAMAICA
Postage Revenue

The denomination 1s is shown on an oval in each corner at the bottom. Between the denominations are the words of Jamaica Lady Supreme.

On each side of the design is a coconut palm.

The colour of the stamp is orange.

Signed, C. C. MANTON,
Deputy Stamp Commissioner."

The stamp was printed from two engraved plates, in deep orange for the frame, and orange for the vignette, a most unhappy combination, as it gives to the stamp a very blurred appearance. The size is the same as for the 2s and 3s stamps of this series, issued on the same day, 25 x 30 mm. The sheets consist of 60 stamps (12 horizontal by 5 vertical), printed on white paper, watermarked multiple Crown CA, old type, in an upright position. The perforation is 14, single line. A double marginal line surrounds the pane of 60 subjects, with the usual cross marks in all four margins for guide in centering the two impressions, and perforating.

The border design is lettered at the top JAMAICA in large fancy uncolored caps, while immediately below in smaller and plain caps, is Postage—Revenue. At each side of the design, in panels, are coconut palm trees, and at the foot, in either corner, is the value, 1s on small colored ovals in colorless shields. Between the value is the inscription, QUEEN VICTORIA—of Jamaica Lady Supreme—in two lines of colorless letters.

The vignette subject is a statue of Queen Victoria, by E. Edward Geflowski, and was erected in 1897, at a cost of £800 voted by the Legislature, to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty. It is a replica of one placed in the hall of the Colonial Office at Singapore, in 1887. The statue occupies the pedestal which formerly supported the statue of Sir Chas. Metcalfe (shown on the 3s of the pictorial series), which was moved to the water front in 1898, to make room for the statue of Queen Victoria,—and stands at the King street entrance to Victoria Park. This space was formerly occupied as a market and parade grounds for troops, and for many years was known as the Parade Gardens. In 1914, the name was changed by the Mayor and Corporation of the City of Kingston, to Victoria Park, and on February 14th of that year, the park was renamed by Princess Marie Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria. Though not overthrown by the earthquake of 1907, "it laid hold of the statue of Queen Victoria and waltzed her a quarter round on her pedestal. There she was discovered, after the shocks had passed, as serene and dignified as before, but gazing in a different direction."

Supplies of the stamp on the script watermarked paper were received as early as June, 1921, but pending lowering of old stocks, issue was not made until November 4th, 1921.

In March, 1922, the stamp on the old type watermarked paper was found at the small country Post Office of Manchioneal, with the center inverted. The Postmistress had not noticed the error and had been selling from the sheet to the public. The bulk, however—a half sheet of 30 stamps—was bought by a non-collector from Kingston, who did not discover his good fortune until he returned to town.

1½d Contingent Embarking.

For the printing of this value on the old type watermarked paper, issued July 3rd, 1919, five plates were used—the first being unnumbered, while those subsequently made were numbered from 1 to 4. On plates 1, 2 and 3, the number is in the lower right-hand corner of the sheet, inside the double marginal line, while on plate 4 it is in the left margin, outside the marginal line, opposite the first stamp of the 4th horizontal row.

These same five plates were used for printing on the script watermarked paper (issued Feb. 2nd, 1921), and in addition, eight further plates were made, numbered from 5 to 12. On plates 5, 6, 7 and 8, the number is under the 3rd stamp of the 8th horizontal row, in line with the register marking. On plates 9, 10, 11 and 12, it is from 3 to 4 mm. to the left of the register marking.

On the old type watermarked paper, a number of varieties exist as to position of the watermark—upright, reversed, inverted, and inverted and reversed. The normal position is sideways, with the top of the crown to the left.

Large numbers of this denomination are used, as it represents the inland as well as Empire letter rate. The plates contain but 40 subjects (8 horizontal rows of 5 stamps each), the stamp being of large size, measuring 42x22 mm.

There would have been much less demand for this value had the new rates advised by the Postmaster for Jamaica, and published in The Gazette of 16th March, 1922, been made effective on the 1st April. The Empire letter rate was to be 2d, post cards 1½d, and foreign letters (excepting U. S. A.), 3d. The letter rate to the U. S. A. was to remain at 2½d, a concession, perhaps, in view of the 2c rate on letters which has been effective since the 1st January, 1922, from the States to Jamaica. However, the Legislative Council was in session when the new rates were announced, and strenuous representations were made to them against the increased rates, with the result that they were not made effective. The inland rates were not to be affected by the Postmaster's Notice of 16th March.

2½d Return of a Contingent, 1919.

The frame as used for the 2½d pictorial, on the old type watermarked paper, issued on Feb. 18th, 1921, contained an error in that the ensign at the left of the design was drawn in an inverted position. The Crown Agents held themselves responsible for not having detected the error, and bore the expense of having the frame design re-drawn. The new printing, from the corrected plate, was on the script watermarked paper, and although received in the island in June, did not come into issue until November 4, 1921.

The stamp on the old type watermarked paper is known with the watermark inverted and reversed.

3d Jamaica Discovered by Columbus, 1494.

The 3d on the old type watermarked paper, issued April 8th, 1921, was in use for less than a year when it was replaced March 6th, 1922, by a printing on the script watermarked paper.

Sale of Colonial Stamps in London.

The practice of supplying Colonial stamps to the stamp dealers of Great Britain, through the Crown Agents in London, which was in force for almost two years, was brought to an end at the close of 1921. The Secretary of State for Colonies, to whom many complaints had been made regarding the procedure followed, rendered the decision that in future stamp dealers and collectors should send their applications direct to the Colonial Postmasters, as formerly. Several alleged irregularities were called to the attention of the Colonial Office, not only by collectors and dealers abroad, but also by several of the Colonial Governments. In Jamaica, representations were made to the Governor, Sir Leslie Probyn, against the sale of the script watermarked stamps of the pictorial series, to London dealers, so many months in advance of issue in the Colony.

6d Port Royal.

The first printing of the 6d picturing the reading of the Declaration of Freedom from Slavery, by the Governor, Sir Lionel Smith, on the square at Spanish Town, on 1st August, 1838, was destroyed by burning last July. This printing, as well as a second, and smaller printing, was on script watermarked paper,—the size of the stamp being the same as that of the 1½d Contingent Embarking, 42x22 mm.

Due to certain local conditions existing at the time this value was to come into use, it was feared that the subject treated would cause disturbances, and issue was withheld, and later the stamps were destroyed. The second printing is still in the island, pending a report on certain investigations which are being conducted in London, as to the sale of this stamp by the Crown Agents.

Another design for the 6d stamp has been prepared and approved, having as the subject of the vignette, a view of the harbour and town of Port Royal. Meanwhile, the 6d of the George series, on script watermarked paper, issued Oct. 21, 1921, is filling this gap.

THE PLIMPTON ENVELOPES.

"In 1874 the United States Stamped Envelope Co., Hartford, Conn., was formed and began work on their first government contract for making stamped envelopes. At first the flats were printed and embossed on the Allen Rotary Printing Press, nicknamed 'The Jumper,' then sealed and then folded. Unpreparedness is not exclusively a modern condition. We were suffering from a bad case of it when, with Plimpton Mfg. Co., we took over the manufacture of the government stamped envelopes and when it was time for the first delivery to Uncle Sam we were not ready. The Plimpton Mfg. Co. at Hartford was working as hard as possible and we at the Morgan Env. Co. plant at Springfield were adapting four or five Reay machines to the Government's needs. When completed we took them to Hartford and we also took with us some trained envelope girl operators. The machines got to Hartford the latter part of one week and the contract required that we should have envelopes to ship the following Monday. So Mr. Wickham and I kept at them through Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday and they were ready to make envelopes when Monday morning came."—Red Envelope.

THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF BELGIUM.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

CHAPTER XIII.

The 1884-89 Issue.

The Ministerial decree of August 29th, 1883, quoted in our last chapter, announced a change of colors for the three low value newspaper stamps coincident with the issue of the values from the De La Rue dies. It was stated that the colors would be reseda (or olive-green as the catalogues prefer to call it) for the 1 centime, yellow for the 2 centimes, and green for the 5 centimes.

The 1 centime, in its new color, was issued on January 1st, 1884, but a few months later another decree announced that its color would be changed to grey and that the stamps in this new color would be placed in circulation on July 1st, 1884. Curiously enough towards the latter part of 1888, the reseda color was again reverted to temporarily for the curious reason that the government had some ink of that color it wished to use up! A special order explained this last printing, viz.:—

"SPECIAL ORDER

Administration of Posts and Telegraphs. No. 12597

Concerning the temporary substitution of reseda-colored ink for the grey-colored ink used for the printing of the 1 centime stamps.

September 26th, 1888.

The 1 centime stamps will be printed temporarily in reseda colored ink, so that the Administration may be able to make use of a quantity of this ink which is now in the stores.

Stamps of this color will first be issued on October 1 next. As soon as the reseda ink has been used up, the 1 centime stamp will be printed in grey as before."

The 5 centimes was the next value to appear in altered colors, a Special Order dated October 28th, 1884, announcing it as follows:—

"In accordance with the Ministerial Decree of August 29th, 1883, by which the present color of the 5 centimes stamp is ordered to be abandoned and replaced by green, the next supplies sent out by the department will include a certain quantity of those stamps printed in green.

The new stamps are not to be placed on sale until existing stocks in the old color are all exhausted."

This change was due to the recommendation of the Universal Postal Union that stamps of all countries of the values of 5, 10 and 25 centimes and their equivalents should be in green, red and blue respectively.

Finally the 2 centimes was changed in color but not until January 1st, 1889, and then, instead of appearing in the yellow color decreed in 1883, it was printed in red brown. At least that is the color it was officially christened with, but Gibbons insists it is chocolate while Scott is equally insistent that the color is purple-brown.

There was no change in the design of any of the above described three stamps and they therefore represent the longest lived of any of the Belgian designs.

The designs supplied by De La Rue in 1883, having proved so unsatisfactory, steps were at once taken to replace them, and this time the Administration turned to France and invited Mr. Eugene Mouchon, the eminent Parisian engraver, to supply suitable designs and engrave the dies for 10, 20, 25 and 50 centimes and 1 and 2 franc stamps. Mr. Mouchon accepted the commission and proceeded with the task without delay so that on June 10th, 1884, the then Minister of Public Works, Mr. X. Olin, was able to announce that the new 1 franc stamps would be issued on the 15th of that month and the 10 centimes on the 15th of July. A later decree announced the new 25 centimes value would be placed in circulation on January 1st, 1885, and a still later decree stated that the remaining values of the series—20 and 50 centimes and 2 francs—would be issued on January 1st, 1886.

The portrait is the same on all six values and shows the effigy of Leopold II in profile looking to left. While it may be a more accurate piece of portraiture than that of the ill-fated stamps of 1883 it is hardly more flattering. Mr. de Bont says "in the beard are certain control marks, viz., R7 and 35". We imagine Mr. Mouchon has more than once received credit for inserting something he never intended in designs he engraved—the "death-mask" in the Serbian stamps of 1904, is an instance readily recalled—and so it is with these alleged control marks. They are nothing more nor less than part of the shading of the beard and the fact that they have a rough resemblance to the letter R and figures 735 in pure coincidence. The borders are all entirely different so that, but for the portrait, they bear no points in common indicating that they form the same series. All bear the inscription "Postes Belgique" and, somewhere in the lower portion of the designs, the engravers initials "E M" in monogram form. It is hardly necessary to give a detailed description of the borders of the several values for our illustrations "speak for themselves". It will, we think, be generally admitted that they are rather spoiled by over-elaboration. Some of the ornamentation is highly fanciful and its direct connection with Belgium is difficult to follow, while in one case, the 20 centimes, the whole effect of the design is spoiled by the absurd and distorted angles at which the numerals of value are shown.

The dies, as already stated, were the work of Mr. Mouchon while the plates were made in Malines and the stamps all printed there. The plates followed the usual arrangement and all contained 300 stamps.

They were printed on unwatermarked paper which was slightly tinted beforehand in blue for the 10 centimes, grey for the 20 centimes, rose for the 25 centimes, buff for the 50 centimes, green for the 1 franc and pale lilac for the 2 francs.

The 10 centimes is known on greyish paper, evidently some of that intended for the 20c; while Mr. Bouvez says that the first printing of this value comprised 5,000 sheets of white paper, and that in one printing of all values the paper was tinted after the stamps were printed. Both of these statements are open to serious question.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—We have received a copy of a little house organ of B. W. H. Poole on whose interesting pages we think we detect traces of the practiced hand of Bill Bloss, who evidently is now acclimated to Los Angeles and quite at home there as a gentlemanly stamp salesman.

—Ross O'Shaughnessy of San Francisco, accompanied by his sister, spent several days in Chicago's stamptown. Mr. O'Shaughnessy is proceeding by easy stages to the British Isles where he will spend the summer. Incidentally, he will attend the next section of the Ferrari sale. Mr. O'Shaughnessy, a strong partizan of British colonials, is leading a fine string of them across the water.

—In several high school and other scholastic papers, we have noticed recently the adds of stamp dealers. We have a copy of the Pioneer of the Frankford High School and notice announcements of Messrs. Wolsieffer and Mann on its advertising pages.

—The Midland Stamp Co., Toronto, Canada, has just issued a wholesale pricelist covering a wide range of offerings. Mixtures, packets, dealers' stocks, supplies and stamps per ten and hundred are offered at attractive prices. Specimen on request.

—J. Harold Blackney of Saginaw, Mich., is away on a six weeks' trip to San Francisco. This will account for any delay in answering correspondence.

—We have been favored with a newspaper clipping giving an interesting story of the travels of George W. Sulman of Chatham, Ont. We hope to publish it at least in part in some future number of our paper.

—The Elite Stamp Co., 1482 Broadway, N. Y. City, announces the theft of a number of stamps from their office valued at between four and five thousand dollars. The firm states that the stamps were stolen by a young man of about thirty who has been in the habit of frequenting the different stamp shops, purchasing a few dollars' worth or offering expensive stamps for sale, meanwhile pilfering all that he can lay his hands on. The party has in his possession a Brunswick stamp No. 14, catalog value $175, which has been reported by Mr. Dietrich as having been stolen from him six months ago. Will New York dealers interested confer immediately with the Elite Stamp Co.?

TRIBUTE TO WILLIS KING.

We take the liberty of extracting the following from a letter just at hand from Mrs. Wallace Dana Smith of Portsmouth, N. H. The name of Mrs. Smith will be quite familiar to many of our readers for the reason that for many years she has been actively interested in U. S. revenue stamps, including match and medicine.

Were you acquainted with Willis D. King (son of the late Col. King), of Nashua, N. H.?

His only relative, a sister, Mrs. Winfred (King) Judkins, wrote me that Willis was buried May 3. He had been in poor health over a year.

He was an old stamp collector, having been at it nearly, if not over forty years. His special favorite was Match and Medicine and Revenues of which he had a very fine one, and numerous duplicates. He had at one time (when he worked for Dunn) an office in Manchester, N. H., and there I attended my first stamp meeting. Have not seen his collection for many years, and he may have disposed of the duplicates and the U. S., as he was not as strong after the postage stamps as he was M. and M.

He was, at one time, a member of the A. P. S., the N. E. Phil. Assn. and American Envelope Society, Consolidated, but whether he was at the time of his decease, can not say.

He will probably be remembered by the older collectors, and his smiling face will be missed.

ADVERTISING CANCELLATIONS.

By A. H. PIKE.

Never before have philatelists been more interested in postmarks and cancellation than they are this year. For a great many the early U. S. will always hold their supreme interest but there is such a keen rivalry for these stamps that it is impossible for many to indulge in them to the extent that they would like to. They are seeking other fields and the second choice is usually the advertising marks that the U. S. and Canada have used so extensively for the past ten years or more. Here is a field where specimens can be purchased for a few cents. Most of them record local or national events of importance, they are usually clear and distinct and represent the work of artists at an original cost for dies ranging from $15.00 to $20.00 each.

The current mark that we are all more or less familiar with "Address your mail to street and number" is being used in about twenty-five cities and branch stations. Some varieties are exceedingly common where others are quite rare. Every one should try and get at least a set of these while they are in use. Several members of the Postmark Society have made it a point to keep a record of advertising marks from the earliest to the present time with the idea of publishing this check list. This material would be a very valuable addition to philatelic literature at this time, and we would like to hear from readers of the WEEKLY as to any suggestions that they might have as to an arrangement of a check list.

Rather than listing each city and repeating the wording of the indicia under each, we thought it best to arrange alphabetically the different indicias and under each of these an alphabetical list of cities where these were in use, giving the make of the machine, number of dies and the year in which used. Each indicia could be numbered in series of ten so that future issues could be added. In this way another check list of cities could be made and after each city just the number of the indicias included. Illustrations, of course, would include general designs of the mark rather than an illustration of all complete postmarks and cancellations.

We have succeeded in tracing up the manufacturers of all machine postal markings and have considerable data regarding each which would add considerable interest to this check list. We would like to have readers write us their views on above and would greatly appreciate any further suggestions. Please address all mail on this subject to A. H. Pike, 80 Grant St., Buffalo, N. Y.

AT FRANKFORD, PHILA., HIGH.

The Philatelic Society held its regular meeting on April 4, 1922.

The chief event was the distribution of a valuable collection of stamps. This collection was given by Mr. Charles Megargle of Frankford (a Dad), to be distributed among the boys of the club.

After this, several addresses were delivered. Mr. Sittig, the club's adviser, talked about "The probable value of stamps fifty years from now." Konorowski gave a talk on "The proper and best way to hinge stamps." The entire program was received enthusiastically.

A committee has been appointed to take charge of all future members. This committee consists of Komorowski, Weber, Putney and Turkheimer.

At the last meeting fifteen new members were admitted into the club. This is a bright forecast of coming affluence.

Don't forget fellows—all out for the next meeting, we need you. C. W. W.

MEXICO

At Wholesale Prices to Collectors

In order to clean up the balance of our stock of Mexico, issues of the Revolutionary period only, consisting of stamps under Scott's Numbers 322 to 607 together with the Official issues of this period and also including some of the scarce and desirable Hand-stamped surcharges together with Minor varieties and uncatalogued varieties. There are, however, only a small number of these latter items in the stock and the collections which we offer below have about 90% of the stamps listed by Scott, while the most of the others are listed by either Yvert, Gibbons, Michel or other catalogs. The catalogue values as given for the various collections are based on Scott where Scott prices the stamps, and on other catalogs where Scott does not price the stamps, thus assuring a fair valuation, while at the same time it must be realized that every lot would bear a much higher valuation based on the value of minor varieties which are included and figured at price for straight varieties, also an added value must be allowed for pairs and blocks, also covers, all of which are priced at the rate for ordinary single copies.

Each collection offered below is a specialized collection of Mexico covering the numbers mentioned above, War issues only, and each collection is laid out along thoroughly specialized lines, including used and unused single copies, pairs, strips, blocks, covers, etc.

THERE ARE POSITIVELY NO DUPLICATE PIECES IN ANY COLLECTION.

Considering the scarce minor varieties and other pieces in each collection, the actual price will figure at not over

EDITORIAL.

Shout—As we are now out of the woods, we may do a little shouting in order to relieve some of the suppressed enthusiasm that we have for an accomplishment that is without parallel in the annals of philatelic publishing. In a word, we may announce the materialization of the Philatelic Dictionary from the land of promise, the book that for many years has engaged the attention of its compilers and publishers, almost constantly. When Mr. Poole began his list in the distant past, it was not thought that it would require so long a time before the finished product would be available, but as the work of collation progressed the scope of the word-book was enlarged in order that a real dictionary would be made, one that would be accepted as standard by philatelists. With the assistance of a number of brilliant co-adjutants, Messrs. Poole and Wylie kept perseveringly at their tasks and with revisions, additions and other changes the work was one to test strong determination. The problems of publishing were numerous and Mr. Jewett was under the necessity of buckling down to his printing job in a painstaking way. The pounds of metal had to be guarded and yet ready for quick changes. The usual routine obstacles had to be overcome and it is only fair to all the gentlemen who have helped so intelligently in the work of preparation that due acknowledgment be made of their intelligent persistence.

Serve—The office of the Dictionary will be to serve philatelists. We know perhaps best of all how dependent the majority of collectors are on scattered sources of information for answers to rudimentary questions suggested by the stamp in their inscriptions. Collectors for years maintain their collections without satisfying their desire for knowledge of the words that pertain to stamps. Now, in one book will be found the definitions of all the words that make up the language of stamps, and the Philatelic Dictionary is to be had at a price that will make it popular. Two dollars expended for a work of this kind certainly will prove to be an investment that the months will justify; and in a broader sense the Dictionary will have a most beneficial effect in placing philately squarely in the minds of philatelists and the outsiders, as well.

Sioux—Several months ago, a correspondent sent for inspection an envelope bearing a three-cent of 1851, that had been sent from an eastern city to Galena, Illinois. The owner was interested in the address that the letter bore and asked for information about it. As we recall the address on the envelope, it was: "Chief Commissioner of Sioux Indian Treaty, Galena, Ill." We were unable to give our reader any satisfactory explanation at the time and so told him. In an old periodical dated in 1852, we have just found the following notice which we infer is pertinent to the inquiry: "The United States Commissioner to the Western Indians with his suite, recently arrived in Galena, Ill., from Mendota and St. Paul. The treaty with the Lower Sioux bands was signed on the 5th of August, 1852. These bands are to receive when they have reached their destination some $225,000 to pay their debts and expenses of removal and an annuity of money of about $30,000 for fifty years. The lands treated for with the lower bands amount to some 16 millions of acres and lie along and West of the Mississippi from the Iowa State Line north to the Falls of St. Anthony and above. The amount paid for this immense territory when the treaties will have been fully carried out will amount to the sum of nearly three millions of dollars."

Sorrow—American collectors have read of the death of Major Edward B. Evans of England, one of the world's foremost philatelists whose life of seventy-five years has spanned that of philately. When Major Evans was stationed at Bermuda, he devoted much time to stamp work and his studies were regarded with highest respect. He contributed his Philatelic Catalogue, 1840-1890 to the old Philatelic Journal of America, which was founded in 1885. This catalogue of nearly five hundred pages was published in 1891, as a separate volume and contained a frontispiece of Edward B. Evans, Major British Royal Artillery. He was perhaps the first philatelist to worthily present the issues of the Confederate States and his articles on them in the American Philatelist were a feature of official journal of the American Philatelic Society. To Major Evans must redound the credit for uncovering the wealth of philatelic material afforded by the stamps of the Confederacy. It was about 1889 that Major Evans visited this country and we remember him as having attended a meeting of the Chicago Philatelic Society at the old Grand Pacific Hotel where he was the guest of honor. His reputation at that time as an advanced student of stamps was secure and the later years have added to his laurels. It is fitting that this great exponent of true philately should have been engaged in active stamp work on the day of his death, which took place soon after he had finished some notes on the stamps of Duttia.

Start—In the Red Envelope, published by the U. S. Envelope Company, for March, 1922, a copy of which we have received from Mr. D. D. Berolzheimer, we find in Mr. Logan's history of early envelope making an interesting reference to the first postal card contract, entered into by the government and the Morgan Envelope Company, as follows: "In 1873, the government for the first time issued postal cards and to the Morgan Envelope Company was awarded the first contract. The early postal cards were printed with an artistic design, consisting in part of scroll-work border in a rich brown ink. We found it very hard to match the shade of ink exactly, and were unable to get our best efforts past the inspector. We had the best talent we could secure but there was no time to be lost and we were working nights as well as Sundays. Finally, one evening we seemed to have succeeded in getting an exact match, so we kept the Hoe Printing Press we had bought for the work doing all it could all night, but 'by the dawn's early light' we found our gaslight brown a daylight purple. At last, however, the difficulty was overcome and prejudice aside, I think we made better postal cards than have ever been made by any later contractors."

Second—Some weeks ago we received a long letter from a member of the American Philatelic Society dealing with problems that concern only the society which we thought we might use in some way or other in our columns. We now have a second letter from our correspondent expressing impatience at our delay in publishing his communication. Here we must say that it is not within our province to publish correspondence that basically is of interest to members only. When the questions involved have a general or public appeal, we do not feel this disinclination. We are pleased to see evidences of interest in the workings of the society on the part of members but for purely society discussion the journal of the A. P. S. is the recognized channel of publicity. We made this explanation in order to avoid any misunderstanding.

OUT-BID KING GEORGE.

"More Money in America than Abroad", says Charles J. Phillips.

(This interesting clipping is from the New York Times. It will prove readable. There are so few philatelists who are associated with International Rotary under the classification of "Philately" that the managing editor is pleased to extend a welcome to a brother Rotarian bound for the world convention to be held in Los Angeles, June 5-10.—W. O. W.)

King George of England was a bidder through an agent for the British Guiana postage stamp which recently sold for more than $32,000 at the auction sale in Paris of the Ferrari collection, but the prize was obtained for Arthur Hind of Utica, according to Charles J. Phillips, who arrived here last week from London as a delegate from the London Rotary Club to the International Rotary Convention in Los Angeles from June 5 to 10.

Mr. Phillips is known among stamp collectors not only as the head of the Stanley Gibbons firm of London, probably the largest stamp dealers in the world, but also as the author of many authoritative works on philately.

"There is more money in America than abroad," said Mr. Phillips yesterday at the Hotel Biltmore, "and that is the reason why his Majesty King George was disappointed in not obtaining what is acknowledged to be the scarcest of all postage stamps. I feel safe in saying that his collection of the stamps of Great Britain and the British Colonies is the finest in the world."

Mr. Phillips said that for several years he has known of Mr. Hind's collection, which is particularly rich in United States stamps, and gave him credit for doing a great deal toward raising the standard of scientific collecting in this country. Mr. Hind is a manufacturer of Utica, being President of the Clark Mills and other industrial plants. Besides buying the prize of the Ferrari collection, Mr. Hind also acquired at the same sale all of the choicest United States Postmasters' stamps, including the unique Boscawen (N. H.), five-cent stamp, on an envelope, for $11,250; the Lockport stamp for $8,100, the Alexandria and ten-cent Baltimore stamps for $6,500 each, and the New Haven five-cent stamp, on the original envelope, for $5,250. The Alexandria stamp was the five-cent on buff paper, and is one of only three known copies, while the ten-cent Baltimore stamp was on the original envelope.

"The high prices paid for the fine stamps in the Ferrari sale," said Mr. Phillips, "has had a marked effect in stimulating renewed interest in philately by discriminating collectors and there is already a tendency toward a considerable increase in prices for perfect specimens of early issues. It may interest American collectors to know that just before I sailed, a well known American told me that as he could not compete with the princely book collectors in this country he wished to turn his attention to postage stamps and asked me to assist him in making a complete collection if possible of all the stamps issued by the belligerent nations during the late war.

"These war stamps, by the way, apart from their general interest, have a vital educational value and I believe that, in the next few years, the attention of collectors will be prominently directed in that field. The Marquis of Bute was the first to appreciate the future value of these war issues and has the finest collection in the world."

While many American collectors do not devote such scientific study to the various phases of philately, Mr. Phillips said that the standard was steadily advancing here and he cited Charles Lathrop Pack, President of the American Forestry Association, John N. Luff, Dr. Carroll Chase, William L. Stevenson Stanley B. Ashbrook and A. Hatfield, Jr., as among the prominent American collectors who have devoted thorough educational study to the issues of different countries.

THE NEW YORK STAMP SOCIETY.

Address by Eugene Klein, First Sec.

Eighteen years ago a half dozen stamp collectors met in the rear room of a restaurant on Lexington Ave., near 59th St., and founded the N. Y. Stamp Society. Meetings were held regularly twice a month, and new members were added steadily. They met to exchange their duplicates, and their various stamp experiences. Soon auctions and competitive exhibitions were introduced, which became very popular, and brought in many members. There were many with us, through whose enthusiasm our Society grew. With pleasure I recall those early meetings, attended by our first and, shall I say permanent Treasurer, Baldwin Schlesinger; Dr. H. B. F. Heath, who conducted the auctions; our early Secretary, H. J. Dicke; Miss E. Cook, who was a constant attendant; Wm. E. Haack, the specialist in German Colonies; Theo E. Steinway and P. F. Bruner, the classic collectors; the inimitable Prof. M. Loewy, who many times entertained and puzzled us with his card tricks; Vahan Mozian, F. A. Raymond, F. Engel, E. Penshow, G. Schroeder, Dr. Loewit and others.

When many were made homeless by the San Francisco earthquake, needy stamp collectors were helped by the N. Y. Stamp Society from the proceeds of an auction sale, to which collectors and dealers made contributions.

The N. Y. Stamp Society took the most prominent part in entertaining some five hundred visitors to the International Philatelic Exhibition in 1913, with a supper.

We have cause to be proud of the past of the N. Y. Stamp Society. Seeing you assembled here to-night with good will and enthusiasm in your faces, we may confidently look forward to a glorious future.

Before closing, I want to mention those of our members who are no longer among the living. Let us rise in silent tribute to our sadly missed friends while I read their names:—J. Levy, our first Pres.: G. Anthonics, C. B. Bostwick, H. Grossman, L. Harris, C. Jancovich, C. Lehman, H. Lutz, C. J. Morris, L. Phillip, P. Stypman, F. M. Thomas, A. M. Trujillo, G. R. Tuttle, F. J. ATLAS STAMP CO. (P. C. Smith) W. Somerville, 44, Mass.

UNITED STATES BLOCKS
SUPERB EARLY UNITED STATES

Have you anything in the way of fine unusual mint blocks of United States, single superb copies used, or unused with full gum, of the issues previous to 1875 or any attractive covers, in fact, anything fine in the way of United States stamps that you would like to turn into honest to goodness, here is your check, cash. Not a case of sending you a check when the snow begins to fall. The money is ready for fine things.

Here of late I have been selling more than I have been buying and am willing to pay full current market prices for real things. Always interested in extra ordinarily fine foreign covers of the First Issue, providing they were issued Previous to 1860. Please remember that little combination—Foreign—First Issue—Previous to 1860. Also anything wonderful in British North America early issues, a single or a fine pair of the 12d black Canada, for instance, or in the way of foreign, a 3pf Saxony on the cover, or possibly a pair or strip.

CONDITION AND UNIQUENESS first consideration, price secondary. To show what I will pay, I just bought from a collector a U. S. Collection which he had purchased from a dealer and the dealer did not have it in his possession hardly a day. What's the answer? He bought it so cheaply that he could afford to almost give it away and consequently the second collector made his profit. If you need money, do not sacrifice your holdings.

Information regarding new issues and varieties will be gratefully received. We cannot give the addresses of correspondents.

The chronicle of United States is edited by PHILIP H. WARD, JR., Box 4216, Germantown, Phila., Pa. The foreign chronicle is edited by PERCY C. SMITH, 40 Packard Ave., West Somerville, Mass. Correspondents will please be careful to send their matter to the right address.

UNITED STATES.—Mr. John A. Klemann of the Nassau Stamp Company has shown me a single mint copy of the 2c Panama-Pacific, perforated 12, watermarked single line U S P S in a deep lake shade differing from any that I have seen heretofore. The stamp seems to be on a paper with a somewhat grayish tinge but due to the fact that gum covers one side and the engraving most of the other, it is difficult to see the paper itself. It is certainly not some of the bluish rag paper left over from the 1908 series, for it will be recalled that the latter was a double line watermarked paper whereas this is single. It is said that they were purchased from the San Francisco Post Office at the time of use.

Mr. E. H. Gammans calls our attention to the fact that he has located a mint strip of four of the 3c grill, issue of 1870, three of which show grill and one is without. As a whole the seventy grills are a poor lot and more stamps that were actually supposed to be grilled missed the impression of the grill roller than those that received it. It is for this very reason that stamps of this issue are so difficult to obtain with decent grills.

In a recent issue mention was made of the fact that Mr. G. A. Albrecht had found at his office some of the 2c stamps bearing plate No. 5990. Mr. W. R. McCoy now calls attention to the fact that this is without doubt some plate that has been recently finished and that he found them in the New York office mixed in with a lot of the 13400 range. Plate No. 5990 was reported uncompleted for some reason at the time it should have been finished and the small "F" in front of the plate number indicates that it must have been finished here of late.

On page 236 of MEKEEL'S for May 13th, Mr. J. W. Sampson in his very interesting article on the 7 cent vermilion states that the Continental Bank Note Company "took over the plates then being used by the National Bank Note Company and began printing." Mr. Luff tells us on page 130 of his well known book that "The new contractors (meaning the Continental) also made haste to provide themselves with new plates, made from the altered dies, that they might not be required to make use of any of the plates of their predecessors. By the date of the commencement of their contract they had an ample supply of plates for all values from the one cent to the fifteen cent inclusive." There had been quite a little complaint about the product of the National Company and consequently the new concern was especially anxious to avoid any confusion in the mixing of stocks. Since Mr. Luff's work appeared in 1901, there has been no facts advanced to prove that the Continental Company ever used the 7c plate of the National and consequently this is evidently a slip on Mr. Sampson's part.

Further on in the same article we find, "The designs of the 1870-71 issue being entirely satisfactory, the only change made was to add an identification mark to each of the dies (except the three high values)." This is incorrect, for the secret marks were also added to the three high values and may be seen in the proofs. Plates, however, from these three dies were never laid down for it was 1874 before the Continental people were called upon for stamps of the 24c, 30c and 90c denominations and by that time they evidently thought that any of the National products in the several post offices would be so small that there would be little likelihood of any turnback. In the case of these three values they used the National plates.

Mr. Sampson also describes a variety which he designates as "Figure 8", wherein the cross lines surrounding the head of Stanton run into the white surrounding frame. He states that this is "perhaps a retouching of the plate". Such a variety is to be found on many of our issues and should be classified as a shift. It is certainly not a retouch for it cannot be imagined that an engraver doing the crudest kind of work would take a graver and add lines where no lines were intended.

The "Figure 7" shows the well known position line and dot which are to be found in the case of all of our early stamps. They are put on the plate first as a guide in transferring and if it were possible to study a complete sheet of the 7c it would, no doubt, be seen that these dots occurred in certain places uniformly throughout the sheet, in some cases the design covering the dot and line as is supposed to be the case.

Mr. H. Clay Reed sends two unchronicled varieties of the provisional envelopes for our inspection. One came from Hagerstown and the other from Boston, although they were both overprinted in Washington by what we formerly designated as the fourth Washington type. The die was later sent to St. Louis and we now classify it as St. Louis (III-9).

We also wish to thank Messrs. F. R. Demmerly and Fred. Klingensbern for notes of interest.

AUSTRIA.—Mr. Eugene Klein and the Economist Stamp Co. submit to us for chronicle a set of seven stamps each bearing the likeness of a noted musician. The stamps are of a large square shape perforated and of the following values and colors: 2½kr brown, with portrait of Hayden; 5kr dull blue, portrait of Mozart; 7½kr grey black, Beethoven; 10kr lilac, Schubert; 25kr olive, Burchner; 50kr red lilac, Strauss and 100kr olive brown, Wolf. At the top is the usual lettering "Oesterreich" and at the base the figures of value and "Kronen".

Help! Murder! Police!

For pity's sake, please don't send us any more orders for 10, 20 or 100 "Black Jacks" with fancy cancellations at 10c each. Recently we advertised a "few hundred" "Black Jacks" and Blue Taylors at bargain prices. The first day's mail brought orders for more than our entire stock. Those who ordered modestly we have tried, and are trying, to take care of. We still have a few Fair copies of "Black Jacks', at 10c each.

Not more than three to one customer. Postage extra. We have spent most of our time for three weeks returning checks and money orders. More than forty went out in one mail. At fancy prices we have a few fancy pieces; red and blue star cancellations on cover, etc. These are $1 to $5 each, and not 15c. On approval against references.

7c RED STANTONS

Of the nearly 600 copies recently advertised, less than 200 remain. Ordinarily nice copies, of good color, centering or cancellation, at $1.00 each. Well centered (not millimeter scale exact), and otherwise fine copies at $1.50 each. Good copies, not museum pieces, 60c each. Postage extra. Five copies the limit. Pairs, shifts, fancy items, on approval.

Our apologies to those who have been kept waiting for orders or approvals. We had to send back the money of those whose orders we could not fill, and could not afford extra stenographers for that unholy purpose. We have fine U. J. O. MOORE, Inc., RHEIMS, N. Y.

of the issue on that day of the provisional 60f on 1 gulden stamp. The 80c on 1g also chronicled was then exhausted and promises to be scarce.—Philatelic Magazine.

GOLD COAST.—Mr. J. A. Galbraith has advised us of the appearance of a 1½d in a red shade and a 3d in blue color both on the script watermarked paper.

GUATEMALA.—The Metropolitan Stamp Co. submit to us for chronicle the 60c and the 90c of the 1919 issue surcharged "1922 25 Centavos" in three lines in black.

HEJAZ.—According to the Collectors Club Philatelist this country has brought out two surcharged issues and one of permanent (?) design almost simultaneously. The surcharges are stated to read "Land of the Prophet".

MALTA.—Mr. Frank Pollard Brown submits a sheet of the recent farthing on 2d and the only minor varieties that are noticed are the "i" in farthing without the dot and a broken "g" in the same word.

Mr. Louis Carabott informs us that the General Post Office is only selling one sheet of the farthing on 2d to each applicant and it is necessary to leave your name and address in order that there may be no repeats. Mr. Carabott also adds that the 6d, old C.A. watermark surcharged Self-Government is unobtainable at the General Post Office.

NICARAGUA.—The Metropolitan Stamp Co. report the 2c stamp of the type of the same value of the 1914 issue in a carmine shade.

SPAIN.—We are in receipt of the following information regarding the Spanish air mail stamps in imperforate pairs. The number issued is as follows: 5c, 200 copies; 10c, 100 copies; 50c, 300 copies and 1 peseta, 100 copies. No 25c were issued imperforate. Also the regular 10c air mail stamp is obsolete. Mr. Eugene Klein has kindly submitted the above mentioned stamps and gives the information.

ST. LUCIA.—The 3d has been printed in ultramarine on script watermarked paper and Mr. J. A. Galbraith sends us a copy for chronicle.

UPPER SILESIA.—Mr. Pollitz of the Frank P. Brown Co., advises that he has received the following surcharges of this country: 60 pf overprinted "4 M"; 75 pf overprinted "10 M" and the 80pf, "20 M". All the printings are in black.

ZANZIBAR.—We understand the 3c orange, Script CA, is now on issue—Stamp Collecting.

TWENTY BINDERS PAID FOR.

Notwithstanding the fact that 110 persons indicated that binders for the WEEKLY would be wanted in case they could be made a reality only twenty real orders accompanied by cash have been received. This binder is being offered by us at cost. It is supposed to fill a long-time need, and if those who have been requesting a binder now fail to make good we shall dismiss the matter from all further consideration and remittances will be refunded.

The Philatelic Dictionary

Cloth Bound PRICE $2.00 Post Free

THIS great book is now in the bindery and we are prepared to take orders accompanied by cash. The expense in producing it has been so great that we feared a $2 price would not be possible. The authors, B. W. H. Poole and Willard O. Wylie, publicly acknowledge their indebtedness to Messrs. C. A. Howes and Chas. S. Thompson for assistance rendered. W. W. Jewett of the Jewett Printing Co. has also taken great pains as a producing factor in this great achievement.

The book is handsomely bound in green cloth with appropriate lettering, and no student of stamps can do without it. It represents the high watermark in philatelic book publishing and especially from the standpoint of the general collector.

On these advance orders the Dictionary will be mailed direct from the bindery at Long Island City, N. Y., some three or four weeks ahead of a Portland or Beverly mailing.

"WOULD YOU KNOW YOUR STAMPS? USE THE DICTIONARY!"

SPECIAL NOTICE | The section, letters H to Z, will be supplied post free for $1. We thus keep faith with those who purchased the first two sections. Apply at once.

THE STAMP ALBUM.

By L. H. BRIGHAM.

The majority of us who began collecting when boys, "pasted" our stamps in a small note book which could easily be carried about in our coat pockets.

If collecting was followed up for any length of time, our notebook soon became full and stamps and countries badly mixed up.

Or perhaps if we were fortunate enough to have had a real "honest to goodness" stamp album, with the spaces all marked out, presented to us on some memorable Christmas or birthday, what few stamps we possessed were lost among the multitude of pages and for a time we were rather discouraged over the appearance of our beloved collection and despaired of ever being able to fill even a tenth of those yawning spaces.

New issues are constantly appearing, which find their way into this country in great numbers on current correspondence. For this reason the young collector of today will at first obtain a far greater number of twentieth century stamps for his collection than nineteenth century ones.

No stamp album has spaces for all the many new stamps. We shall therefore have to depend on a semi-blank album for taking care of them.

When one has five hundred or a thousand different varieties, the notebook form of keeping them should be abandoned and a Junior Stamp Album obtained. These Junior Albums are regular stamp albums in every sense of the word and can be obtained very reasonably from twenty-five cents to a dollar each. The many countries are alphabetically arranged and many of the more common stamps fully illustrated. These illustrations greatly aid one in correctly placing the stamps in their order of sequence of issue. Other than these illustrations, the rest of the spaces are ruled off, but blank, thus allowing one to put even the newest of issues in the book wherever most convenient.

It is not advisable to obtain a more advanced type of album, with each space reserved for a certain stamp and no blank spaces, until one's collection has reached the 2,500 or 3,000 mark. Perseverance and steady, energetic collecting can bring the size of one's collection up to this number in a surprisingly short while without the expenditure of money, as is sometimes thought necessary by some collectors.—The Haversack.

EARLY NEW ZEALAND.

By R. F. JOYCE, F. R. P. S.

I will start with the postscri letter I received some time ag a well-known collector, who epi cally wrote "It's not a darn bit buying books if you don't read The same might be said of stamps the books have been bought, a haps paid for, and to-night we w mence reading the first chapter book of "New Zealand."

Glancing at the preface it is "The charm of studying the e sues of any country is the nun problems presented to the stud solution. As the years go by these are solved, yet often there a host of difficult questions unan and the status of some of the themselves are surrounded in a obscurity." So it is with the e sues of New Zealand.

The author of the following pa endeavoured to point out some problems, and though he lays n to having solved any, his notes tempts may be of some use to oth dents. He takes it for grante readers have a superficial knowl may be obtained by the posses Gibbons' Catalogue and occa looking at the same.

1. The Problem of the London

In Gibbons' 1895 Catalogue we three values listed on white an paper. Though the 1d. blued is and four years later it is not me at all. The 1/- on white also dis in a subsequent edition, to reap No. 3 many years later. Surely something nebulous here. Do stamps really exist? It is stran this point has not been definitely long ago.

A dated copy on original o blocks of the six varieties, their g ness sworn to by an expert a prejudiced committee, would s matter at rest for all time. Unfo ly, no collector has so far produ required evidence, and we are theorising and speculation.

These stamps at present have hypothetical existence. but may, planet Uranus, be discovered long wards. The question will be solved when we know for certai caused the bluing of the paper.

If we examine any stamps sli blued, we notice that where the the design is thickest. the bluing back is more pronounced, giving varieties in some cases of ivory This is proof that the particul used has something to do wi matter.

The next question is, was it th or the gum, or both? There divers opinions on the subject, most hold that the gum has n to do with it. I have come two reasons that make me that the gum is the other resp factor, while the paper acts as between. Firstly, "Blucher's In Chemistry," page 489, says that t for finding out whether paper is p sized is to coat each side of the with different chemicals (enume and on a well-sized paper no takes place, while a badly-sized becomes discolored. Secondly, M "Line Engraved Stamps of Britain," page 35, tells us that about 1855 (note the date) the gu chemicals added to it to incre adhesiveness. Now given iron in and the other portion of the compo the paper or gum, Turnbull's Ber Prussian blue, would be formed. there is iron in most inks except ca which is an animal dye prepared cochineal. The colour of No. 1 Zealand is dull carmine. and Australia No. 2 ditto, therefore stamps only appear on blued paper they have been faked as such. T easily done by soaking in copper su and easily detected, as a little cleanses us of this deed, while the tion of ammonia will turn the stamp into the next issue. the matter, I would point out that though they still used "star" paper and inks containing iron, and only the mucilage altered, a few years after blued paper and ivory heads ceased to emanate.

Having dispensed with No. 1a, what about No. 3? This, of course, is a most conceivable stamp, but I am still looking for a dated copy. It is well worth noting that over a quarter of a million penny stamps and one million 2d stamps were printed before the "1862 stars," so there should be no difficulty in distinguishing the later "stars" from the London prints, as the impressions particularly as regards pearls in the crown are not so distinct. An additional guide is the colour of the 2d, which has a slight greenish tinge, and the 1d is only approached by a shade in 1864 when the plate shows wear. The 1/- is a different matter. There is not the colour distinction, and as only 100 sheets, more or less, had been printed up to 1862, the plate shows no lack of detail. Here the postmark will give great assistance, but these are reserved for another chapter.

2. The Problem of the Blue Papers.

This issue was printed by Richardson, in Auckland. The terms of the contract were that the Government had to find the paper while the printer found the ink and gum. Well, the Government could not find the paper. They had apparently mislaid 3,000 sheets sent out with the plates. Government departments always have a plentiful supply of red tape and blue paper, so Richardson got both, and printed stamps on the latter. (You will find some of the red tape in "History of New Zealand Stamps," page 49). Some of this blue paper shows a watermark of "Charles Skipper and East London." Also it is possible for that of "WILLIAMS to appear, as paper with these watermarks was in use by the Government by that time. Perhaps someone will be able to plate these watermarks! Note that the paper varies considerably, which points to that of the different makers being used.
E. TOWGOOD and W. LEWIS"

3. The Problem of the 1857 "Star."

Some of the paper above referred to appears to have come to light, as recently a 1d has been found undoubtedly printed by Richardson. I have a copy, and other copies in three pairs exist in New Zealand, perhaps more.

Now, as there was nothing wrong with the star paper, the natural question is: Did Richardson print any other values besides the 2d? I am of the opinion that he did, and that by assiduous attention to shades and postmarks, more especially dated ones, we shall be able to add to the list.

4. Note on the Richardson "White Paper" issue.

I have not seen of late any attempt at classifying the papers of this issue. The papers I have come across are:—

a. Thick soft porous paper like the latter date "Waterlow's."

b. Medium thickness and hard paper.

c. A much thinner paper.

The 1d seems mostly on soft paper. The 2d on hard paper is not uncommon, but I have never seen either of the 1/- or any other paper than "a." "C" variety is much scarcer. Two stamps of this issue are listed perf. 13: The 2d, which everyone has seen, and the 6d, a great rarity.

These stamps were not perforated until eight months after Richardson had finished them, so were probably some remainders of stock overlooked by the Postal Department, and it is not likely that any other values exist but "Peutetre, on ne sait pas," though to show what surprising things turn up, Sir Heaton Rhodes has found a 2d pale blue on the thin paper "c." This stamp is probably rarer than the 6d.

5. The Problems of the "Pelures."

Firstly, was this issue printed in 1862? This is a very important matter, as if so it would have been printed by Richardson, whose contract did not expire until April 15th of that year, while Davies started in February as the Government Printer of stamps. He, being a Perkins Bacon man, and having with him sufficient "star" paper, is not likely to have used any other. To my mind, there is no doubt that the issue was printed at the close of 1862, although it would be just as well to consider the pros and cons.

For being Printed by Richardson

The Catalogue says that they were printed early in 1862, and it is quite likely that, being just at the end of his job, Richardson would be more likely to use any old paper to finish up with, than a new man with a large supply of good paper. This is the only argument in favour of Richardson, but is a good one, provided the Catalogue date is correct.

Against we have several—

Firstly, nearly all dated copies show December '62 to '63 as being the average dates, and the very few earlier dates known may be a misreading of the date, which is an easy matter. Then the colours of the 1d, 6d, and 1/- is undoubtedly the shades of the Davies "stars" of '62. Thirdly, the 3d, which we know exists unused, could not have been printed before December, 1862, as the plate had not arrived in the Colony before then.

Until conclusive evidence to the contrary turns up, I think we may safely say the Pelures were printed by Davies in the latter end of 1862, and perhaps he found it necessary to make use of the Pelure paper again at a later date.

The next Pelure problem is: Why the change of colour in the 2d?

The ink used appears to be an almost fugitive ultramarine. As the ink fetched out from London gave excellent results on this paper, the only inference is that, like the "star" paper, there was, too, a shortage of ink.

The 3d has caused a lot of excitement one way and another. Quite a number of collectors who have not seen it will not credit its existence. I am sorry I cannot exhibit one, but I have it on good authority that Mr. A. T. Bate at one time possessed two copies unused. And I, for one, am quite ready to credit this, I think the colour has been misnamed though, as Mr. B. Goodfellow points out that it must have been a brown-lilac, as the other shades were not printed until later. However, as there are not a number of shades of 3d Pelures, "Gibbons" may have followed their usual custom of naming a single simple colour where only one shade is known. The argument that, "because they have the colour wrong the stamp was probably a fake" is childish in the extreme.

What probably took place was this:—

The new supply of "star" paper and the plate of 3d stamps were sent out together from London on 24th July, 1862 (L. P., Jan., 1919), and arrived in New Zealand in November when the Pelures were being printed. Davies' first concern would be the new plate that doubtless he was so eager to print—in fact, his first printing lasted the country three years (Hist. N.Z. P. 53, X); and after unpacking it he takes an impression off it to see that it turns out all right, using the Pelure paper, which is the only paper available at the moment, and sends the proof along to the Postmaster-General for approval. In the meantime the newly-arrived "star" paper has been unpacked, and of course no time is wasted on the remainder of the Pelure, as doubtless it would have far more usefulness in other places; but what happened to the sheet? Well, there were many P M. G.'s (and secretaries to the same) and it is not to be wondered at that when Mr. Bate held office there were only two left.

The last problem of the Pelures is one that sometimes confronts the old fox as well as the chicken—

When is a Pelure not a Pelure?

The answer is simple: When it is a thinned "star."

A great number of the 6d "black-browns" printed on thin "star" paper have been thinned down to resemble a Pelure, and the resemblance is sometimes extraordinarily fine. However, a little benzine usually brings up a remnant of the watermark or shows a slight opalescence where the paper has not been evenly thinned.

6. The Problem of the '62 "Stars."

As this paper is getting rather longer than I intended, I will refer you to Mr. Goodfellow's excellent articles in the "L.P." for details, and briefly mention the following:—

There are three separate issues of Imperf. "Stars" since '62, the first being the '62 issue as per the Catalogue, except Nos. 49, 50, 51a, 55, 57, 58, 60a, and a few shades of other numbers.

The next being an issue in '66 when the perforating machine broke down, and these should be listed as imperf. varieties of "110-125." I have come across most of these imperf. varieties though some belong to the next emanation when the machine broke down in 1868. These latter two might be well classed together as imperf. Varieties up to 1871 are known, and some may have been temporary mishaps and others of longer duration.

7. Lastly, I come to the Issue on N.Z. Paper.

Little is known about this paper. From the appearance of the stamps and the excellent way they have lasted all these years, combined with a distinctive "N.Z." watermark, it is to be wondered that so few sheets, comparatively, were printed. Perhaps the explanation is in the cost of paper. The large "star" was in general use throughout the colonies, and as a stock line was probably a cheaper factor; this would concern Governments of earlier days nearly as much as now.

Another point that I don't think has been definitely settled is, was the paper in use for the '72 "N.Z." the same as this? I think not. To me, the paper seems different, and the "N.Z." in the latter issue appears smaller. Also it is not likely that they would have kept this paper idle for eight years, is it? This brings us to the end of the Imperf. full faces, though by no means propounds all the problems in connection with them. —N.Z. Stamp Collector.

ANOTHER TRIUMPH OF BOLSHEVISM.

From Pokorovsk in the Russian province of Saratov The Daily News yesterday received a card sent by a man who asked that a package of food be forwarded to him through the American Relief Administration. Attached to the card to pay the postage was a sheet of forty 100-ruble stamps.

In other words, send a card by mail from Russia to Chicago now costs 4,000 rubles, a sum which before the war and the bolshevik revolution was equivalent to $2,000, and is now the equivalent of five cents or less.

Surely the bolshevik governors of Russia must congratulate themselves on their success in devaluing Russia's money. And the worth of their money seems to be a very reliable index as to the worth of their government.—Chicago Daily News.

MORE PHILATELIC WANDERINGS IN EAST ASIA.

By HENRY H. HART.

Here, sailing through the purple waters of the Java Sea, Sumatra, to the right of me, to the left, the innumerable emerald islands of the East Indian Archipelago, I shall try to tell you some of my experiences, philatelic and otherwise, of this, my second protracted visit to the countries west of the 180th meridian.

Sailing from San Francisco on October twelfth, the first stop was Honolulu. This I found as beautiful as ever, in fact it is to me more beautiful every time I visit it. I visited the palace, where I had never been before. It was full of memories of the sovereigns of old Hawaii. I visited the room where Queen Liliuokalani was virtually a prisoner, and where she wrote the immortal "Aloha Oe", and the throne room, lined with the portraits of Hawaiian monarchs and princes, many of them familiar to the stamp-collector.

At the end of October I landed for the third time in Dai Nippon, which I discussed in my last series of papers. I found business in a bad way there (the first of the world-depression in 1920, made itself evident in Japan), and everyone was on tiptoe about the Washington Conference, then in session. In fact, the cables were so congested with lengthy press despatches that all commercial messages were delayed.

In Yokohama I found nothing philatelically interesting. In fact, I have never found a well-equipped stamp-shop in Japan. It may exist, but such stamps as I have ever bought in the Land of the Rising Sun were obtained in curio shops, or in places where tobacco and post-cards were sold.

Leaving Yokohama for Kyoto, I took the train on which Premier Hara was to travel, the night on which he was assassinated at Tokyo Station. As he made up my bed, my boy told me, in his quaint Tokyo dialect—Japan has its dialects—of the murder. All Japan was intensely excited over it.

After traversing the country and spending some time in Kyoto, I settled for six weeks in Kobe, the business centre of Japan. There I picked up a few, but very few stamps. The most interesting things I obtained were the commemorative stamps of the last few years, cancelled with a special cancellation of the event which they commemorated. I was in the city when the "Kaga", latest of the Super-Dreadnaught, (scrapped by the Conference) was launched. I was awakened at 6.00 A.M. by the tramp, tramp, tramp of the wooden shoes of the school children, who were being marshalled along the wharves and streets in seemingly countless numbers to see the launching. Each carried a flag, and interspersed were bands playing Sousa marches and national airs. Of course, all was excitement, and the government issued special picture postcards of the event, and a special postmark was used. This gave the occasion to the street-vendors to get rid of their old stocks of specially cancelled cards of the Crown-Prince's return, other launchings, etc.

I spent my week-ends at Kyoto, but postage stamps were not to be found there. So I contented myself with outings to Sakamoto and Takao and Lake Biwa with Japanese friends, and in squatting on the tatami around the hibachi, selecting color-prints to add to my collection, and learning more about the old artists, their lives, the sources of their inspiration, and their technique. More than ever I realised that the first requisite to really understanding a people is to know their language, and I have never regretted the long hours I spent with book and brush, in learning to speak and read and write Japanese.

From Kobe I went by train to Shimonoseki, and embarked for Fusan, Korea. The Straits of Korea can be mighty rough, and most of the passengers were seasick before the night was over.

The landing at Fusan was most interesting, as the Koreans are entirely different in appearance, physique and clothes, from both the Chinese and Japanese. And they are dirty. As one Korean said to me, shamefacedly, "The Japanese wash their bodies, but never their clothes, the Koreans their clothes, but never their bodies, and the Chinese neither." The Koreans dress in long white gowns, and the great majority still wear the ridiculous, tiny horsehair hat, with a very wide brim, and a crown just large enough to cover their topknot. This, perched on the top of their head, with their vacuous expressions and white robes, reminds one of a lot of silly penguins strutting along.

This is not the place to discuss Japanese policies or administration in Korea. Suffice it to say that I enjoyed my stay in Seoul immensely, even though snow fell the first night of my visit. The Nandaimon Gate is one of the most beautiful, if not the most beautiful gateway which I have ever seen in East Asia, and the Old Palace, where the queen was murdered in 1895, the White Buddha outside the city, Independence Gate, Great Bell Street and the native quarters, both by day and by night are constant sources of interest.

Of stamps I saw none, save a few miserable specimens offered at outrageous prices at the hotel shop. No one seems to have any for sale, and my dreams of adding to my collection of Korea here in its capital was not realised. So I comforted myself with the purchase of a really fine old Korean brass-decorated chest, old brass candle sticks, and some Korean curiosities,—wooden shoes, pipes and the like.

From Seoul I set out one brilliant snowy morning for Mukden,—the Feng Tien of the Chinese. The road was through dreary country, with but few large towns, except Ping Yang. At about nine P. M. we came to historic ground, the Ya Lu River, where the decisive battle of the Sino-Japanese War was fought. I had the whole story graphically told me by old residents. There is at present a fine bridge across the river, and at Antung, on the farther side, we were technically out of Japanese territory, and on Chinese soil. However, it took more than the cursory customs examination, and the presence of a few Chinese officials to persuade me, and it was not until we passed through the Great Wall at Shan Hai Kuan, that I felt we had left Japanese authority and influence behind. In fact, Japanese money is current in Southern Manchuria, the shopkeepers and business men speak Japanese, and even the chauffeurs and hotel people are largely Japanese.

At six o'clock of a black December morning we arrived at Mukden, famous for the battle between Japanese and Russian troops, where was settled, for a time at least, the question of whose influence should prevail in Manchuria and Liaotung. The weather was cold, the ground thick with snow-covered ice, the temperature at 6° below zero. I bundled into an automobile and went out to the North Tombs, where are buried the first of the Manchu Emperors of China. It was a dreary ride, through interminable cemeteries full of nameless mounds. It was all most interesting, and I only regret that it is impossible to reproduce for you here some of the photographs which I took of the tombs, soldiers, people, etc. It was in Mukden that I first came in contact with the Chinese soldier, a man without training or proper uniform, badly fed, sometimes paid, and a constant drain on the nation and a menace to its peace and tranquility. His chief function everywhere seems to be to beg for money and to extort it whenever he can. Before visiting the old palace in the inner city of Mukden, I applied to the American Consul for a pass, and had the opportunity of seeing his unique offices, situated in a most picturesque old Chinese pagoda of many courts and temples. I was told to give about 20 cents as a gratuity. But no, Mr. Ragamuffin soldier insisted on a dollar at the point of a fixed bayonet. I enjoyed the palace very much, but when he greeted me on my exit with a further demand of a like amount, I shoved his gun aside, told him what I thought of him in the few words of Manchu which I know, and beat a hasty retreat.

Mukden is a very interesting, little-visited, old-walled city, with a life all its own, and inhabited by tall, blue-gowned, red-faced Manchus, the erstwhile conquerors of the Middle Kingdom. As in the rest of China, there seems to be no government at all, though here in the three northern provinces the notorious ex-bandit, Chang Tso Lin, locally called the "War Lord", is paramount with his troops. I won't venture to say here whence comes the money back of him.

Outside the old South Gate of Mukden, beside its crumbling walls, where beggars and cripples and loathsome dogs and cats all mingle and share the wintry sun, I discovered one of the rare happy hunting-grounds of the collector. No, don't be in a hurry to pack your trunks and sail, for I've already selected the best pieces of old Chinese glass and ornaments from them—sack of old cities, plunder of ancient conquest.

It was at Mukden that I bought the first of the Commemorative stamps of China, and the stock there was almost exhausted. Of course, no dealers were in evidence at all.

From Mukden I traveled south through the Liaotung Peninsular on the finest train which the Japanese run—equal to our best American equipment. After twelve hours we arrived at Dairen, the former Russian Dalny. In its plan and in its fine public buildings and banks, it is the most beautiful city on the Asiatic Coast—though it isn't very large. It gives one the impression of a "boom town" whose boom has long since disappeared. It has fine, well-paved avenues and long vistas, an "étoile" in the centre, where are located the public buildings and hotel, and magnificent wharves, where can be seen loaded bean oil, the great "cheeses" of bean-cake and tussore silk cocoons.

The most interesting industry of Dairen is the manufacture of soya-bean oil, which I saw from beginning to end. Though the temperature was 10° below zero, the Chinese work in the mills stark naked, because of the heat. I have often seen them run out, in that state of nature, in the streets and yards, in that weather. Yet it never seems to harm them. They work eleven hours at a stretch and are paid from 50-60 sen, equal to 25c to 30c gold a day, for their labor! Comment is unnecessary.

I journeyed back to Mukden, where I found a temperature of 20° below zero, and there entrained for North China. You may imagine the state of things on the Chinese Railways, which cover this territory, when I tell you that we journeyed for twenty-four hours in that awful climate, with no heat whatsoever, bad food, no water for washing and no covers at night, so that we had to sit up all night in our sweaters, mufflers and mittens, and sit close together to keep warm. The train was overrun with soldiers, and hundreds of them met us at every station, where also we found guards, as provided for in certain international conventions regarding the railways. I may say incidentally that at present China has one million eight hundred thousand soldiers under arms, most of them useless, and but few of them efficient, except as plunderers of the treasury—and bandits when pay is not forthcoming. But the journey was made most delightful by the presence of an American who had spent twenty-three years in Korea, and knows it and its history and customs intimately. What with stories and incidents of Korean and Japanese rule there, recounted by him

Postage Stamps Overprinted "Revenue," 1899-1900.

By an order of the Governor-in-Council dated 14th June, 1899, it was directed that certain fees therein mentioned should be payable, on and after 1st July, 1899, in adhesive stamps used for postal purposes. This order was subsequently amended by the following order of 19th July, 1899—

"No. 211. Colonial Secretary's Office, BELIZE, July 19, 1899.

His Excellency the Governor directs the publication of the following Order of the Governor-in-Council amending the order of the 14th day of June, 1899, as to the payment of certain fees by means of stamps.

By command,
F. J. NEWTON,
Colonial Secretary.

Order of the Governor-in-Council amending the order of the 14th day of June, 1899, as to the payment of certain fees by means of stamps:

I, David Wilson, Governor of the Colony of British Honduras, do by and with the advice of the Executive Council hereby give notice, and order and direct

1.—That from and after the date of the publication of this order section 2 of the Order of the Governor-in-Council, made on the 14th day of June, 1899, under the provisions of Chapter 84 of "The Consolidated Laws" of British Honduras, published in the Government Gazette of the 17th day of June, 1899, directing that certain fees in the said order mentioned should on and after the 1st day of July instant, be payable in stamps, and that the adhesive stamps in use for postal purposes should be used for the payment of such fees, shall cease to have any force or effect.

2.—That adhesive stamps for revenue purposes shall be issued by the Postmaster, and such stamps only shall be used for the payment of fees payable to the Registrar General and to the District Commissioners of the Colony in aid of the general revenue of the Colony. Such stamps shall until further order be the adhesive postage stamps presently in use for postal purposes overprinted in black with the word "Revenue."

Dated at Belize this 19th day of July, 1899

Governor."

The stamps made available for the dual purpose of Postage and Revenue, were the 5c, 25c and 50c overprinted locally, in black, REVENUE. In June of the following year the 10c was added.

The setting REVENUE was of 60 subjects, requiring two applications to complete the sheets of the 5c 10c and 25c (2 panes of 60 stamps each). The 50c, however, was in sheets of 60 being the 50 CENTS on 1s gray, overprinted by De La Rue, and issued in November, 1888.

Normally the overprint measures 12 mm., but on 17 stamps of the pane, it is in smaller letters, and measures but 11 mm. On the 5th stamp of the pane, the "U" is tall and narrow, and on the 43rd, a "B" for the initial letter makes the overprint read "BEVENUE". In the second printing of the 10c and 25c "BEVENUE" and the narrow "U" were corrected. The 10c is also known with the final "E" omitted, "REVENU".

The numbers overprinted of the 10c and 25c must have been very large, or else they were not in great demand, for the former lasted until October, 1901, and the 25c until 1907.

Queen Victoria Postage & Revenue, 1899.

Late in December, 1899, four high values, 50c, $1, $2 and $5, were added to the series, being printed from De La Rue, 1888 type, "Postage & Revenue" keyplate No. 3. The design is practically the same as for the lower values. except that the head of Queen Victoria is enclosed in an octagonal frame, and the tablets on either side are lettered "Postage—& Revenue" in small uncolored caps. The lower corners are filled with conventional scroll ornamentation.

The size of sheets, arrangement of plate numbers, etc., is the same as for the lower values.

The duty plate impression for the 50c has the numerals in colorless figures on a horizontal lined tablet, while for the dollar values, they are in color on a plain ground. The keyplate impression for all four values is in green.

Queen Victoria, Postage & Revenue, 1900-01.

Not until October, 1900, was the 5c "Postage" stamp overprinted "Revenue", superseded by one in the Postage & Revenue design. It was printed from plate 3, in gray black and ultramarine on blue paper.

On January 22nd, 1901, Queen Victoria died after a reign of 64 years, and shortly afterwards the stock of the 10c needed replenishing. As the new plate with design altered to embody the head of King Edward VII, was not yet in readiness, use was made of the Victorian keyplate 3, Postage & Revenue. This stamp printed in practically the same colors as before, was brought into issue in October, 1901.

For both values, the same duty plates were used as for the "Postage-Postage" series.

5c gray black and ultramarine on blue.	1900
10c dull mauve and green,	1901.

Gallant May Dollar Combination
Owing to the tremendous rush on my May Dollar Combination, I am all out of some of the stamps and try to obtain a few hundred sets, to satisfy my customers. I was prepared for 300-350 orders, but have received in two weeks more than 850 orders. I have sent out 368 complete orders and about 500 orders not complete, and every set marked short will be forwarded in a short time. As I am unable to obtain the 500 missing sets in the U. S., I have cabled to my European correspondents and I trust I will be able to furnish every missing stamp not later than in 4 weeks. I am asking every one of my esteemed customers having received only a part of my May Dollar Combination for a little patience, and thanking everybody for their kind patronage.
In the meantime I am willing to take any complete packet of the May Dollar Combination back and will pay for every complete packet, which I have sold for One Dollar, the amount of ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS. [39

AMERICA DISCOVERS PHILATELY.

By DOUGLAS B. ARMSTRONG,

(This tribute to American philately is a notable one. Mr. Armstrong is one of the keenest of English philatelists and his contact with business conditions is such as to make his opinion valuable. He frankly states that the United States is the great stamp market of today. His prophecy that "the great stamp collections of the future will be in the hands of our American cousins" is amply justified by recent auction results in Paris and especially the fact that Mr. Hinds was successful in outbidding King George for the famous 1c British Guiana.—W. O. W.)

ALTHOUGH in the past some really important collections have been formed in the United States, notably the Worthington, Paul, Ayer, Seybold and Crocker collections, Philately has never attained the same vogue that it enjoys on this side of the Atlantic. Stamp collectors of the schoolboy persuasion there have been in plenty, but few who took the hobby seriously. The general attitude of the American public towards things philatelic was one of amused tolerance. Signs are not wanting, however, of the extension to America of the great philatelic revival that has swept over Europe since the Great War. As usual, the press has been largely responsible for this state of affairs. The news interest of the record prices paid for rare stamps at auction has not escaped the ever-alert American newspaper man, with the result that the investment possibilities of the hobby have intrigued the imagination of thousands of United States citizens. Financial stringency has to some extent curtailed the full development of what is destined to be a veritable boom in stamp collecting in America, which, with improving business conditions, cannot be much longer delayed. Already the membership of American philatelic societies shows a remarkable and gratifying increase, for it is a curious fact that contrary to the average European philatelist who is inclined to hold aloof from his fellow enthusiasts, the fellowship spirit is so strong in American life, that one of the first acts of the philatelic novice is to enroll himself in a stamp club.

Of late there has been a steady flow of the classic rarities of Philately across the Atlantic where they are being absorbed in the several big collection in course of formation by Wall Street magnates and captains of industry.

Now that the rarest stamp in the world—the unique 1 cent British Guiana 1856—has been acquired for the record price of $32,000. by an American philatelist, it is perhaps safe to prophesy that in common with other art treasures, the great stamp collections of the future will be in the hands of our American cousins.

ONCE MORE—THE SHANGHAIS.

By MAXWELL KRAUSE.

One word in regard to Mr. Clinton L. Chalfant's communication in your issue of the 13th inst. Mr. Chalfant says, "If they (the Shanghais) were sold 'for philatelic purposes only', under face for say 50 cents a set, then it would place them on the plane of Seebecks."

Now as a matter of fact, these sets are sold by the philatelic agency at Washington "for philatelic purposes only" and they are sold for $2.82 per set whereas the actual face value is over $4.00. It certainly makes no difference whether they are sold at 50 cents per set or $2.82 per set so long as the sum asked is less than their face value. And the face value must be calculated in Shanghai currency and not in U. S. currency for the stamps are issued, presumably, for use in Shanghai, not in the United States. Personally I have no objection whatever to Colonial issues being placed on sale in the home country so long as they are available for actual postal use and are sold at face value. With Mr. Chalfant I agree that such an arrangement is a boom to the collector and likewise, allow me to say, a boom to the dealer. But even the much discussed French Colonial issues, 90% of which never see the Colonies, are never sold for less than face value.

It is useless to quibble over currencies. Face value must be figured on the rency of the Colony, not on that o Mother Country. For instance, Bri Guiana dollars and cents are figure a basis of 24 cents to the shilling whe the currency of British Hondura on the same basis as our own and, th fore, at present rate of exchange, ap 15% higher per dollar than Bri Guiana. When, during 1921, cu British Colonial stamps could be bo from the Crown Agents in London, difference in money value was stri adhered to, which is quite proper. In same manner, one rupee face valu East Africa and Uganda cost two lings, of Zanzibar one shilling, four one-half pence, of Ceylon one shil five pence, etc.

I believe, as does Mr. Chalfant, the Philatelic bureau at Washington decidedly commendable innovation. I nevertheless feel that it is injur philately and debasing philatelic is by selling stamps below actual face v as in the case of the Shanghais.

The comparison of this case with depreciation in certain Neurope is is not logical and I can say from perience that the dealer was "caught such instances just as the collector only more so. I have sold many a of Neurope for 25c or 35c that cost four or five times that price. It merely another instance of supply demand with the supply proving t greatly in the majority. The stamp suing countries of Europe were blame, for they announced a limited i and then printed them as long as could sell them, and at any price.

But I hate to see Uncle Sam get in the same class. Let the new Phila Bureau sell all legitimate issues at value and neither collector nor de will have anything but praise for it.

Cloth Bound PRICE $2.00 Post Free

THIS great book is now in the bindery and we are prepared to take orders accompanied by cash. The expense in producing it has been so great that we feared a $2 price would not be possible. The authors, B. W. H. Poole and Willard O. Wylie, publicly acknowledge their indebtedness to Messrs. C. A. Howes and Chas. S. Thompson for assistance rendered. W. W. Jewett of the Jewett Printing Co. has also taken great pains as a producing factor in this great achievement.

The book is handsomely bound in green cloth with appropriate lettering, and no student of stamps can do without it. It represents the high watermark in philatelic book publishing and especially from the standpoint of the general collector.

On these advance orders the Dictionary will be mailed direct from the bindery at Long Island City, N. Y., some three or four weeks ahead of a Portland or Beverly mailing.

THE SEVEN CENT VERMILION.

By J. W. SAMPSON.

CHAPTER VI.—Special Printings, Etc.

Early in 1875, just before the 7 cent stamp was discontinued, the Postoffice Department gave instructions for the printing of 10,000 sets of each of the postal issues from 1847 to date, including the various department stamps. The department stamps not being salable to the public, were ordered overprinted "Specimen," but the regular issues were produced without any such surcharge and with no common outstanding feature to distinguish them from the original emissions.

The special printings of the earlier issues, however, are as a rule easily identified, either by differences in perforation, in paper, in color of ink, or by absence of the usual grill. But when it comes to the 1873 issue, then current, real difficulties are encountered.

Why a special printing of the then current issue should have been ordered is hard to imagine, when it would have been so easy to take the stamps from the supply then in the possession of the Department. But the fact remains that the eleven values of 1870-73 set were ordered printed along with the rest, in quantities of 10,000 each as above stated.

These stamps were manufactured by the Continental Bank Note Company, from the Continental plates. They were printed on very white, crisp, hard paper. The 7 cent, listed in the standard catalogue as No. 171 and described as "reddish vermilion" in color, is very hard to distinguish from stamps on similar paper, distributed through the regular channels. There is no pronounced difference in the shade, and the collector is cautioned against purchasing the 7 cent 1875, Special Printing, except upon the guarantee of a reliable dealer.

The stamps were issued without gum, and while available for postage were not intended for service but for "souvenirs", in connection with the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876, which commemorated the one-hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The stamps were usually cut apart carelessly with shears, and authentic copies seen by the writer have all had perforations more or less clipped, so that anything approximating a perfect example is rare.

Mr. John N. Luff, in investigating the 1875 Special Printing many years ago, discovered that there had been a further special printing in 1880, this, however, covering only the 1870-79 issues. This second special printing was the work of the American Bank Note Company, and the stamps were produced on the soft, porus paper that characterized the 1879 issue. Only 500 copies each were supplied of this 1880 Special Printing, and these were ungummed as in the previous issue.

The 7 cent 1880, listed in the standard catalogue as No. 196, was printed from the Continental plate and in the same color as the 1873 issue. Some have claimed that they could detect a difference in the shade, but these claims are not to be taken too seriously. No. 196 stands out prominently, however, and can be identified by even a blind man. by the "feel" of the paper, for it will be remembered that the 7 cent stamp, with the 12 cent and 24 cent, were discontinued in 1875, and never regularly issued on the soft paper used by the American Bank Note Company.

None of the stamps produced by the two Special printings were ever sold through post offices, but were purchasable from the Third Assistant Postmaster General, in whose office a detailed account was kept of all sales, even the name of the buyer being recorded. The stamps were sold in sets, but a single denomination could also be bought in quantities of $2.00 worth and upward. The records show that the first sale of the Special Printings was made February 23rd, 1875, and the last sale on July 15th, 1884. On July 16th, 1884, all remainders were destroyed.

Of the 7 cent, the records indicate as follows:—

Received in 1875,	10,000
Received in 1880,	500
Total Received,	10,500
Destroyed in 1884,	10,027
Sold,	473

Of the 473 copies of the 7 cent Special Printings sold, there is nothing to show what proportions were on hard and soft paper, but the "visible market supply" today indicates that the 1880 printing is at least five times as scarce as the hard paper printing, and Mr. Luff in his book says that "only five complete sets and a few odd copies, on porous paper, are known to exist."

The recorded sales of the other values of the 1870-79 set are evidence of the great popularity of the 7 cent vermilion among collectors and souvenir seekers. The figures are as follows:

1c		388	10c	180
2c	brown,	416	12c	282
2c	vermilion,	917	15c	169

From this it appears that with the exception of the 2 cent vermilion, the 7 cent stamp was in greater demand than any other value. Perhaps this was because it was lacking from the sets of many collectors who had been unable to secure it at their local postoffices while it was still current. This theory has substantial backing in the statements of those who were boys or young men in the 70's, and who remember having persistently tried and repeatedly failed to buy a "red seven" in the small towns where they lived. As a low value stamp it was well within their means, and they wanted it, but could not get it.

In this connection it is of interest to note that the popularity of the 7 cent stamp, while still in use, extended even to the Department issues. Of the stamps overprinted "Specimen" and sold to collectors during the period when the 1875 Special Printing was being distributed, the 7 cent War outsold the higher values of the series four to one, the 7 cent Navy also outsold the higher denominations of that set four to one, about twice as many of the 7 cent State were distributed as of the higher values of that Department, and of the Treasury Department stamps three times as many 7's were passed out as of any denomination above it in monetary value.

The 7 cent stamps of these four Departments are first cousins to the 7 cent vermilion, having been issued for use on mail to the same foreign countries, and the omission of this value from the Agriculture, Executive, Interior, Justice and Post Office sets was, of course, due to the fact that these Departments had no reason to correspond with the governments of Germany, Austria or Denmark.

EDITORIAL.

Dine—In Stamp Collecting for May 13th, 1922, we read that "the inaugural banquet for next year's London International Stamp Exhibition" was held on May 6th or "Penny black" day. It may be said that the corner-stone of this monumental enterprise has been laid and interest in the big international exhibition will increase as the date of the event becomes nearer, until the triumphal culmination. At this banquet, a splendid account of themselves was given by Mr. Melville, the chairman, and the speakers. Judging from the reports of philatelic banquets in the "tight little isle" the occasions are spirited affairs and a right good wit seasons the addresses. We read that Mr Melville "paid a high tribute to American philatelists, who had set a fine example to their fellow hobbyists in this country in their efforts to guarantee the success of next year's Exhibition." Yes, Americans are interested in the forthcoming exhibition and a New York dealer told us that he wished that there would be enough philatelists to go together to make a jolly cabin full.

Dean—We take much pleasure in welcoming Mr. Charles J. Phillips, the managing director of the stamp firm of Stanley Gibbons, London, whose success may be attributed to a loyal regard for stamps as objects of collection. Mr. Phillips is a stamp student of great ability and philately is the better both in a material and in a scientific sense by reason of his affiliation with it, through all these years. On several occasions he has come to our shores but his present trip will be more embracive than the one preceding. This is well, as all collectors here would do him honor.

Done—At the Exhibition Dinner in London that we have just been speaking of, a telegram was received from Buckingham Palace in which the chairman of the banquet was "assured of His Majesty's unabated interest in everything that concerns philately." Naturally this friendly message was greeted with great applause. We read in a contemporary, the Australian Philatelic Record, that on March 31st, 1922, H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, opened an exhibition at Singapore for which the current stamps of the Straits, Brunei, Borneo, Kelantan, Kedah and Trengganu have been overprinted for use at the Exhibition. We do not believe that collectors will receive this announcement with great applause. The day is coming, perhaps, when we shall say that the more we see of some of the undefiled stamps of accepted countries, the more we think of the New European issues.

Dirt—We are of the opinion that some collectors are too severe in their analysis of the European stamps. The holier-than-thou idea of "spurning them as you would the dirt under your feet" is all right for melodramatic effect, but it does not square with fact. A reader asks if there is any real postal necessity for "one in a hundred" of the issues of the European establishment. Does our correspondent believe that the people of countries such as Russia, Germany, Austria, etc., countries that have been divided into numerous national entities have become palsied and bereft of the intelligence necessary to use the post, one of the first adjuncts of a nation, new or old. Does he know that literally millions of these new stamps have come to America on letters from the countries affected by the new deal? For instance, the mail received from Russia, Poland, etc., by some of the banks in this country having close relations in those countries yields thousands of the used stamps in a short time. Letter-carriers of large cities with routes in sections peopled by Europeans from the places under notice can tell of an endless stream of mail addressed here from the old country. It may be safely said that even the seemingly insignificant country uses postally a great many more stamps in the regular course of business than is generally believed. Great is the post and great is its royal seal, the postage stamp.

Dire—Chicago collectors had occasion the other morning to become pop-eyed with excitement, as the cartoonist would picture it, upon encountering the following story in the Chicago Tribune: "Model Husband Vamped by a Bunch of Stamps. Characterizing him as 'a model husband,' wooed from his home by a collection of stamps, Mrs. Etta M. Wilson yesterday filed suit for separate maintenance in the Superior court against William Wirt Wilson, head of the Wilson Stamp Company, 8 South Dearborn street. According to the bill filed by Attorney William F. Ader, Wilson 'has become so enamored of the stamps that he remains in his office until late hours admiring them'." In view of the statement that Mr. Wilson is cited as a paragon of virtue in the bill and advertised as a model husband, it is on stamps alone that the onus rests for the asundering. To hear stamps traduced always pains us and we seek to pick flaws in the web of circumstance that seems to enmesh our cherished stamps. Desiring first-hand information, we proceeded to Mr. Wilson's office only to run into a tumultuous throng of newspaper reporters and staff photographers. "Now, Mr. Wilson, a little movie stuff while I steal on you taking orders for stamps by radio," a famous photographer of celebrities was saying. (Mr. Wilson is a pioneer radio fan and has his station in his office. A dear little cub reporter was asking Mr. Wilson if it were true that he remained late at night in his office admiring his stamps. "Yes," said Mr. Wilson, "you see, so many of the LaSalle street bankers and brokers who are investing so heavily in stamps are engaged during the day and consequently must buy at night. As stamps are becoming the supreme security in the world, there is a rush to convert all the stocks and bonds into stamps and so I must be at the service of the financiers after regular hours." As we were going to press soon, we tore ourselves away from the busy scene, a sadder but no wiser man.

Duet—We have received word that St. Louis is kicking up her heels and prancing around. The St. Louis Branch of the American Philatelic Society has nominated an opposition ticket for the board of vice-presidents, consisting of Ralph H. Eilers, Chas. S. Smack and Louis F. Yeckel. The other nominations are the same as those of the Cincinnati ticket. We are pleased to see our old friends, Eilers, Smack and eke, Yeckel, throw their castors in the ring.

Drop—A stamp romance has been blighted according to a San Francisco newspaper. "May Stamp, titian-haired school teacher" of Lodi, California, has done something that caused the schoolboard to fire her. Some enterprising dealer should give her a job in his shop.

THE HOME OF THE POSTAGE STAMP Joseph V. K. Wells Manager BURNT HILLS, N. Y.

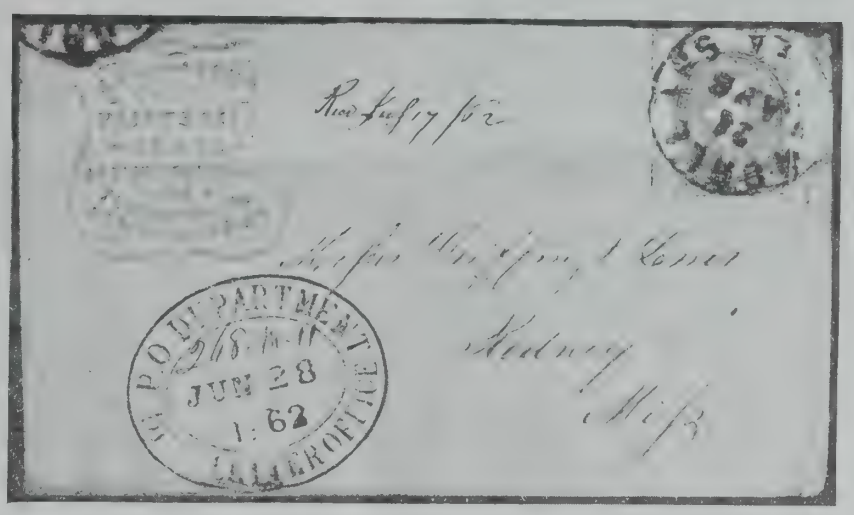
"CAPTURED BY FARRAGUT'S FLEET."

By EDWARD S. KNAPP.



Addressed to Rodney, Miss., the cover here illustrated bears a Five Cents Green, Confederate States (Scott's No. 200), cancelled "New Orleans, La. 24 APR". Envelope is also cancelled "P. O. DEPARTMENT—DEAD LETTER OFFICE—JUN 28 1862", and manuscript notation on face reads "Recd Jul 17 '62".

I think we may describe what happened to this cover as follows:

It was mailed in New Orleans on April 24, 1862, and on that day it is a matter of history that the United States fleet, commanded by Admiral Farragut, sailed up the Mississippi, silenced Forts Philip and Jackson below New Orleans, and the city was doomed, altho it did not formally surrender until three days later (Apr. 27), when the Stars and Stripes were raised on the Mint Building.

The Mail Boat for Rodney, carrying this letter, was apparently captured by one of Farragut's gunboats, and the mail seized and sent to Washington as Contraband. (The "DEAD LETTER OFFICE" stamp is, without question, "Washington, D. C.") From the manuscript notation "Recd Jul 17 '62", we learn that it was delivered to the addressee on that date, after Rodney had become United States property.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—Leslie's Illustrated Weekly contains an article by Charles Phelps Cushing entitled "Fortunes in Scraps of Paper". It is written in a very attractive manner and for some of its features it has illustrations of King George, Col. E. H. R. Green and the King of Spain.

—We are indebted to Cecil J. Dale for a cover showing a provisional New Zealand. It consists of the ½d Victory overprinted in the upper corners "2d", while across the middle of the stamp in bold block capital letters are the words TWO PENCE. Mr. Dale informs us that the Victory stamps are now out of issue.

—Maxwell Krause has an important announcement elsewhere in this issue. He has taken over the J. E. Guest British Colonial New Issue Service. The time has certainly arrived when the United States should have a new issue service that can compete with those of foreign countries and we wish our Lebanon dealer the largest measure of success possible. Mr. Krause informs us that he has received word of 2c postage rate between the United States and Cayman Islands, Spain and Argentine Republic.

—R. Edw. Sharp, Atlanta, Ga., wishes us to mention that he is delayed in giving attention to correspondence. Due to a serious illness he is resting from his labors.

—E. W. Goldthorpe, Boys' Work secretary of the Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Y. M. C. A., sends us a clipping from the local Daily Argus of May 18, giving an extended account of the annual exhibit and contest of the Y. M. C. A. stamp club. Charles H. Stecker, a well-known local philatelist, gave an interesting talk on the educational value of stamp collecting.

—Are the booklets issued by our firm popular? One would judge so when H. W. Doscher & Co., of San Francisco, order no fewer than 150 copies at one time. Persons desiring our booklets may obtain them from the New England Stamp Co. in Boston, the Economist Stamp Co. in New York, the United Stamp Co. in Chicago, Eugene Klein in Philadelphia, the Stamp Shoppe in Washington, Maitland Milliken in Denver and Doscher & Co. and E. P. Seebohm in San Francisco.

—The special correspondent of the London Philatelist in reporting the Ferrari sale quotes an American dealer on the subject of prices realized at the sale: "To a collector they are worth it but to a dealer they are not unless he knows he can place them at once and not have to take them into stock." Our contemporary calls the Ferrari sale at auction a "rich man's sale."

—"All for a Postage Stamp," is not the name of a philatelic thriller or a good old mortgaged home and mother melodrama, but is the head of an editorial in the truly great Eagle of Brooklyn. Here is another philatelic pinion in the sweeping tale of the Eagle. This time, the service that is performed by a single stamp is lauded.

COMPETITION

A customer whose collection numbers over 25,000 varieties and contains many stamps worth $25 to several hundred dollars each, and who has received stamps on approval from many other dealers, tells me the selections he receives from the Westfield Philatelic Peach Orchard contain the finest specimens that come to him.

I don't expect to undersell everybody else—or anybody else—that isn't what I'm in business for. I'm merely supplying choice singles, pairs, strips, blocks and covers to those who appreciate fine copies of desirable stamps and are willing to pay what high-grade service is worth.

Few dealers can compete with me in stamps worth from one dollar each upward. If you aren't sure of this, try my service.

Yes, I Exchange

A valued client recently wrote that he had a great many fine United States duplicates that he did not require and that while he never cared to sell stamps, he would be pleased to consider an exchange. I had the stamps that he required and his duplicates were good stock. Result—we were both able to help the other.

If you have anything fine in United States and do not care to turn them into cash, I will be pleased to offer fine exchange. Put a cash value on your holdings and then tell me what you want in trade. For particularly fine things I can offer several times catalogue in exchange, especially if you desire foreign.

Excellent prices paid for fine mint early blocks of United States. Would like to buy a collection or two ranging between $1000-$25,000. Also remember that if you have only a single item worth five or ten dollars, I want that, too.

Wanted—Anything Fine in United States—Offer either Cash or Exchange.

UNITED STATES.—Mr. O. T. Gylleck having noticed in our recent Chronicle information regarding the finding of the current 1c green, in pairs imperforated between, informs me of a find that he made some time ago of a variety somewhat similar. It seems that the post office clerk in his city had found a pane of one hundred of the 3c engraved, die II, imperforated horizontally. Having no knowledge of their philatelic value he began to tear them in strips along the vertical perforations and as he sold them tore them off one by one not even taking the trouble to cut them apart. By the time Mr. Gylleck arrived there were twenty only remaining, namely, a vertical block of ten and two vertical strips of five. In the case of the block, even two of these stamps were damaged by being torn apart. A great many good things are lost to philately and possibly many varieties that we never hear of pass through the hands of the post office clerk who does not appreciate that any deviation from the normal adds a value to the stamp.

Speaking of these part-perforates it may be of interest to note that a pane of the 1c imperf. horizontally was found at Columbus, a similar pane of the two cent was distributed from New York while two panes of the 2c imperforated vertically were found in Norfolk. A half of pane of the 3c, die I, imperf. horizontally was found in Denver while a part of a pane of the 3c, die II, was found in Cleveland in addition to the twenty mentioned above. It is barely possible that some of our readers may have found other varieties. If this is the case we would greatly appreciate their kindness if they will follow Mr. Gylleck's good example and advise us.

Mr. H. F. Colman spent a few days over the week end in Philadelphia and while his trip was strictly one of pleasure, he showed me two very unusual pieces well worthy of mention, namely, complete sheets of ten with margins all around of the $10 and $20 Department of State. These were in wonderful mint condition and look as if they were fresh from the post office. Blocks of the $2 are around and I know of one block of the $5 that exists but I have never heard of the $2 and $5 in sheets. The Gibson collection contained a sheet of the $10.

Mr. A. F. Gamber has sent me three new provisional 2c on 3c envelopes that have not been listed heretofore. These were in a collection that he recently purchased and were no doubt purchased at the several post offices sometime back.

In some of the Shanghai overprinted stamps that I recently purchased from the Philatelic Stamp Agency, I note that the 30c is in a slightly different shade from those which they first sent out. The stamp does not seem to have as much red and is more yellowish. Simply a shade variety of interest to the specialist and not one that is at all worthy of catalogue rank.

ABYSSINIA.—A. E. Wellington shows us a letter from a party in Jerusalem and we quote from it the following:—

"Herewith is an envelope which I recently received from Adis Abeba. You will note that it carries four stamps with original value $4 surcharged "2 guerches" each. A guerch at normal rate of exchange is worth about 2¾c U. S. The picture on the stamps herewith is that of Lij Yasu, grandson and heir of the great Emperor Menelik. During the late war he showed tendencies of turning to Islam and the leading families of Abyssinia (who are all somewhat fanatical Monophysite Christians) rose and deposed him. He is now a prisoner near Adis Abeba and his aunt, the Empress Zeioditou, rules.

AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH.—In a letter dated Sydney, March 25th, Messrs. J. H. Smyth, Ltd., state that the ½d, 1½d and 4d values in new colors are not yet available.

We should like to know the actual date of issue of the 2d red, the Australian Stamp Journal gives it as March 6th and the Australian Philatelist as March 7th—in both instances in Sydney. As already mentioned in these notes, it was issued to some of the country towns on February 17th, and the Australian Philatelist says that the earliest copies are dated the 18th of that month, the date for Adelaide being given as February 21st, for Melbourne the 23rd, and for Hobart the 24th.

As regards the recent and impending changes in the colours of the Commonwealth adhesives, the Australian Stamp Journal remarks on the divergence of views with regard to the blue stamp, some 3d blues now appearing in various British Colonies, whereas in the case of the Commonwealth it is the 4d value which has been changed to that colour, no mention whatever being made of the 3d.—Stamp Collecting.

BARBADOS. — The Economist Stamp Co. send us a copy of the 1d Victory stamp on script watermarked paper.

BARBUDA.—A new name has been created for the collector of British Colonial stamps. The following values of Leeward Islands postage and revenue stamps have been overprinted with the word BARBUDA (an island in the Leeward group) in black on the ½d, 1d, 2d, 2½d, 3d, 6d, 2s, 3s and 5s and in red on the 1s and 4s.

Script CA white paper has been used for the ½d, 1d, 2d, 2½d, 6d, 3s and 4s values, new yellow paper, old watermark for the 3d and 5s, new green paper, old watermark for the 1s, and new Script CA blue paper for the 2s denomination.—Stamp Collecting.

DICTIONARY SUPPLEMENT.

It is our desire to publish in due season a supplement to the Dictionary and it is no doubt probable that by Jan. 1, 1923, there will be sufficient new material to make such a supplement desirable. Without doubt the eyes of keen philatelists will discover many old items that should have been covered. For instance, new history has been made on the Boscawen local, and the definition given in the Dictionary may well be revised. Again, it would have been a good plan to have inserted the meaning of "A29" and similar cancellations on British stamps used abroad. A29 was used in Bath, Jamaica, and a comprehensive dictionary might well include such items.

We frankly confess that the Dictionary as it appears is only the forerunner of a great book to be published in future years. We desire the co-operation of our readers in connection with the proposed supplement, and offer three cash prizes of $15, $10 and $5 respectively for the best lists of additions turned in by Jan. 1, 1923. We require, however, that there shall be at least ten lists to award the first prize, twenty to award the second and thirty to award the third.

As you are coming in contact with philatelic terms not covered in the Dictionary note them where they belong alphabetically. This will be an indication that they should be covered in the supplement to be issued later.

We shall give ample credit for such assistance as may be rendered us in perfecting the book, in which we take a great deal of pride.

THE MANAGING EDITOR.

THE U. S. 1890 5c VARIETY.

By ROY S. BARKER.

Your item on the 1890 variety 5c, Apr. 22, did not particularly attract my attention but when I read Mr. Wendell's account of his duplicates, May 13, I got out my duplicates and was surprised to find how closely the "variety" percentage followed through, for in 91 copies, used, I found I had 11 with the coat lines extending through the white oval frame. This is 12%, bearing out Mr. Wendell's finding.

I had three distinct shades of this stamp but all of the variety were in the yellow brown, Scott's 223a and the finest example was a strip of three. Pairs of the dark brown or chocolate did not show this variety at all. I remember Apr. 22, 1915, Cabeen described Scott's Colombian Republic No. 364 (now No. 328) with four sub-varieties and while I had fewer copies to examine, yet my percentage was almost exactly the same as Cabeen's. These variety hunts are very entertaining.

EARLIEST KNOWN POSTAL SYSTEM.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 13.—The earliest known postal system was that of Cyrus the Elder, king of Persia, in 599 B. C., according to the post office manual prepared here for use as a textbook in the schools of the United States. The manual was compiled by Postmaster E. A. Purdy of Minneapolis and a group of specialists, in the post office, with the encouragement of Postmaster-General Will Hays and his successor, Dr. Hubert Work, in the belief that the diffusion of information about the post office would save the government millions of dollars annually. Besides explaining the functions of the post office and most efficient ways of using it, the manual outlines the history of postal service.

King Cyrus, according to the manual, maintained mounted couriers to dispatch messages from post to post. The book then relates that similar methods prevailed among the Romans during the time of Augustus, B. C. 31, and later in France under Charlemange, in 807 A. D. The first actual letter-post for commercial purposes, however, it says, appears to have originated in the towns early in the 12th century, and a century later the University of Paris established an efficient postal system. China also maintained a post system at an early date, about 1280.

Inception of the American post office came with its earliest settlement, the book narrates. It passed from the coffee house letter depository to actual carrier, when legislation was passed in Massachusetts in 1639, and Virginia in 1657. Under the later legislation, a house would be designated by colonial law as the appointed place "for all letters which are brought beyond the seas or are to be sent thither," the owner of which would receive a penny for every letter, but who must "answer all miscarriages through his own neglect." The colonial law of Virginia provided that every planter must keep a messenger to convey dispatches as they arrived, to the next plantation, "on pain for forfeiting a hogshead of tobacco for default."

New Issues

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

American Stamp Collectors generally will be interested to learn that Maxwell Krause has acquired the ownership of the J. E. Guest British Colonial New Issue Service. It will be conducted in the future along the same efficient lines employed by Mr. Guest.

It will continue to supply American collectors with the new issues of other countries. These can be subscribed for separately, in the following classes: South & Central America; Portuguese Colonials; French Colonials; the rest of the world not included in the other four classes.

The advantages of this new issue service are apparent. You receive everything as issued at a very small advance over face value. Stamps are always worth face value and most of them soon become worth much more. When other collectors, who buy hit or miss, clamor for a stamp which recently became obsolete, you have it safely in your album.

Mr. Guest has transferred all his old accounts to me and they will be taken care of as in the past. There is room for an additional hundred subscribers. Particulars will be sent free, on request.

Mr. Collector, you can make no better investment than new issues at a small percentage over face value. At the present time many changes are being made in the British Colonial issues, a number of which have a very short life. All 2½d blue script watermark stamps issued are now obsolete and selling at from three to ten times face value. This is but one example.

Subscribers to foreign new issue services will readily see the advantage of patronizing an American service. Correspondence is prompter and remittances are made in American money instead of a Foreign currency which requires the purchase of Foreign cheques or money-orders.

A circular giving full particulars of this service will be mailed you on request. Send for it at once together with application blank. Become a subscriber before the next distribution. It will pay you well.

Maxwell Krause, Lebanon, Pa.

Gradually a postal service was established along the coast between the several colonies and in 1672 there was a monthly post from New York to Boston. In 1692, a private enterprise was granted to get up posts in North America to Thomas Neal and the postal affairs of the colonies were thus conducted until 1710, when the postal service of the British Empire was consolidated into one organization, with New York its chief American office.

An early act of the Continental Congress established post offices and routes from Falmouth, Me., to Savannah, Ga., the manual continues, and in 1737, Franklin was appointed postmaster at Philadelphia and the first acting postmaster-general in this country. In 1753, he was appointed deputy postmaster-general for the colonies, which office he held until 1774, when he was dismissed because of his active sympathy with the colonists in their quarrel with the mother country. For a while following, everything was in confusion, but in July, 1775, the Continental Congress appointed Franklin the first American postmaster-general, to manage the postal service throughout the colonies. Then postage stamps were unknown and postage was paid in cash.

Continuing, the textbook tells of the changes brought about when in 1834, letters were carried by steam railway. Four years later, the railroads were declared by law as post routes and in 1840, the traveling railway post office came into being. In 1847, use of stamps was authorized by the government and in 1855 the prepayment of postage made compulsory.—Clipping.

PAYMENT OF RETURN POSTAGE.

It may seem to be a trifle, but in the course of a day's mail it means much to those who are engaged in a mail-order business. We speak not only for ourselves, but on general principles, believing that unintentionally many correspondents are neglecting what should be an ordinary courtesy. When writing, seeking information, which calls for a reply by mail, it is only right to expect that a stamped and addressed envelope should be enclosed. We do this in our own correspondence and feel that it is in accord with the ethics of business.

METERED PERMITS.

(We think it best to publish this excerpt from a letter just at hand from Lawrence S. Holt, Jr., Burlington, N. C. Reference is made to a list accompanying the letter and this list we have sent to A. H. Pike, Buffalo, N. Y., who is engaged in consolidating a number of similar lists sent this office with one he is preparing. Very shortly our readers will profit by Mr. Pike's labors in producing an up-to-date list of these interesting impressions.—W. O. W.)

I am convinced that very few if any of us realize the possibilities of the recently inaugurated metered mail system, which six months ago was practically unknown to any one outside of the post office officials, and the manufacturers of the machine, and which is now spreading like wild fire all over the country. It has been evident for a number of years that the marvelous expansion of business requiring incredible numbers of letters, has vastly outgrown the original scope of the post office department at the time postage stamps were first used and when the mails consisted largely of personal correspondence about evenly divided with business letters, when advertising was practically unheard of and circulars, catalogues and the like were in the first stages of development.

Late years, there have been many attempts to simplify and expedite the handling of mail in large offices. We have seen the pre-cancelled stamps, the automatic stamping machine, envelope sealers and the like, but these have all been more or less makeshifts and while they have been largely used, they all have certain disadvantages which are apparent. It remains for the postage meter to revolutionize the mailing problems of big business. The device which offers to large users of postage, immunity from loss of stamps by fire, theft, carelessness, or damage, that keeps an accurate register of every stamp used or rather of every piece of mail dispatched, that insures a considerable saving of time in transit of mails owing to the fact that metered mail does not have to go through the regular channel of being handled in the central post office, and which makes it impossible for any one to send a piece of mail with this machine without being able to trace the mail back to the office from which it was sent, that requires no vault for the storage of stamps as well as other advantages, is certain to be eagerly received and the avidity with which it is now being adopted, testifies eloquently to the need which there has been for such a device.

In addition to the advantages to the user enumerated above, it is probable that the government will benefit to even a greater extent than the public. On this side of the question, it can be seen that it does away with engraving of plates, the printing, perforation, inspection, packing, gumming and transporting of stamps with all the attending risks of loss, damage, theft, etc., greatly simplifies the problems of the local post office where instead of selling stamps with likelihood of mistakes in counting, etc., the postmaster simply sets the meter and receives payment for it, as well as the saving of time and labor which would otherwise be used in sorting and canceling the mails in the local post office. When all these items are considered it will be realized that every postage meter which is installed not only benefits its user but is contributing directly to lessening the deficit of the post office department.

I feel that stamp collectors should welcome this invention as there is no possibility of it making the postage stamp obsolete on account of its being practicable only for large users of postage, such as banks, trust companies, department stores, telephone, light, water, public utilities companies, mail order houses, and very large firms which have thousands of letters to mail every day Small firms will, of course, continue to stamp their few dozen letters per day in the same old way, but as soon as its advantages become more thoroughly known, we confidently expect that any concern with a heavy outgoing mail which does not install a postage meter will be regarded as out of date. Since the users of the meters are the largest buyers of postage, one concern frequently using as much postage as an average city of 25,000 inhabitants, it is likely that the number of postage stamps printed and used by the post office department will be greatly decreased within the next few years. To what extent, will depend, of course, upon the rapidity of the adoption of these meters, the growth of population, etc., but it is very certain to cause a marked decline in the number of postage stamps issued. What effect this will have upon the revenues of the department is difficult to predict but reduced to dollars and cents, the saving will be many thousands of dollars and it may be possible to change the deficit of the post office department to a profit. If this should occur, a reduction in postage rates would be next in order and I do not think this is speaking extravagantly to make the assertion that the postage meter is the forerunner of 1c postage which has been agitated periodically.

The postage meter also gives an interest to philatelists by providing them with something else to collect besides stamps. Considerable interest has already been shown on this subject and it is likely that the collection of these permits will equal and probably surpass the collecting of pre-cancels.

I have prepared a partial list of these permit numbers with the names and addresses of those to whom issued, combining those which have come under my own observation with the list which appeared in your issue of April 29th, by Mr. Willis M. Pott. This list is divided according to the denominations, and as to the type, namely, box and oval. It appears that changes are rapidly being made from the box type to the oval type and that it is only a question of a short time when the box type will be entirely obsolete. In this list there are several which have changed from the box to oval type, namely, The Fenton Label Company, The Ronald Press Company, The New York Times, and the National City Company. It appears that only one permit is issued to one concern, and whatever denomination of postage is used by this concern, the permit number is the same throughout. We also have instances of one permit being used for several firms which are closely allied to ownership or management. For example, the National City Bank and the National City Company, as well as Note Holders Protective Committee. Also Conde Nast, the Publisher, uses the same permit with Vogue, The Guaranty Trust Co with the Guaranty Company, etc.

I have also prepared a list of t mit numbers in various cities a firms to which they have been Both of these lists are necessarily plete, and I do not doubt but tha of your readers are prepared to the gaps and furnish additional numbers and names as these m become more widely introduced. lieve it would increase interest branch of philately if you would from time to time additional lists mit numbers and firms.

"IRA."

By EDWIN B. HILL, Ysleta, Texas.

To R. E. S.

The first time I saw Ira he was sitting on a sandy knoll, his magnificent big touring car parked beside the road. There was a look of happiness and content and peace on his face. I reined in my old cow pony, and responded to his greeting.

"Sure is the prettiest bit of desert I've seen since I came west," declared Ira, after we had told each other "what we might be called." This greeting is a relic of the old days. Then, one did not ask another's name. That might be embarrassing. The subterfuge covered a dictionary of things that were not mentioned. If a man was square and vouched for by a tried friend, what did it matter? I once knew a man who had three names, and used them promiscuously. The query from an eastern tenderfoot as to which was which, evoked the terse reply, "none." I nearly fell over backward, when the query was put, and the boys all looked to me to explain. This I did, deferentially.

All of which is several other stories, all untold. So I will return to Ira.

Ira, it seems, was from the east. He was a most likable chap, and he was full of the yearning love of the desert which must be inborn. He was not garbed for out-of-doors wholly. "Fact is," declared Ira, "I ran away. Mellie has a reception on in town, and I was supposed to be in bed with a nervous headache. I was. But I am not."

Ira wrinkled his face in a funny smile which rippled and crinkled. I took several furtive looks at him then. Here was coming sorrow masked, and great love displayed, and an unmistakable something hidden which some day I knew would be disclosed.

Then Ira climbed into his car, and disappeared in a cloud of dust. I rode on into the village where Time and Chance hold me fast.

I did not meet Ira again while I was resident of the Territory. It became a state, and I drifted into the wilds of New Mexico and into Texas. At temporary anchorage, here, in this oldest of American settlements, I made many trips into the neighboring desert places. And then, one day, I saw Ira. My flivver looked sorry as his big machine dashed by. But Ira had a fleeting glimpse, and he was back at speed-limit rate. We all but hugged each other. Ira was wintering in El Paso instead of his beloved Phoenix. He scarce could bear sight of the old places, he said. The war—the war!

Then Ira talked of the deserts and the waste places,—of men and things. Next day I was to meet him at his hotel to dine with him and Mellie.

It was a quiet little party of three in a private dining-room where we assembled. Mellie was a sad-faced, quiet, tiny woman, with all the graciousness I loved so well. She was more than friendly. After we had dined, a call came for Ira, and he excused himself, saying he'd be gone for perhaps half an hour.

Mellie told me all. She wept between her periods, now and then, and my own eyes grew misty.

"Ira has never ceased to talk of you," she began. He saw you over in Arizona, and then he lost trace of you until yesterday. The war has broken Ira. You know, our boy—"

The lad's mother choked and fought for self-control. "He went to France, and he never came back," she said slowly. "You know how we gave all for the soldiers. Finally, Ira got to the point where we could do no more. It was give—give—give—until there was no more to give.

"Our library was sadly depleted, and there seemed to be nothing left. Then I thought of a collection of stamps which Ira had when a boy, and which he had treasured with Royal, our son, both of them working on it together. Ira demurred. But I persuaded him to part with it. I felt that something was being held back, for it was not like Ira to withhold anything. And then, a week after the collection was gone, the news came.

"Ira became desperately ill. He did not ask for anything but the old stamp collection. Of this he spoke continually in his delirium. It was weeks before he became his old self, but he was broken in spirit and the soul of him seemed seared. He was as one without hope. The strange thing to me is, Ira never speaks of Roy. He never hints at the loss of the collection. I would give all we possess to recover it, but the dealer to whom I sold it merely wrote me that it had been disposed of.

"You see Ira at his best, tonight,—quite his old self. He is always that way with those he knows and loves.—the friends who were real friends before the war,—the friends who love the things he loves. But I am fearful."

Then Mellie told me the name of the dealer to whom the collection had been sent. I knew him personally. He was a queer chap,—for who of us is not? And then I resolved to trace that collection, if it were possible to do so.

I sent a night letter, asking particulars. In the morning a reply assured me that the collection was probably intact It had been sent to a certain collector in El Paso,—strange to relate,—a recluse,—a chap who bought collections "as is" and found sentiment in retaining them unchanged. Further, he had a wonderful collection which he had made. My dealer-friend said he was wiring the man and following his wire with a letter, giving names and addresses, and declaring that he would betray no confidences. The present owner of the collection would remain unknown, probably. I heard no more.

Ira and Mellie were preparing to return to the East, the harbingers of spring having disclosed the livable qualities of their summer home. The day was set. They were to leave at noon. I had breakfasted with them.

The bell-hop rapped upon the door. Then he delivered into Ira's hands a bulky package, together with a note.

"Will an old stamp-lover accept this collection from an old stamp-lover whose title to ownership has passed beyond conjecture?". Ira put forth a restraining hand as Mellie and I started from the room. It was Ira's old collection,—wrecks and ruins and beautiful copies all side by side, showing the growth of his love and the culture of condition,—his and Royal's. We spent a happy three hours. Then the train call came, and Ira and Mellie and I hastened to the station. I saw the train recede,—the two figures waving farewell from the observation platform.

But of the donor,—who shall say? I have never sought to break the imposed veil which is between us. Some day, however, I know that he will disclose himself, and then, perhaps, another story may be written,—always with his permission.

FIRST CLASS MAIL PERMITS.

By A. H. PIKE.

There has been a wide interest in this form of postage since permission was first granted. Already five distinct types have been used. It is a combination of stamp, postmark and cancellation and this brings it under the head of philately as well as the "asides". Its rightful classification would probably be a "postal marking" which is a term used to include postmarks and cancellations used officially on all mail matter transported by the government.

As this comes directly in line with the research committee of the International Postmark Society, the chairman has been compiling material relating to these permits for the past year. In order to verify the particulars in connection with many of the permits it was necessary to write the manufacturers, users, government and postal officials, etc. From this correspondence it was found that quite a few stamp collectors were writing users begging for these permits, as well as manufacturers and officials seeking information. This research work is commendable, but it has caused a very unfavorable impression with business men for they have not the time or inclination to go to the necessary trouble of handling this correspondence, a great deal of which is duplicated.

It was with the assurance that we would do everything we could to discourage this promiscuous search for information, and with the promise that we would act as an information bureau on this subject, that we were able to obtain the information we were searching for. Many of these business men have written us that in the future they will turn this correspondence over to us, or throw it in the waste basket unanswered. If our readers will realize the circumstances we feel sure that they will gladly co-operate for it will work to their own good. It will enable us to be kept posted and we will gladly publish the material as often as it is practical and all can have an equal advantage. It is not that we wish to control this or any other information, but it is a department that can be handled to much better advantage through one source than promiscuous reporting. We have now a check list of every city in the U. S. where first class permits have been issued. In this list there is a record of practically every meter that has been in use, besides quite a number of permits where other than meter machines have been used. It is thought advisable to publish this check list by cities under each state and under each permit that has been issued. Another list, possibly by an alphabetical arrangement of names of permit users, and also by a numerical list of meters with the names of users.

Many users have several machines all with different meter numbers, and with various denominations of postage. Meters have been transferred from one user to another and these three lists will serve as a check one with another. It is almost necessary that the names of users be published in all three lists. With quite a few this will be a temptation to write these users but in doing so it may mean the discontinuance of the chronicle of new issues in further numbers of the WEEKLY.

We also wish to mention that the Postal Rules and Regulations forbids postmasters giving out names and addresses to the public. Names of permit users are considered in this class. The Assistant Postmaster General advises us that quite a number of postmasters have reported to him of requests for this information. He advises us that this practice must be stopped and implies that he will hold us responsible for this in the future.

In order to make this service as interesting and complete as possible we must have the assistance of readers, and we urge that they report direct to us any new issues that they come across. It might be better to wait until this check list is published, which will be within the next two or three weeks. It will save possible duplication of varieties already located. Address all mail on this subject to A. H. Pike, 80 Grant St., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE QUEEN VICTORIA CHALON HEAD.

By J. A. D. READE.

(In an article on the early stamps of Victoria and Queensland, a writer in a contemporary recently confessed that he had not succeeded in tracing the originals of those classic issues. The appended paper, the outcome of some notes read to the Canterbury Philatelic Society by Mr. J. A. D. Reade, is a delightful contribution to a fascinating subject, which, of course, includes the Perkins-Bacon stamps of Tasmania as well as those detailed in the article below.)

There can be few collectors of British Colonials who are not attracted by those early stamps bearing the portrait of Queen Victoria as it appears on the first issues of New Zealand, and which I shall call the Chalon head. Possibly, however, few have thought in how many different guises the design appears and how many different engravers and printers produced those stamps.

This head was taken from a full length portrait of the Queen painted by Alfred Edward Chalon, R.A., which was ordered by the Queen for her mother, the Duchess of Kent, as a souvenir of Her Majesty's first visit to the House of Lords. The occasion was the prorogation of Parliament on July 17th, 1837, and the Queen is portrayed in her robes of state. The first stamp to bear the Chalon head was the twelve pence of Canada. It was one of three designs printed by Messrs. Rawdon, Wright, Hatch & Edson, of New York, for the first stamps of Canada, which were issued in 1851.

It was not till 1853 that the first of these stamps printed by Messrs. Perkins, Bacon & Co., of London, appeared. This was the one penny of Nova Scotia. A small head was taken from the portrait and engraved by Mr. W. Humphreys. It showed a half bust of the Queen.

In 1855, Messrs. Rawdon, Wright, Hatch & Edson repeated their design of the 7½ pence value of Canada. In 1859, the same firm, renamed the American Bank Note Co., produced the 12½ cents Canada, and between 1860 and 1863 they printed three values bearing the Chalon head for New Brunswick, the values being 2, 5, and 10c.

A similar design was used by the British American Bank Note Co., of Montreal, for the 4½ pence of Prince Edward Island, issued in 1870, but the stamp is not as well engraved, and the Queen appears to have her head on one side. Meanwhile, Messrs. Perkins, Bacon & Co.'s engraver, Mr. W. Humphreys, had produced a more elaborate head with full shoulders showing the ermine of the robes. This was used for the stamps of New Zealand, issued in July, 1855.

In subsequent stamps the size of the head was increased, and consequently little more than the neck could be included. This design was used for the stamps of Bahamas in 1859 and 1860, Queensland in 1863, Natal in 1859, and Grenada in 1861. These were all engraved by Mr. W. Humphreys, with the exception of the Bahamas, for which the artist is said to have been Mr. Charles Henry Jeans.

In 1882, Mr. Henry Bourne, engraver for Messrs. Bradbury, Wilkinson & Co., used the Chalon head in engraving the high value stamps for Queensland.

Written for MEKEEL'S

ST. KITTS TERCENTENARY, 1923.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

In connection with the Tercentenary celebrations planned for next year, in commemoration of the landing of Sir Thomas Warner and his men at Old Road Bay, in 1623, and the subsequent colonisation of St. Kitts, it is proposed to issue a special series of stamps.

The suggestion has been made that with the money obtained from the sale of these stamps, certain lands to the north of Basseterre, be purchased, and converted into a park with Botanical gardens and recreation grounds, to remain as a permanent record of the Tercentenary celebrations. The St. Kitts-Nevis Daily Bulletin of April 22, 1922, thinks, "The idea is a very good one, and we feel certain that this issue will be immediately taken up by the philatelic world, and a fund created in a very short while. We wish the scheme the success it deserves, and hope no time will be lost in providing the stamps."

The project is somewhat similar to that connected with the special series of stamps issued by the Dominican Republic in 1899. It will be recalled, that the bones of Christopher Columbus were supposed to have been transferred to Havana in 1795, when the French became possessors of the whole of the island of Santo Domingo. In 1877, during the progress of some repairs to the Cathedral at Santo Domingo City, a vault was opened, containing a leaden casket, inscribed on the outside with Columbus' initials, the inside of the lid bore his name, and a small silver plate found with the bones, contained his name and titles. Some twenty years later, (1898) the bones were taken from the vault under the altar, placed in an urn, and reinterred under a mausoleum of marble and bronze, erected at the end of the nave, just inside the plaza entrance of the Cathedral. It is supposed that the remains transferred to Cuba were those of Columbus' son, Diego.

It was for the purpose of defraying the expenses incident to the erection of this monument, that special stamps were prepared, and issued on February 27, 1899—the anniversary of the Dominicans' declaration of independence from Haiti, in 1844. The series comprised 8 values, from 1c to 2 pesos,—250,000 being printed of the 1c, 200,000 each of the 2c and 5c; 150,000 of the 10c and 25,000 each of the 20c, 50c, 1 peso and 2 pesos. The stamps were on sale to the exclusion of all others until November 1, 1900, when they were withdrawn.

The stamp issue of St. Kitts-Nevis have been very conservative, as for over 17 years the stamps were printed in the two designs brought into use, in May, 1903, and as for paper and color changes, these have been fewer than in many other Islands of the Carribbean. As a matter of fact, the Crown Agents' color scheme for Colonial postage stamps, evolved in 1907, was never adopted by the Presidency for stamps in the old designs, and only the ½d, 1d and 2½d were changed to single colors, to bring then into line with the Postal Union requirements. On June 15, 1920, a new series was brought into issue in double medallion type—the head of King George being in that at the left, while the right medallion bears the seals of St. Kitts, and Nevis, on alternate values.

While there can be no objection on the part of collectors or others, to an issue of commemorative stamps by St. Kitts, and it is not unusual for British Colonies to celebrate local events philatelically, still it is not often that the money so obtained is earmarked for town improvements. It is not that the finances of the Presidency will not allow of a grant for local improvements, or memorials, for of all the Presidencies forming the Leeward Islands Federation, those of St. Kitts-Nevis were in the most healthy state on 31st March, 1921, there being a surplus of £34,338—the revenue and expenses in that year being £106,750 and £91,476, respectively.

In asking permission of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to issue such a series of stamps, it is quite probable that there will be no mention made of the use to which the funds are to be put. The Post Office revenue will benefit by the issue of such stamps, and in turn the revenue of the Presidency, which will enable the purchase of the lands out of the surplus funds.

St. Kitts was discovered by Columbus on his second voyage in 1493, and called by him, St. Christopher, as it was said he saw in its configuration a resemblance to that saint carrying our Saviour. By the Caribs, the island was known as Liamuiga, the Fertile island. Later, the name Merwar's Hope was attached to it—being formed of the first syllables of Merrifield, who arranged and fitted out the expedition to it, and its coloniser, Sir Thomas Warner.

Though Barbados was nominally taken possession of in 1605, permanent settlement was not effected until 21 years later, and therefore, St. Kitts, which was settled in 1623, can rightly claim the distinction of being the Mother Colony of the British West Indies. Sir Thomas Warner died at St. Kitts on March 10, 1648, and his tomb may be seen in St. Thomas' churchyard, at Middle Island, the parish church of Old Roads. During the 17th and 18th centuries, the French and Spanish held possession of St. Kitts for short periods. But the island was restored to England by the Treaty of Versailles, in 1783, and ever since it has been British, although it was raided by Villeneuve, in 1805, just before the battle of Trafalgar.

St. Kitts is 45 miles to the west of Antigua, is 23 miles in length, has an area of 68 square miles, and a population of 27,004. Basseterre, its capital, is a town of 9,019 inhabitants.

Nevis, which was discovered by Columbus at the same time as St. Kitts, was named by him Neivis (also known as Mevis). from its cloud-capped peak, which to his mind, had the appearance of snow. A strait, barely 2 miles in width, separates St. Kitts from Nevis, to the southwest. The island has an area of 38 square miles, and a population of 14,430, less than 60 are white. Charlestown is the capital, with 1,050 inhabitants.

Anguilla, 60 miles to the northwest of St. Kitts, of which it is a dependency, has an area of 35 square miles, and a population of 5,098.

St. Kitts and Nevis were united by a Federal Act of the Leeward Islands Legislature in 1882, and with Anguilla, form a single Presidency of the Leeward Islands Federation, the other members being Antigua, Dominica, Montserrat and Virgin Islands. There is one Governor and Commander-in-Chief for the Colony, (Sir Eustace Fiennes, Bart.) with headquarters at St. John's, Antigua. In the larger Presidencies the government is administered by Administrators, while for Montserrat and Virgin Islands, Commissioners are appointed. The Legislative Council of St. Kitts-Nevis consists of 6 official and 6 unoffical members, besides the Governor and Administrator (Hon. H. M. Wigley, Acting Administrator, 1922). Of the unofficial members, 5 may be appointed from among the people of St. Kitts and Anguilla, but one at least must be selected from Nevis. The Council meets at Basseterre, annually, or at such time as the Governor or Administrator sees fit to appoint. In Nevis, there is a Resident Magistrate (Hon. F. H. Watkins, 1922,) formerly Commissioner of Montserrat (1900-1906,) and later of the Turks & Caicos Islands (1906-1914).

PREPARATION FOR MOUNTING.

By WILLIAM A. LORENZ.

In mounting postage stamps it is desirable to remove the old hinges and portions of envelope. If these are soaked in water and the cancellations are fugitive, (as for example on many stamps of the Colombian Republic) the cancellations will run and spoil the stamps. In order to avoid this I proceed as follows:

Wet a piece of cotton, or a copy-book cloth; lay this down upon a piece of oiled paper, such as used in copy-books; then place the stamps upon this wet cloth, with the hinge, or gum side, against the wet side of the cloth; then over this place oiled paper on the face of the postage stamps; then weight the top with books or magazines. By leaving the postage stamps under this weight for about half an hour, the stamps will readily separate from the backing. This leaves some gum on the stamps, which the average collector likes to retain. By sprinkling a little powdered talc on the gum, the gum need not be wiped off. Then the stamps should be placed between blotting paper under a weight so that they will dry flat.

By proceeding in this way, the stamps can be readily separated from their backing and the face of the stamps will not be wetted. Consequently the fugitive cancellations on the stamps will not be spoiled.

The gum may be wiped off with a wet cloth, without disturbing the face of the stamps, but be careful to keep the face dry.

Stamps with gum thereon, particularly new ones, are in many instances apt to curl badly, and will not lie flat. This curl may be taken out by drawing the metal edge of a ruler over the stamps, which will straighten out the stamps and allow them to lie flat. Draw the ruler edge gently over the "convex" side of the stamps.

Cloth Bound PRICE $2.00 Post Free

THIS great book is now in the bindery and we are prepared to take orders accompanied by cash. The expense in producing it has been so great that we feared a $2 price would not be possible. The authors, B. W. H. Poole and Willard O. Wylie, publicly acknowledge their indebtedness to Messrs. C. A. Howes and Chas. S. Thompson for assistance rendered. W. W. Jewett of the Jewett Printing Co. has also taken great pains as a producing factor in this great achievement.

The book is handsomely bound in green cloth with appropriate lettering, and no student of stamps can do without it. It represents the high watermark in philatelic book publishing and especially from the standpoint of the general collector.

On these advance orders the Dictionary will be mailed direct from the bindery at Long Island City, N. Y., some three or four weeks ahead of a Portland or Beverly mailing.

Written for MEKEEL'S WEEKLY.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

For a few months in 1888, some of the 1 and 10 centimes stamps were issued with a coating of dextrine on the back instead of the usual gum but there were so many complaints from the public regarding the unadhesive qualities and atrocious flavor of the compound, that its use was given up and the following explanatory Special Order published:—

"August 4, 1888.

In order to effect economies, the Administration has tried the experiment of using Dextrine instead of Senegal Gum on the back of those postage stamps most in demand. The 1 and 10 centimes stamps issued by the Department of Stamps during the months of April, May and June last, are gummed with dextrine. Complaints having been received from the general public that this subject is not sufficiently adhesive, and moreover has an unpleasant taste, the Administration has ceased to make use of it, and has decided to call in all sheets of stamps gummed with dextrine now on hand at all post offices.

These sheets can be distinguished in the following way: The adhesive coating made from dextrine is yellower in appearance, thicker, and has a more shiny surface than that made from gum; the former also has an unpleasant taste. Further, dextrine absorbs damp to a far greater degree than does Senegal Gum; sheets of stamps coated with dextrine will be found to have stuck so tightly together that they cannot be separated without injury.

The exchange of such sheets for others coated with pure gum will be proceeded with at once, as fast as is possible from the present stock in hand at the Department of Stamps."

All the values of this series were perforated 14 by the comb-machine then in use at the Malines Printing Office. The 1 centimes in grey, 5c, 10c and 1 franc are all known entirely imperforate.

There were many printings of all denominations, the following synopsis of these and the quantities being based on statistics made by Mr. de Bont:—

	No. Stamps
1c olive green, 3 printings,	100,500,000
1c grey, many printings,	224,700,000
2c red-brown, many printings,	15,570,000
5c green, many printings,	108,480,000
10c rose on blue, 10 printings,	720,000,000
20c olive on grey, 4 printings,	2,000,000
25c blue on rose, many printings,	65,000,000
50c bistre on buff, 5 printings,	1,130,000
1fr red-brown on green, many printings,	675,000
2fr lilac on lilac, 2 printings,	354,000

Most of the values, especially those that were in large demand, like the 1c, 5c, 10c and 25c show numerous shades, the two last named also providing many varieties differing in the surface tinting of the paper.

The 1c, 2c and 5c printed from the same plates as were employed for the preceding issue provide numerous minor varieties, of which the only one which seems to have been sufficiently striking to be deemed worthy of correction, is "BELGIGUE" on the 1 centime. The others are due to slight defects in the electrotypes or to poor printing or a combination of both. Some, according to Mr. de Bont, "are due to defects in the paper, in which were hard lumps, which rapidly wore away the plates". It is hardly within the scope of an article of this general character to record all the minor varieties which have been listed from time to time, the more so as it is not possible to determine which were of a temporary or accidental character and which were more or less constant at a certain state of the plate, or plates. To the specialist, of course, they all have an interest but the general collector might well leave most of them alone until we have some adequate guide as to their exact status. The catalogues are useless in this regard for they are not in the least consistent. Gibbons lists the 5 centimes with accented second "é" and says "this stamp was printed from a new plate". If this accented letter is a characteristic feature of the stamps printed from a particular plate, the variety at once becomes an important and generally collectible one.

CHAPTER XIV.

The First 35 Centimes Value.

An official decree announced that "a new 35 centimes postage stamp, color brown-red, is to be issued on July 1st, 1891". Supplies of this new value reached most of the post offices on June 20th, and, as there were no regulations to the contrary, they seem to have been placed on sale in most places on the same day. The new stamp was principally intended for use on inland registered letters—paying both the postal and registry charges—but it was also used on letter-telegrams and express letters within the confines of a single postal district. The design shows a profile portrait of the King in the centre on a ground of horizontal lines. Around this is a circular band inscribed "POSTES BELGIQUE" at the top and "BELGIE POSTERIJEN" below. The latter is the Flemish equivalent of the former and now appears on the postage stamps of Belgium for the first time as a result of continuous agitation having placed the French and Flemish languages on an official equality. In the upper left and lower right angles are circles containing the numerals "35" in white on a ground of solid color, but nothing

AND ONCE MORE—THE SHANGHAIS.

By C. C. SILVESTER.

There has been so much discussion and complaint in the philatelic press recently as to the action of the Government in selling the Shanghai overprints in Washington for $2.82, that I feel I must tell my own experience.

When the issue first appeared in Shanghai, dealers in this country charged from $6.50 up for them, and I contented myself with buying only a short set, for which I paid 10% off catalogue. But I was not satisfied with a short set, so I wrote to a friend in Manila who had lived for about twenty years previously in Shanghai and asked him to tell me someone in Shanghai who would procure the stamps for me at the U. S. P. O. there. In due time I heard from him, and about two weeks later I had the stamps from Shanghai, and imagine my surprise to find that they were all perfect specimens—not a straight edged one in the lot, and every one perfectly centered—and they were the original printing, bought at the Post Office in Shanghai and with them came a letter saying that they were sold at the rate of 2 cents for 1 cent—that is. 2 Chinese cents for 1 cent U. S. currency, but the memorandum enclosed said I owed my correspondent exactly $2.82 American money. That was in March of this year, the purchase being made in February.

Anyway, I am the possessor of an original set as issued in China, and for exactly the same price as I would later have gotten it for at Washington.

—We have received Pricelist No. 22 from G. Stanley Haines of Peabody, Mass. It covers a variety of single stamps and sets and will be sent free upon request.

—A. E. Pade writes us that a new 1k Denmark stamp has just been issued, brown and blue, type of the current set and the same colors of the recently withdrawn 60 ore 1919.

—The new issue service which J. E. Guest has now conducted for several years has been taken over by Maxwell Krause of Lebanon, Pa. It is Mr. Guest's intention to give all of his time to the service of the A.P.S. of which he is Sales Manager.

—The Inland Stamp News has been appointed the official organ of the Stamp Trade Protective Association. The Association claims to have 160 dealers as members.

—A Tacoma subscriber sends us a wrapper upon which is in bold type "Your Subscription Has Expired". The fact is that it had not expired, as the number 1664 plainly indicates. The subscriber says he presumes this is a mistake, and it surely is. In every instance subscribers will please note that the Whole Number tells the story. In the hustle of mailing day it is possible for a thing of this kind to happen.

MORE PHILATELIC WANDERINGS IN EAST ASIA.

By HENRY H. HART.

When I arrived in Tientsin the Pei Ho had just frozen up, business had stopped for the winter, and many merchants had gone home to the provinces for the holidays. The city is flat and uninteresting except that it has some fine business houses, and is the centre of commerce for North China. There are fine French and English Concessions, as an ex-German and an ex-Russian Concession, an Italian and other concessions as well as a large Japanese Concession over near the old Chinese city, whose wall was destroyed after the Boxer siege.

Each of these concessions has its national post-office, though some are situated in other concessions. For instance, the Japanese Post-Office is at the corner of Victoria Square, in the English Concession. The great bulk of the business is, however, conducted by the Chinese Post-Office, whose main building is in the ex-Russian Concession. It is efficient, and most of the foreigners send their mail through it.

Visits to the various offices were made, and I found that all stamps are in stock, though already interest is beginning to lag, since the post-offices are to be closed at the beginning of next year.

I could not locate the Italian Post Office. In fact, none exists, and it is difficult to get the stamps. I found a most obliging Italian barber in my hotel, who was able to rout out some official for me and get full sets of the stamps. I asked him to send me the stamps registered with Italian stamps to Shanghai. Alas, on my arrival there I found the stamps, but the cover was franked with Chinese stamps. And, in a painfully scrawled letter in his best Tuscan, he told me that the Italian post only accepted letters for Italy, and did not serve China. This I found to be true. I have never succeeded in getting more than a few of these stamps used—nor have I ever seen them on legitimately used covers. I found plenty of commemorative stamps to be had in the Post Offices, though no dealers were to be located in Tientsin.

I went up to the wonderful city of Pekin—the "Northern Capital"—for the Christmas and New Year's holidays, and there found the best hotel in all of East Asia, equal to the better class larger American hotels. I could spend hours telling you all of the wonderful sights of Peking—its palaces and temples, its pagodas and ruins, its wall, its camels, its lamaseries, its curioshops without number, its various people, and its historic Legation Quarter. But I would weary you with the tale, especially when you can read such books as Miss Bredon's "Peking", Hovelaque's "La Chine" and the like. I spent a wonderful week there, wandering through the Chinese, Tartar, Imperial and Forbidden Purple Cities, with their art treasures and historic associations, the Winter Palace, Coal Hill, where the last of the Mings hanged himself, the residence of Yuan Shi Kai, and countless other famous spots of this city—famous since Marco Polo and Kublai Khan stirred the imagination of mediæval Europe.

Finest of all the monuments of Peking—of all China, in fact,—is the exquisite Temple of Heaven, pictured on the "Coronation" stamps of the "Boy Emperor". Many an hour did I spend in this temple, a wonderful inspiration, a dream in blue and golden-yellow, with its adjacent Altar of Heaven. It gives one knowing China's hoary history a strange thrill to stand on the central stone of its great white marble platform open to the heavens, where once the Son of Heaven, a lord himself, could stand and pray, and he only twice a year. There, surrounded by concentric circles of slabs, each an increasing multiple of nine, he was wont to offer up prayers for his people and sacrifice to the Great God of all things. No foreign eye ever beheld the ceremony, and even the Chinese had to close their houses and shops and hide as the sacred procession passed down from Chien Men to the Temple, and the rites took place earliest dawn. It was all very, very i pressive, and productive of thought. A ter this masterpiece the Temple of Ag culture, opposite, was very flat, exc that it was interesting as being the he quarters of General Chaffee's troops d ing the Boxer trouble.

But the one undesirable thing whic did take away with me back to Tient was a bad case of influenza, which k me in bed for several days, under very able ministrations of a Japan doctor, the best obtainable in Tients After I recovered, I spent more time Peking, where I obtained some ve little-known rugs—Shansi Province sa dle-blankets, not made for foreign tra and so endowed with all the rare beat of design and coloring that the orient everywhere seem to reserve for th own family possessions. I prize the most highly, as I do the Tibetan prayi wheels, and the Chinese jewel-box which I unearthed from most unlik corners of the city. After knowing Ca tonese, I found Kuan Hua, the Manda dialect, not very difficult, especially many of the trade-terms are much alik Peking is full of curio-shops, at le 1000 of them, but, as the city is a f vorite hunting-ground of the genus tou ist, I fought shy of them, and found re good things—and some exquisite bits glass and jade in little out-of-the-w places. Of course, I visited the cloison factories. The work is perhaps mo lasting than the Japanese ware, but t Chinese show nowhere near the sam fertility of imagination in design a coloring as do their island neighbors.

The rug industry was most interestin The work is done by boys from abo nine to sixteen years of age, workin in hovels so dark and damp that th cannot see without lamps, which ma the atmosphere still worse. Here th work about sixteen hours a day, wea ing out soul and body that our hom may be beautified. And for this sla labor for years they get only board—handful of rice and port—and lodging-a plank or a corner on the earthern floo Later they are paid perhaps twenty cen a day and board. When you see the stunted, large-eyed, prematurely age children, coughing and wheezing as the fingers seem to fly among the knots an warp of the design, your heart ache Instinctively comes to your mind th immortal poem of Elizabeth Barr Browning, "The Cry of the Children and you walk slowly away, saddened an depressed. And thereafter Chinese rug tell a different tale to you, a tale of su fering and want, a tale of the sacrifi of youth and of health and of life, tale of the weaving of pain and distres and heart-ache, into the warp and th woof of that Chinese rug which you feet tread so carelessly and thoughtlessly

From Peking I proceeded by train t Hankow, two nights and a day throug the central provinces of China, Chihl Honan, Hupeh, where Chinese life in a ariety may be seen. The worst d I ever want to cross was over the g Ho, The Yellow River, "China's w", which has brought so much a and woe, so much life and death na's millions. The bridge has far ed its usefulness, and is so shaky he train consumes thirteen minutes ering two miles of trestle. I was ful to learn that a new bridge has contracted for. I sincerely hope is in place when I next cross Cen- hina. Incidentally, I believe that he bridge pictured on the current alues of China's stamps.

Hankow is a very fine city, made up of the foreign concessions, the cities being across the river at ang and Wuchang. The usual n post offices are to be found there n Hankow I went down the Yang- River of Willows", for four days. ame "YangTse" is not known to hinese, who call it the "Cheong n" or Long River. We visited the ports which were so familiar in ums and catalogues of yore—Kiu- called by its inhabitants Chiu- g, or "Nine Rivers", Wuhu-Weedy -"ChinKiang and Nanking, which vered with snow. On the fourth e turned into the muddy Whang- d, passing Woosung, steamed h the snow and sleet to the French of Shanghai.

n't say that Shanghai is a favorite f mine, as it is neither East nor But its life is interesting and ting. But I've told of it before. won't spend any more time on it ourse, I called on my friend, Sid- d garnered much from his stamp n and his stamp stock, both of are excellent. Except for him, I no dealers of consequence in the ough they may well be there.

Russian post office ceased func- long ago, and at the English office I found half of the values out of stock. I had a most pleasant time each visit I paid to the American Post Office, whose stamp section is presided over by my good friend Mr. Kenake. After letting me select perfect copies of the U. S. A. surcharges, and I call on you all to testify to their rarity, we would have many a pleasant conversation. Mr. Kenake was Postmaster of Honolulu at the time of the republic, and was present when the stock of remainders was destroyed by incineration. He has permitted me to tell the following story of it, which may not have appeared before.

When it was known that the stamps were to be destroyed, the head of a great stamp firm came to Honolulu in an endeavor to buy up the remainders. Every effort proved unavailing, as the officials would not sell under the face values. The gentleman became more anxious as the day of destruction drew nearer, but to no avail.

Then he was given permission to be present when the burning took place. How he groaned and wept when he saw the priceless surcharges and old issues in complete sheets consigned to the devouring flames! At last the attendant came forward with the last of them, a huge basket heaped high with packages of full sheets, all wrapped up carefully. He could stand it no longer, and in his excitement offered $100,000 for that basket full, just as it was, without examination. But his offer was sadly refused. "And", concluded Mr. Kenake, "it's lucky for him we didn't accept his offer, for that basket consisted entirely of the cheapest one cent greens."

This much for Shanghai on the Whangpu.

I sailed for Hong Kong on January 27th, arriving two days later, as the strike of seamen was approaching its crisis. The stamps were gradually appearing in the Crown script watermark, and I may record here that I was in the office when the twenty-five cent appeared, and the date was February 21, 1922.

Graca has the best stock of stamps in China, and his prices are very fair and reasonable. I saw there the SinKiang (Turkestan) surcharges of the Commemorative sets, of the 1, 3 and 6 cent values. Mr. Siddall told me that only a limited number of these were issued. The ten cent, he told me, had been entirely cornered by a speculator, and, sure enough, Graca had none, nor could I find any anywhere. I have not even one to complete my set.

My last week in Hong Kong was not pleasant. There was a general strike, no coolies, no boys in the hotel, no cooks, no elevator men, no rikishas, no trams, no "nothin'", so we white people had to do our own cooking and cleaning, and to turn to, to keep the Colony going. I spent days on end, filling milk bottles at the Dairy Farm so that the white children of the Colony might be properly fed. I left the day after the strike was declared over, and sailed for Haiphong and the South on the Messageries Maritimes boat, the "Armand Béhic."

After coasting along the southern edge of the Island of Hainan we turned north into the Gulf of Tonkin, and entered the Red River in a "crachant", as the French call the mean, heavy, penetrating drizzles of the Gulf. Haiphong is a pretty little French town, the port of Hanoi, the capital of French Indo-China, and the outlet for the trade of Yunnan Province.

At the Post Office I found the surcharged stamps still being sold, but at half of their face value. For instance, the stamps used for foreign postage is the 50 centimes, surcharged "20 cents". This is sold for ten cents. I obtained a sheet of the 14 cents on 35 cents, containing all the errors of the closed "4". If any readers are interested, I shall be glad to state the position of the errors in the sheet. I was informed that all the stocks are to be used up before the appearance of the new stamps, and that the government is going to issue separate stamps for each province of the colony, which is under one administration, and uses the same currency. So now prepare your pages and your pocketbooks for stamps of Annam, Tonkin, Laos, Cambodge and Cochin China!

After two days in Haiphong we left cool weather behind us, and began wearing white clothes and solar topis—and wishing that we could dress like the natives—in much less.

Forty-eight hours brought us to Saigon, my old home, where everything is, as usual, hotter than anywhere on the Coast. There I bought a sheet of the ten-centers with all the closed "4"s, but others had been before me with the errors on the postage due stamps, and no more were to be had. Here all the information about five new sets was confirmed, though no one knew when the stamps were to make their appearance.

After a short stay at Saigon I returned to Singapore for the sixth time. It was the same beautiful fascinating Singapore of my former visits, and is one of those cities which one can love more with each visit. Nothing was new except some values in Script watermark, and a new 12 cent value in blue. The Straits Settlements now has three stamps in the same shade of blue, the 8 cents, 10 cents and 12 cents.

As business called me to Bangkok for the second time, I decided to go by train, having already made the tedious boat trip through the Gulf of Siam. The trip, though warm, is a delightful one, taking two nights and three days, passing from one end of Malaya to the other, until the very top of the Peninsula is reached, and the mainland of Siam is attained. After Singapore Johore is traversed, then the F. M. S. We arrived at its capital, Kuala Lumpur at 7.30, and, as we had a half-hour in which to change trains, I jumped into a rikisha and "pergi" ed to the Post Office. There I found but one new stamp, the five cent purple on yellow, and some crown-script watermarks.

After leaving K. L., as it is always called in the Federated Malay States, we traveled through Selangor and Perak, and in the morning came into Province Wellesley, another of the Straits Settlements. There, at a tiny village with the resounding name of Bukit Mertajam, we were dumped out at five in the morning to wait for the Siamese train, which arrived four hours and a half later. My breakfast that morning consisted of bananas and coconut milk, obtained from the nearest garden.

After leaving Bukit Mertajam, we passed through the State of Kedah, and I was able to buy a few stamps at the station of Alor Star, its capital. Next came Perlis, the border state of Malaya. It uses the stamps of Kedah, its southern neighbor.

Early in the afternoon we arrived at Padang Besar (Big Meadows), the frontier town, and there we had to produce our passports and submit to a very perfunctory customs' examination. At one end of the station building one can buy Kedah stamps (low values) and at the other Siamese stamps. Thenceforth all signs were in Siamese and English, instead of in English, Chinese, Malay, Malyallam and Hindustani, as on the Malayan side.

Another day and we began to pass wats and phras (Bonzes) in their yellow robes, and the country folk no longer wore the sarongs of the Malay, but the artistic, bloomer-like panung of the Siamese. We passed Rajburi and Petchaburi, and realised that we were al-

Hit—The Chicago Philatelic Society has decided to hold an exhibition that is based on so sound an idea, that we shall speak of the society's enterprise in the hope that other stamp organizations may emulate its example. The plan is to hold a Chicago Night when the meeting will be devoted to the display of all the different locals and private proprietaries issued by Chicago companies as well as Chicago postmarks and cancellations from the beginning down to 1900. Historical information in connection with the stamps and their issuing companies will be sought, so that it may be presented compactly as an accompaniment to the stamps and old postal markings. Chicago is rich in philatelic tradition and had one of the last of the local companies, Allen's City Despatch, which was suppressed about 1885. Mr. N. A. MacRae, Chicago, was an eye witness to the death struggles of this post and his description of its end is interesting. Underlying the philatelic argument for an occason of this kind is the appeal that it must have for many non-philatelists who make much of local history; and as a rule, the exhibition may be presented to the papers of the city in a way to make them recognize that it is worth attention.

Hah—In "The Diamond as Big as the Ritz", Smart Set for June, F. Scott Fitzgerald, who in his "Beautiful and Damned", as we showed recently, proved conclusively that he had lived in the stamp world, in his younger days at least, makes Percy, whose father owns the mountain-diamond, say: "I love jewels," agreed Percy enthusiastically. "Of course, I wouldn't want anyone at school to know about it but I've got quite a collection myself. I used to collect them instead of postage stamps." Percy's attention should be called to the descriptions of "brilliant" and "gem", etc., that bestrew the pages of many an auction catalogue. As it is, some of the collectors who do not go in for jewelry, point, a la the Roman matron, to their stamps as their jewels.

How—In the Chicago Post, there is a colyumist who graduated with highest honors from B.L.T.'s most advanced class. "Riq" is at once as playful as a porpoise and as sapient as a serpent, yet with all his angles, erudite or frolicsome, something is missing. Here he blows! "Ralph King of the Waukegan Sun, we read in the Bloomington Pantagraph because the King of the Sun is one of the Post Nobility, 'who has been seriously ill, will recuperate by going fishing, farming and stamp collecting.' One would like to hear more details of the last-mentioned invigorating sport." We know Ralph King of Waukegan, a newspaper man, who is one of the most devoted of collectors, and what is more natural than that he should include stamp collecting in the trinity of restful occupations. If stamps are friends when we are well they become closer than a brother when we are under the weather. While we do not think that "Riq." is one of those chaps who, after we had used a thousand words in explaining why and how stamps are collected, would smilingly ask: "What good are they after you get them? we haven't the ambition to go into detail. Let Mr. King amuse himself during his recuperation period by putting "Riq." next.

Hen—Is there a hen on anywhere? Mr. W. F. Cannon, Davenport, Iowa, writes: "Can you tell me what company will insure my stamp stock against fire or theft? I did have my stock insured but about five months later the agent made me redeem the policy because the company refused to insure things of 'questionable value'. I should appreciate this information very much." We suppose that we know what the insurance companies mean when they refer to stamps as having no established value, to put it mildly, but we do not understand why there is such diverging views on stamps as insurable property by the companies. Periodically, we return to this question of fire insurance for stamps and after a few letters from readers who say that their stamps are satisfactorily insured, the question is dropped, only to bob up again as in this instance. It may be that the question is one that cannot stay settled but anyhow, we are sending in a call for information about this insurance business from our readers who are always on their toes waiting for the gong.

Hap—While we should not exactly call Mr. Wimbush a philosopher of parts in Aldous Huxley's "Chrome Yellow" the happiest of men, yet the threnodies that he trills are not too minor. Hark'ee: "I could never take much interest in a collection of postage stamps. Primitive or 17th century books, yes. They are my line. But stamps, no. I don't know anything about them; they're not in my line. They don't interest me; they give me no emotion." Fair enough for the ruminative Wimbush who is willing enough to let us go our own way, even though it is not his own. However, he agitates us when he says: "For all I know, you may suddenly jump up and try to murder me in a moment's time." Mr. W.'s plaint is: "The trouble with the people and events of the present is that you never know anything about them." Try the old issues.

Hop—We lift the following ennobling segment from life from the Chicago Tribune as we have decided to play our literary string to the end this week: "As examples of greatest Thrift, you can pin the golden fleas on the Chinaman. They apply a transparent varnish to postage stamps which effectually prevents cancellation. Removing a supposedly canceled stamp from a letter and soaking it in water makes it as good as new. I spent several years in the orient and had a 'boy' (all male servants there are 'boys', even though gray and bald) who was an adept in the gentle art of rejuvenating postage stamps." The paragraph is signed, "Milwaukee Jack." Now, Mil. Jack may be a big card in the 500 but a secret service man said years and years ago in a deep, throaty voice that the Italians were the world's greatest artists in stamp varnishing. Still, our idea of nothing to fight about is who are the most skilful in this way.

Hew—We have just received a very interesting letter from Professor E. G. Young, of Shanghai, which we shall be pleased to share with readers next week. We find the postscript: "Mr. Siddall is in the General Hospital here in a very serious condition, much to the regret of all the collecting fraternity in town. He occupies a big place in our esteem." We hope that Mr. Siddall will survive his illness as he deserves well of philatelists. He is a most ardent collector and he has done much to help collectors the world over. He is always ready to lend a helping hand and he has contributed many a news item to our paper from his post in Shanghai. Often a prophet is without honor at home, but in Mr. Siddall's case, the rule does not hold. We suppose that Mr. Siddall's paper will be discontinued while he is unable to give attention, but we hope soon again to see a copy of it.

TORREON—IN REJOINDER.

By MAJOR C. S. HAMILTON.

ed the comment of Major Charles iott, Inf., U. S. A., in your issue il 29, regarding my article on the a de Torreon issue, and while I desire to enter into a long dis-, the following point appears rtinent.

figures of the number of these issued were obtained by possess- nparatively large numbers of these and by careful examination of nore, which resulted in showing the lower values not more than eets of each were issued, and of her values, 20c and 50c, all came he same sheet. This was easily l up by the shades of the stamps ves as well as minor variations of nps, locating their position on the r Elliott has never seen the com- ries of these stamps and but very the lower values, yet believes my e incorrect, whereas, my infor- has been carefully verified and tiated by others and I believe the is exact.

e stamps were issued and intended at Cuidad Juarez only, although se from other points is known. er, the covers enumerated with April 10, and April 11, by Major as being in his collection, were of philatelic origin and not used e purpose of ordinary business ondence.

FUNDAMENTALS IN COLLECTING.

The usual "Hints to Collectors" start with the purchase of an outfit, and after a brief explanation of how to mount stamps (with diagrams) proceed to deal with the various kinds of stamps, their details, and the long names with which they have been labelled and sub-labelled. All this is very necessary—in books—but seems out of place in a stamp journal. One must know the A B C of the hobby, but one does not expect to find a lesson on the A B C on the front page of one's daily paper, or even in the children's supplement.

This brings me to the subject of this article, that the foundation of successful collecting, whether the object aimed at is pleasure or profit, is KNOWLEDGE. Too many collectors start off with the idea that a hobby does not involve any work—that enjoyment will come without any effort. They accept the fact that obvious differences between stamps—differences that do not need any looking for—entitle them to a place in the album and they are prepared to mount such stamps more or less neatly in the album (stigmatising the task meanwhile as a "beastly sweat"), but beyond that they do not go. They measure their success by counting the number of stamps in their collection, for which purpose tram tickets or matchbox lids would serve equally well, and fail to realize that a couple of thousand stamps will provide interest and amusement for years, even if their number is never to be increased.

This is not true collecting and those who take up the hobby on such lines usually abandon it after a few years, entirely failing to grasp the possibilities it holds out to them. The pity of it is that the gap between unintelligent and enlightened collecting is so small that it takes but a little help from others to bridge it and make a real collector out of the label-counter; but this help is not always forthcoming and the beginner drops out with no regrets for the pleasures which have been within his grasp, but which he has never heard of.

The secret lies in keenness and the determination to learn something about one's stamps. They may be studied from the point of view of their designs and inscriptions and these will be found intensely interesting, or attention may be concentrated on their manufacture, in which case one must learn about printing methods, perforations, colours, watermarks, and the like. In each case books are necessary.

An elementary book on How to Collect must be thoroughly mastered, or worthless stamps will be included, or good stamps will be damaged in handling. A good catalogue should be used and, while the simplified lists are helpful, a detailed catalogue, such as Gibbons', contains such a mass of interesting information that if only one can be afforded the collector should plump for the biggest he can get.

A good stamp journal is helpful because it supplements the catalogue, and its articles elaborate the information given there. And remember that most Editors are ready to help you with knotty problems if you drop them a line and enclose a stamped addressed envelope. The Editor of the M.C. certainly is.

There are plenty of interesting books on what may be called the bypaths of the hobby—the meaning of the designs and inscriptions, the historic associations of certain stamps, and many other matters of which the label-counter has no idea. After he has studied his catalogue there will be few stamps which will not provide the collector with something interesting to say about them.

If the study of stamp detail is taken up, the catalogue may be supplemented, not only by the journal chosen, but by handbooks dealing with the stamps of various countries or issues in fuller detail. One may know something about everything or everything about something and, from the financial point of view, perhaps the latter is most profitable to the collector. If he thoroughly studies the stamps of one country he will end by knowing more than the catalogues can tell him, for he will find things for himself and, knowing more than the catalogue, will know more than most of his fellow-collectors and some dealers, so that bargains will come his way in plenty.

Whatever kind of knowledge the collector wishes to gain, there is only one way to acquire it. He must read everything about stamps that he can lay hands on. It may be too deep for him to understand fully, but he will always learn something. He did not learn to read by sticking to works of the "black cat sat on a mat" variety. He read whatever he could get, even though he did not understand all the hard words, and the same course must be taken with philatelic literature. (Incidentally I may say that these philatelic "handbooks", which appear such weighty works, are really intensely interesting to the general reader and should be read whenever obtainable.)

The golden rule for the would-be successful collector is to regard every stamp in his album as an interrogation mark, not as an extra, meaningless label, one among thousands, nor as a piece of paper valued at so many pence. Let him work through his album, saying, "What does that design stand for?" "What does that inscription mean?" "Who printed these stamps and by what method?" "Why was this overprint or surcharge applied?", and any other question which each may suggest. The answer is to be found, somewhere, in most cases, and in getting the required information the collector will be building up the knowledge which cannot fail to lead to success, whether pleasure or profit is his aim.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Circular.

PAYMENT OF RETURN POSTAGE.

It may seem to be a trifle, but in the course of a day's mail it means much to those who are engaged in a mail order business. We speak not only for ourselves, but on general principles, believing that unintentionally many correspondents are neglecting what should be an ordinary courtesy. When writing seeking information, which calls for a reply by mail, it is only right to expect that a stamped and addressed envelope should be enclosed. We do this in our own correspondence and feel that it is in accord with the ethics of business

UNITED STATES.—Most of the copies of the 3c, issue of 1867, with grill covering the entire back, that have been seen heretofore on covers have been used from small towns. The Scott Stamp & Coin Co. have just shown me three covers with this stamp, from a small correspondence that they recently located, postmarked "Phila,Pa" with month and day date within a small circle. These were used in September, October and December, 1867. I have never seen this stamp with a Philadelphia cancellation heretofore nor have I seen the variety from New York.

The same firm also call my attention to the fact that the well known Franklin carrier has been located with a strong horizontal crack in the plate. The copy in question has a red carrier cancellation.

We desire to thank the Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Mr. L. B. Hill for an additional list of plate numbers. This brings our records up to May 18, 1922.

On reading the above list carefully the first thing that strikes one's attention is the single plate of the 3c of the offset or surface type. Why this single plate is coming along at this time, unless for experimental purposes, I cannot say. I am making further inquiry and will advise our readers at a future date. It will also be noticed that several pairs of the 2c rotary plates of four hundred subjects are on the list and this certainly should mean that we will see the 2c rotary, perforated 10, in sheet form before long. We have the first set of 2c postage due plates that we have had for sometime as well as sets of the 7c and 9c denominations which are not made often.

Mr. H. Clay Reed recently obtained an assortment of used provisional envelopes and in going over the lot informs me that he found quite a few varieties that have not been chronicled heretofore.

It is odd that a new revenue stamp should be issued without coming promptly to our attention, but such is the case. The Scott Co. have shown me a new Class A Playing Card stamp, rouletted, about the size of the former variety. I imagine the last large variety was too cumbersome for small packages and that the manufacturers kicked. The new variety is in blue, on paper watermarked double line U S I R, has "Class A" in large letters in the center, with "Playing Cards" in a semi-circle directly above. Horizontally across the top of the stamp we find "U. S. I. R." The value is not expressed but under today's tax law it is an 8c variety.

An advance sheet of the new Gibbons catalogue, dealing with the 1851-1857 issues has been distributed, and judging from this, the book will answer the demand of the specialist. For sometime advanced collectors have desired the Scott Company to take the lead in furnishing such information, and it is to be regretted that they have allowed an English firm to do it. The page gives all the data regarding the many varieties of these issues and in compiling this Mr. Phillips has no doubt covered all of the leading articles on the subject published on this side of the water. Not only the type varieties, but paper varieties, shifts, double transfers, recuts, etc., are covered and most of them are priced. The Scott people will also have some information of great importance to announce very shortly, and while I am not at liberty at this time to give the details, I can say we will not have to look to the English catalogue for any great length of time as the authority on United States issues. The finest collections of our stamps are in this country, the best posted students of our issues are on this side of the water and there is certainly no reason that our publications should not be about the last word on the subject.

TO COLLECTORS IN OUT OF THE WAY PLACES:

We send stamps on approval to the four corners of the earth. Yesterday we received a remittance of $50.00 from a customer in the Philippines for several select '69's. Another army man, Lt. Col. George D. Guyer, writes: "I have greatly admired the artistic manner in which your stamps are displayed and the reasonable price and excellency of the specimens."

Other customers in Alaska, China, Japan, British Guiana, St. Pierre and Miquelon, have found that Sudden Service reaches far. No matter whether you are a large or small buyer—give us references—state what grade of stamps you want—and we'll send any place. [40 to state whether centimes or francs! As regards the rest of the design we cannot do better than quote the flippant description given in the Philatelic Record for July, 1891:—"The two remaining angles are filled up with a marine-store assemblage of miscellaneous articles, amongst which we can discern a cog-wheel, the fluke of an anchor, and something that resembles a dice-box amidst a bed of roses."

The head was the same as that engraved on the portrait stamps of the last series, being the work of M. Mouchon. In fact, it was taken from one of the Mouchon dies; but the frame around it was designed by Mr. H. Hendrickx, and this part of the die was engraved by Mr. A. Doms. These gentlemen labeled their handiwork as shown by the letters "HH" and "AD" in microscopic capitals, at the left and right respectively, of the foot of the design. In addition to the "control" marks found in the beard of the stamps of the last issue Mr. de Bont has discovered that the cryptic message "14727" has been introduced on the King's cheek in this design!

This stamp was printed from a plate of 300 subjects in the same manner as its predecessors and on similar unwatermarked white paper and it is chiefly remarkable as being the type which served for all the values of 10 centimes and over in the following issue with Sunday label.

The perforation was the work of the 14 comb-machine.

Mr. de Bont says there were three distinct printings of these stamps giving a total of 1,180,000 copies and that the only varieties are those "in which there are defective impressions showing in the words "BELGIQUE" and "POSTERIJEN". On the other hand Mr. Bouvez says there were only two printings giving a total of 2,400,000 stamps. The same writer mentions the minor varieties more fully and infers they were constant throughout about half of the second printing, viz.:—

"The first supply did not present anything peculiar, but on many stamps of the first sheets of the second supply defects or irregularities were noticed in the impression, the result either of an incomplete reproduction of the engraving, or of the used condition of the galvanoplate of the first supply, which had to be again resorted to, and which had to undergo repair. About 1,600 sheets were printed by means of the old plate, and these were supplied to a certain number of post offices on the 1st of November, 1892. The principal errors on these sheets are always reproduced in the same order but with certain variations. We have deemed it of interest to indicate the places which these errors occupy on each sheet, and to explain the nature of each one in numerical order:—

1.—Nos. 5, 25, 91, 114 and 297, we find BELGIOUF instead of BELGIQUE.

2.—Nos. 9, 59, 139, 228 and 264, the head of T in POSTES is cut at the right.

3.—Nos. 38, 83 and 164, the white circle surrounding the medallion is stained near the bottom, between the letter E of BELGIE and the letter P of POSTERIJEN.

4.—Nos. 53, 219 and 283, we find BELGIGUE instead of BELGIQUE.

5.—Nos. 68 and 173, we find BELGIoue instead of BELGIQUE.

6.—Nos. 147, 194 and 242, the star above the border surrounding the medallion is defective.

7.—Nos. 19, 122 and 272, we find POSTEPIJEN instead of POSTERIJEN.

The plate having been inspected and repaired after the supply of the 1600 sheets above mentioned, sheets which were subsequently printed showed only one error, on the stamp corresponding to No. 122. This error is the same as 7 above."

While the above is written as though the facts were indubitably proved, we have, unfortunately, been unable to obtain any corroboration from the findings of other students. As so many other statements by the same writer have not been substantiated by the investigations of other authors we give the above with a good deal of reserve. It is curious, however, to say the least of it, that if these minor varieties appeared with such constancy throughout the first sheets printed of the second supply that there should be no trace of them in the last printed sheets of the first supply. Only one plate was used and we have pointed out similar varieties in other issues which were caused by defective electrotypes, poor printing and a combination of both, but we have yet to learn that any of those plates were ever repaired, with the exception of the BELGIGUE variety on the 1c.

The stamp varies but slightly in shade and it had but a short life, for in 1893, the Sunday label series appeared. A Special Order published on February 26th, 1898, gave instructions that no further supplies of this value without the Sunday label were to be given out.

BENADIR.

Italian protectorate on coast of Somaliland, N. E. Africa. Extends from Cape Guardafui to the Juba River. Area, 139,430 sq. m.; pop., 650,000. Chief settlement, Mogadiscio. Under a Royal Charter of May 25th, 1898, the administration and development of this territory was entrusted to "La Societa Anonima Commerciale Italiana del Benadir" of Milan, which undertook, inter alia "to carry out the postal service in accordance with the conditions laid down by the Postal Union." Post offices were opened at Brava, Giumbo, Mecca and Mogadiscio on Nov. 1st, 1903, when stamps showing the heads of an elephant and a lion respectively were brought into use. These stamps were designed by M. Mellicowitz, engraved by M. Alberto Repattati, and surface-printed on Crown watermarked paper at the Office for Stamped Papers, Turin. There were seven denominations, from 1 besa to 10 annas. In consequence of abuses by the chartered company, the Italian Government intervened, and on March 15th, 1905, assumed control of the territory which was officially designated "Somalia Italiana Meridionale" (Italian Southern Somaliland). Italian currency was introduced, in consequence of which value surcharges were apposed on the Benadir stamps, locally (in January) and at Turin (in May, 1906). Further surcharging took place at intervals between 1907 and 1916. The loss of a consignment of regular postage stamps through the sinking of the S. S. Giava by enemy action in the Mediterranean, necessitated the local surcharges made at Mogadiscio in July, 1916. Local currency was reinstated in 1921, when the stamps of 1907-16 were resurcharged in besas and annas pending the new and definitive series inscribed "Somali Italiana Meridionale."—Stamp Collectors Monthly Journal.

New Issues
IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

American Stamp Collectors generally will be interested to learn that Maxwell Krause has acquired the ownership of the J. E. Guest British Colonial New Issue Service. It will be conducted in the future along the same efficient lines employed by Mr. Guest.

It will continue to supply American collectors with the new issues of the British Colonies, as they are issued, at a price lower than the lowest retail selling price of any American dealer.

It will, in addition, be extended to embrace the new issues of other countries. These can be subscribed for separately, in the following classes: South & Central America; Portuguese Colonials; French Colonials; the rest of the world not included in the other four classes.

The advantages of this new issue service are apparent. You receive everything as issued at a very small advance over face value. Stamps are always worth face value and most of them soon become worth much more. When other collectors, who buy hit or miss, clamor for a stamp which recently became obsolete, you have it safely in your album.

Mr. Guest has transferred all his old accounts to me and they will be taken care of as in the past. There is room for an additional hundred subscribers. Particulars will be sent free, on request.

Mr. Collector, you can make no better investment than new issues at a small percentage over face value. At the present time many changes are being made in the British Colonial issues, a number of which have a very short life. All 2½d blue script watermark stamps issued are now obsolete and selling at from three to ten times face value. This is but one example.

Subscribers to foreign new issue services will readily see the advantage of patronizing an American service. Correspondence is prompter and remittances are made in American money instead of a Foreign currency which requires the purchase of Foreign cheques or money-orders.

A circular giving full particulars of this service will be mailed you on request. Send for it at once together with application blank. Become a subscriber before the next distribution. It will pay you well.

The next discontinuance of subscriptions will concern all subscribers whose wrappers bear the numbers 1640 to 1643 inclusive. Just glance at your wrapper immediately in order to make sure that your subscription is paid up. You have ample time in which to renew and be saved the inconvenience of a discontinuance. Moreover, under our new system we are making no plans for furnishing back numbers and subscribers must not expect that we can supply back numbers when we have made every effort to notify them.

We are satisfied that the system we have inaugurated is the only one under which a newspaper can do business these days, and subscribers must understand that free copies of the WEEKLY will not be sent to those who are in arrears.

MORE PHILATELIC WANDERINGS IN EAST ASIA.

most at our destination. I really was sorry, for we had delightful traveling companions—the ex-Minister to England and Germany of Siam, and his wife, the ex-Secretary of the Treasury, a brother of the King, etc., and the educated Siamese are the most delightful people in all Eastern Asia.

At last, at dark, Mother Menam, beloved river of the Siamese, appeared with its gleaming lights, and we rolled slowly into Bangkok Noi, on the western bank of the Menam Chao Phya. Some of my good Siamese friends were awaiting me, and we quickly embarked in a quaint Siamese sampan and crossed the river to the city itself and motored to the delightful new Royal Hotel.

I love Siam more every time I visit it, and consider it the quaintest and least-known city south of Kyoto, with charming people and a most fascinating city life, to say nothing of its temples, parks and palaces. Being a member of the Siam Society, I was able to see much that was otherwise impossible, and to have the joy of seeing some wonderful collections of things Siamese.

I spent one of the most memorable days of my life in Ayuthiá, the ancient capital, some hours north of Krung Tep (Bangkok) also on the Menam. After arriving at the station, one must row up the river some distance, then turn into a klong (canal) crowded with floating houses and boats, to reach what was once the pride and glory of Siam. After a passable tiffin in an unspeakable Chinese inn—Chinese cooking is excellent if one does not watch the process—we wandered through a jungle track to the great, extensive ruins of the city, which extend for miles. Then one comes in sight of prachedis and wats and towers, fallen into ruins and speaking of the glorious days that are no more. For the Burman crept down upon the city a hundred and seventy-five years ago, and now and the grandeur of Ayuthia is no more. One walks for hundreds of yards on grass-grown tiles, on the central court and throne-room of the ancient kings of the Thais, and stumbles over heads of the Lord Buddh or armless trunks, and carved lotus capitals and pillars. The ruins are the most fascinating, in that they have never been adequately described or surveyed. You may imagine what a wonderfully virgin field they are, and how little visited, when I tell you that I burrowed here and there in the shapeless piles of brick and unearthed an exquisite green bronze head of Buddha, almost life size, in tiara and head-dress, and a fine small bronze bust, besides a beautiful but headless seated figure, as well as perfect hands, feet, etc. How I revelled in it all! Then I visited the great Buddha, image of the gentle Siddhartha, seated majestically in a roofless and ruined temple, open to the sky. Seated beneath the brassy skies and Southern Cross of old Siam, he looks serenely and calmly upon the ruins of today, as he placidly and pityingly looked down upon the sons of man who placed him there, these many centuries ago, ere Constantine Faulkon came to stir the ambitions of the king, or the Peguans and the men of Ava plotted the destruction of Ayuthia.

"They say the Lion and the Lizard keep

There in the hot sun he sits, and around him spreads the adomination of desolation. A generation has grown up down the river that knows not Ayuthia and its glories, and slowly, but surely, the jungle is again claiming its own, and the compassionate Sakyamuni has none but the crows of the air and the jackals of the field to do him homage. . . . So let us leave sad, beautiful, mysterious Ayuthia and its story.

The exportation of images of Buddha is forbidden since some impious actions of certain Germans several years ago. To buy them is next to impossible. Besides those I dug up in Ayuthia, and several others received as gifts, I obtained a real beauty. I was dining with the Belgian Minister and several members of the French Legation when someone who shall be nameless, offered to get me one, after hearing the tale of my difficulties. And sure enough, that very evening appeared a magnificent standing, preaching Buddha, about three feet high, in gilded bronze, at least four hundred years old. The price? Ah, well, it would not do to make you envious. But it had to be smuggled out in plebian gunny-sacks, and a tale had to be told by one Siamese official to another near the border. But this is a tale which must not be told. Sufficient to say that the image of the sage of the Sakyas reposes peacefully in Singapura, City of the Lions, awaiting my return from Java, once converted to His gentle teachings, but now following the Prophet of the Desert, and making pilgrimages to Mecca.

But I forget that mayhap you would like to hear of Siamese things philatelic.

I discovered one dealer, from whom I bought good things at prices which would make the catalogue turn green with envy, a six-pound catalogue stamp at Ticals 9.00=One pound and the like. So I filled up many gaps and would have filled up more had the God of Money been more gracious to me.

Then I hied me to the General Post Office, where I have a good friend in high station, very near the stamp desk. So I obtained the current set, through 50 satangs. The old 2 and 3 satangs are still being used throughout the Kingdom, though the new ones are obtainable from the wholesale desk. However, the London Print of the baht values was not to be had anywhere, except the 10 baht. The Main Post Office, No. 1, had a very large number of sheets of the older print, but only the 10 baht of the new one.

Of the "Scout Stamps", large numbers of the last issue are on hand, but none of the others. Of the Chulalongkorn stamps, a small number of the 6 satangs and 28 satangs of the last set are on hand, but of the king on horseback, I bought the last nine in the office of the 3 tical value, and the last single 2 tical value. None others are to be had at all.

In Siam, as elsewhere in this part of the world, a knowledge of the native tongue, no matter how limited, is necessary to bargaining. For instance, my stamp dealer knew no English, Chinese or Malay, so it was Siamese or nothing. The numerals are like Chinese, for instance, 1, 2, etc., are Nüng, song, sam, si, ha, hok, chet pet, gow, sip, sip nüng, sip song, etc. But it has many tones, like Cantonese. For example, the following four words, all pronounced differently, make a perfect sentence in Thai—"Khai,

WHAT WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITIES FOR UNHAPPILY MARRIED MEN!

BUT OF ALL THE THREE—GIVE ME THE STAMPS!

This Man Collects Stamps.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Her husband's absorption in collecting postage stamps was cited as grounds for separate maintenance by Mrs. Etta M. Wilson, in court today.

She asserted her husband, William Wirt Wilson, was a model husband before he took up the collection and sale of stamps. He is the president of a stamp company and was said to have an income of $7,500 a year.

And This One Wagon Wheels.

MACON, Ga., May 3.—Until prohibition came into effect there was no happier family in Macon than that of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Walker Strate. When the Eighteenth Amendment gripped the country Mr. Strate was thrown out of employment and started to collect wagon wheels, storing his valuable collection in the parlor, bedroom and bath. He neglected his family in his mad desire to get styles of wheels possessed by no other experts, his wife charges in suing him for divorce here.

This One Takes Empty Beer Kegs.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 7.—Mrs. Solomon Roe yesterday created a sensation in Superior Court here when she entered suit for divorce, charging that her husband has developed a hobby in the last year collecting unemployed beer kegs. The plaintiff testified today that her husband spent all of his spare hours gazing at the kegs in mournful and reminiscent moods and refused to purchase their daughter a radiophone. Mrs. Roe explained that the defendant has filled three rooms of their four-room bungalow with empties. The presiding judge has held Mr. Roe for further questioning, presumably concerning a recipe.—New York News.

khai khai, khai", i.e., "Who sells hen's eggs?" But a few days enables one to get around sufficiently, and this was not my first visit to Siam, either.

My time in the Thai capital was all too short, so, after ransacking thoroughly all the second-hand shops and pawnshops—and their number is legion,—for Lao sines, Siamese niello work and Chengmai silk scarves of soft tones and fine work, I traveled back, this time with a Judge of the Supreme Court as my traveling companion. I visited Penang, but saw nothing there of philatelic interest.

And now to the Malaya-Borneo Exhibition which opened the day after my return from Siam.

On March 31st the Prince of Wales came to Singapore, and opened the Exhibition in person. Singapore was full of royalties and rajahs and Highnesses. Sir Charles Viner Brooke, third Rajah of Sarawak, had a table next to me at the hotel, and most kindly gave me an autographed copy of Baring-Gould's "History of Sarawak under Its Two White Rajahs." He is a fine-looking man, but appears quite a bit older than his portrait on the current issue of stamps. The Sultan of Johore was everywhere in evidence, a tall, heavy, finely-built man, always dressed in an officer's khaki uniform and topi. Then there was the Sultan of Kedah who sat immediately behind me at "Carmen" at the Opera House that night, in gorgeous cloth-of-gold sarong, with a headcloth curiously peaked cloth), surrounded by an entourage only less resplendently saronged and bajued than himself. Between us, I'm sure that they didn't enjoy "Carmen" overmuch. Then, at the races, in the royal enclosure, with the Prince of Wales only ten feet away, the Sultan of Perak, in light green silk baju and gold sarong, received from His Royal Highness a cup for his winning horse. And that night, in a dim corner of the ballroom, where the Prince of Wales was the guest of honor, I espied a dark little Malay in a costly sarong, with a headcloth curiously peaked like a jockey's cap, but very long, and turned up at the edges, all of gold. His Highness, the Sultan of Perlis. The other sultans had met the Prince in Kuala Lumpur, and rumour had it that His Highness of Trengganu didn't approve of the place assigned him in the ceremonies, so was "sick" and sent a tungku, or minister, to represent him. It gave me a queer feeling to see in the flesh all these celebrities of the stamp album.

But to the Exhibition stamps—quite an exhibition, by the way. The first day the stamps were first put on sale at a tiny office in the grounds. I bought a half-sheet of some values, and some sets, which were prepared to sell at one dollar, all put up in labelled envelopes. These sets were up to 45 cents, though others were for sale. Those overprinted "MALAY-BORNEO EXHIBITION" were the 1, 2, 4, 5, 8, 10, 25, 45 cents, $1, 2, 5. The explanation given me at the Post Office was that they wanted the set to sell for exactly $9.00, and therefore only those values were surcharged. I can't say that the reason appealed to me.

The following day the post-offices were besieged with people who wanted the stamps. I managed to get some sheets and panes—my share. I have found the following errors, which make it appear as though the stamps were overprinted in panes of 60 at a time. Every alternate stamp of the sixth and twelfth vertical rows on the sheet, commencing with the second, has a small second "A" in MALAYA. Many stamps on each sheet exist without a stop after EXHIBITION. I have my stamps in Singapore, so cannot indicate which stamps have this except that I know that the fourth stamp in the bottom row of each pane has no stop. I have obtained these errors in all values. I am told that a variety exists without hyphen between MALAYA and BORNEO, but this variety I have not seen.

On Saturday, at noon, appeared a few sets of Borneo, surcharged in black on some value, in red on others, as above, with the addition of "1922". I obtained four sets, at $2.00, including two copies of a couple of the values, to make up the amount. I have seen no sheets, panes, or blocks of the above, so I cannot say whether or not there are any errors. The other surcharges I have not seen as yet, as I left on Sunday, the second, for Java. I was informed, however, that a corrected setting of the Straits Settlements stamps, as described above, was being made, with all the varieties removed.

I hope, on my return to Singapore shortly, to write you again of these varieties, as well as of any issues and surcharges which I may meet here in Java.

CANCELLATIONS.

By FORREST SHREVE.

It has been argued frequently that geographical interest is the fundamental thing which underlies the desire to collect stamps. There is a great deal to be said in support of this statement, if anyone really cares to study the grand constellation of motives that attract young and old to the enjoyment of The Supreme Hobby. It has been less frequently commented on that the collecting of precancelled stamps, postmarks and cancellations is also largely based on the geographical appeal. Precancels are nothing more than stamps that have been legibly obliterated in a special manner with the name of the using office, and the gathering of precancels is therefore simply a part of the larger field of cancellations. Not only has the precancel field grown tremendously in favor in this country and Canada, but the entire study of cancellations is now being given far greater attention than it received ten years ago.

In the early days of stamps it was a common custom to supply each post-office with a "killer" bearing a number surrounded by some simple device. Each post-office was assigned a number, and the official lists of the offices to which these numbers refer provide us with a key by which we can discover at what office any stamp with numbered cancellation was used. Sometimes a dated or undated town-name postmark was used in addition to the killer, but in such cases the postmark was usually placed at some distance from the stamp, so as to be perfectly legible. In England the collecting of numerical cancellations on British stamps has long been popular, and the Victorian issues with cancellations showing their use at foreign offices have always commanded interest. The early issues of France, Netherlands, Denmark, and other European countries bore smaller numbers than the British stamps, surrounded by circles or dots, and each of these countries has a few devotees who are still hunting for ten or a dozen elusive numbers. The collector of cancellations on early United States stamps has a much more complicated series of numbers, letters and symbols with which to deal, giving greater elasticity to their collection and arrangement.

In these days of specialization a collector is very apt to become interested in the cancellations of his favorite countries. In the United States the machine cancellation has taken all the lure out of collecting obliterations on current issues, and has thrown the interest to pre-cancels and postmarks. In many foreign countries, however, the machine cancellation is little used and the postmark is placed directly on the stamp. These countries offer interesting fields for collecting a series of one or more stamps used at each of the offices. Many practical considerations have to be taken into account before starting to collect the cancellations of a given country. Some countries have such a large number of offices that much patience and many years would be required to begin to make a showing in them. This is true, even of countries with a relatively small population, such as Chile, Victoria and New Zealand. Other countries use such inferior cancelling ink or such badly-worn hand-stamps, that the great majority of their postmarks are not legible. Still other countries have a very small list of offices, and give fine promise of the early completion of a set of town-name cancellations, but experience and prolonged hunting, followed by a consulation of the atlas, will discover that some of these offices are very small and send out only a handful of letters per week. Between these extremes lie a number of countries, particularly among the smaller British Colonies, in which there are enough offices to furnish a good field, and where enough mail is handled to make it possible to secure a good showing. Among the larger fields are Jamaica, Newfoundland and Ceylon, while smaller fields are offered by Trinidad, Fiji, Gold Coast, Mauritius, Bermuda and many others. Most of these dominions and colonies used numerical cancellations on their early issues, which can be collected along with the more readily obtained town-name cancellations.

Jamaica may be taken as an example of the colonies in which it is possible to make a good showing of regular issues with the two series of cancellations. Prior to 1874, there were 58 post-offices at small out-lay, and to supplement it in Jamaica. Kingston, the capital, was designated by the cancellation "A 01" in an oval of horizontal bars with short bars at each side. The other offices, in alphabetical order, used the designations from A 27 to A 83. From 1874, to about 1885, 25 more offices were established, using "killers" with either one letter and two figures, or else three figures. The majority of the numerical cancellations were used at the largest towns in the island but 16 of them used at small offices have been discontinued in later years, so that town-name cancellations do not exist for some of them and are very rare for others.

The search for stamps with legible names is a very diverting game for the simon-pure collector. There are now slightly more than 200 post-offices in Jamaica. There are half a dozen varieties of Jamaican stamps that can be bought for 15c to 40c per 100. The 30 largest towns will be found in the first two or three hundred stamps examined, and then the real fun will begin. History, geography and natural history will vie with each other in giving interest to the search. Where else in the world can one find such quaint names as Four Paths, Half Way Tree, Above Rocks, Harry Watch, and Giddy Hall?

The Spanish occupation of the island, which ceased over 250 years ago, is perpetuated in such names as Rio Bueno, Savanna-la-Mar, Oracabessa, and Ocho Rios. The Englishman who goes out to the colonies never fails to take with him the familiar names of his native land, which is "home" to him the rest of his life. In Jamaica we have Old England, Little London, Windsor Castle, Bath, Shooters Hill, and a score of other transplanted names. Alligator Pond, Bamboo, Anchovy, Manchioneal, and Pear Tree Grove are all distinctive of tropical land, the last referring to the avocado or alligator pear, and not to the own fruit of that name. Many other names of offices require interpretation, for Ffyfe's Pen and May Pen are not the homes of penitentiaries, but are names for near-by "pens" or stock farms. Salt Gut is a narrow estuary with occasional water, the word "gut" being used in a sense which is common on the southern Atlantic seaboard. Mavis Bank is named for a Scotch bird which no inhabitant of that mountain village has ever seen. To anyone who has visited this charming tropical island, the names of its many ports and bays, and such names as Cascade, Lluidas Vale, Swift River and Blue Mountain Valley will recall pictures of unforgettable beauty.

With geography as the foundation a few hundred stamps as the material, and true collecting zeal as the motive power, it will be possible to derive some fine fun by collecting cancellations in an otherwise completed country.—Pacific Philatelist

LOCKPORT'S FAMOUS $8,000 STAMP.

By CHARLES H. BALL.

(With all the publicity given Boscawen's stamp the city of Lockport, N. Y., feels that it, too, has come into the limelight through the Ferrari sale. This clipping from the Buffalo Evening News of May 15, has been sent us by several persons. We do not know the author, Mr. Ball, but he has written a story that is of more than ordinary interest.—W.O.W.)

The city of Lockport has a new title to fame. It has had wide and favorable mention for nearly a century for its unique and interesting canal locks; it has had occasion for boasting over the famous men and women who were once counted among its residents, among them Potter Palmer, who sought a wider field for merchandising in Chicago; Belva Lockwood, a feminine candidate for the presidency, and Washington Hunt, once governor of New York.

New and desirable publicity now comes to Lockport by way of Paris. It is only a tiny scrap of paper that did the business, but by virture of its rarity it brought an almost unbelievable sum—75,000 francs. The highly-prized article sold was the only known copy of the Lockport postmaster's provisional stamp, issued in 1846, one of a number of similar stamps making up a part of the collection of Baron Ferrari, an Austrian nobleman, who died in 1917, after 53 year of stamp collecting. His splendid collection, one of the finest in the world, was seized by the French government, which will appropriate the proceeds of a dispersal at auction.

This is a great year in Lockport postoffice history, for, aside from the sale of this valuable stamp there is further reason for celebrating. It is just a century since the Lockport postoffice was established with George H. Broughton as first postmaster. In 1822 Western New York was largely forest, but Lockport was dreaming of prosperous days to come with the opening of the Erie canal. On the site of the future city half a dozen families were living in unfinished log houses, but other homes were building and village lots were being sold as fast as the land was cleared. The hamlet already had its tavern where the canal contractors boarded and soon stores were opened and the first newspaper established—the Lockport Observatory.

HORSEMEN CARRIED MAIL.

The mails for the new settlement came by way of Molyneux Corners, seven miles to the northwest, and for a time Lockport's rival for the choice of county seat. Letters and papers were transferred from Ridge road stages to horseback riders, who brought them to town. In 1823 enough forest had been cleared to permit connection with the stages at Wright's Corners, about five miles directly north, and when the canal opened in 1825, business in Lockport boomed and stages with mail were soon running directly into the town.

A little study of early postal conditions will show how it was that the Lockport postmaster decided to issue his own stamps.

Not only were postal facilities limited in 1825, but the conduct of correspondence was expensive. The rates were those established under the act of April 9, 1916. It cost six cents to send a single-sheet letter from Lockport to Buffalo and 25 cents to New York. The schedule was: 30 miles or under six cents; 30 miles to 80 miles ten cents; 80 to 150 miles 12½ cents; 150 to 400 miles, 18½ cents; more than 400 miles 25 cents. In one respect the government was liberal; postage did not need to be paid in advance. In fact, so many letters went collect that the system became a nuisance. A great number of useless and unwanted letters were mailed and the government revenues ran behind.

To the satisfaction of all who had letters to write, the government, in 1845, made a reduction in postage rates. Under the act of March 3, effective July 1, the letter rate, for not exceeding a half ounce and a distance of 300 miles, became five cents; over that distance, ten cents. The option of paying postage was still continued, and, as a large share of letter-writers remained unwilling to produce the postage fee, the department and the postmasters continued to have their troubles. Nearly a third of the 14,000 postmasters of the United States resigned their office under the operation of the law of 1845, because of diminished revenues.

Postmasters Changed Things.

A few thrifty postmasters determined to change things. It cost money to wear a silk hat and carry a cane to support the dignity of governmental office, and the government seemed to be shirking its responsibilities as a provider. So the postmasters of a few towns and cities had stamps printed and paid for them out of their own pockets. These stamps were good only at postoffices where issued. Among the postmasters who adopted the new plan were those of New York, Baltimore, Alexandria, Va., Boscawen, N. H., Millbury, Mass., New Haven, Conn., Brattleboro, Vt., Saint Louis, Mo., and Lockport, N. Y. The stamps were not things of beauty, but as a rule of quite crude design. Because of their rarity, however, all have risen greatly in value. Each stamp has a story in this respect. The Boscawen stamp, worth only a nickel when issued in 1846, sold at the Ferrari auction in Paris for the equivalent of $12,500. The residents of the little town of Boscawen have hardly recovered from the shock, and some of them may be still hunting from cellar to attic to find more of these amazingly valuable specimens of philately.

The Lockport stamp is listed in the catalogue of the Scott Stamp Company, which includes all stamps ever issued, as No. 13, and as "black and red, buff." As shown by the illustration, the design is simple and the printing without any effort at ornamentation. The stamp does not compare in attractiveness with those issued by some of the other postmasters, particularly with that of the New York office. Yet its value is vastly beyond the New York stamp, which is comparatively common, as early stamps go.

Stamp Value Increased.

The Lockport postmaster who issued the stamp was Colonel H. W. Scovell, who became a resident of the town in 1831, was appointed postmaster in 1835, and reappointed in 1840. He served until 1849, his long term covering several changes in the presidency and the administration of the postoffice department. How many stamps he issued is conjectural. Some other postmasters got out as many as 500, but, so far as known, only one of the Lockport stamps is now in existence. It is barely possible that others may be discovered. No doubt some of these stamps were on letters received in Buffalo and remained long hidden away in trunks and boxes in household attics. The specimen sold in Paris is said to have changed hands a few years ago for $100.

Colonel Scovell's remuneration as Lockport postmaster for the year ending in 1847, as shown by official statistics, was $1,246.43, a fair-sized income for the day and for a town of not more than 9,000 population, but certainly small in comparison with the price a stamp collector was willing to pay for a faded piece of paper stamped "Lockport, N. Y. Paid 5." Moreover, the 75,000 francs does not represent the entire cost. The French government imposes a 17½ per cent. tax upon the purchaser. The price realized in American money, therefore, was $7,500 plus 17½ per cent., making it $8,812. That amount would have paid the postmaster's salary for seven years. It is also a little more than three times the net proceeds of the Lockport postoffice for the year ending in 1847. The prices paid at Paris have been the highest on record and certainly indicate that stamp collecting is in high favor with men of money.

THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF BELGIUM.

By BERTRAM W. H. POOLE.

CHAPTER XV.

The Sunday Label Stamps.

During the year 1892, there were rumours that the Minister of Railways, Posts and Telegraph, desirous of lightening the labors of postal employes on Sundays, conceived that this could be effected by the issue of stamps expressing on their face the sender's desire that the letters should not be delivered on the Sabbath. He ordered the director of the stamp factory at Malines to prepare specimens of the current 10c and 25c stamps with a removable tablet at the foot. These essays consisted of the 10c and 25c stamps of the 1884-7 series with a label at foot intimating, in both French and Flemish, that the letter franked by them was not to be delivered on a Sunday. Apparently some of the essays were distributed and most of the contemporary philatelic papers chronicled them with hoots of derision. The comments below, from the Philatelic Record and Monthly Journal respectively, are typical of the general opinions so frankly expressed:—

Philatelic Record.—"The project does not find much favor, and will probably be abandoned, for it bears absurdity on the face of it. Why not close the post-office in Brussels on a Sunday, and limit the delivery in other places to one a day, as is done in England, or give them the benefit of local option? Why are newspapers and foreign letters to be delivered and not inland and town letters. If the Belgians do nothing worse on a Sunday than read and write a few letters, they are very good people and most exemplary Sabbatarians."

Monthly Journal.—"A better plan would be, if this foolishness is to be continued, to issue the Sabbatarian coupons in separate sheets, free of charge, to those who wish for them; it would probably be more economical, and if they were made on thin paper. and a little more square in shape, they would make very neat gummed hinges! This would ensure a good circulation of them among philatelists. Minister Vandenpeereboom owes us something, for it is stated that he boasts that every new stamp produces a profit to the post-office of 50,000 francs. We are evidently looked upon as public benefactors, and there is no great difference between a philatelist and a philanthropist after all!"

But notwithstanding the general opinion that the idea was too farcical to be taken seriously the Belgian administration proceeded with the scheme and the following Royal decree authorised the new stamps:

"At the Request of Our Minister of Railways, Posts and Telegraphs:—

We have decreed and do decree:

1.—New types of postage stamps will be created to take the place of those authorized by previous decrees.

2.—The stamps of 10 centimes and over will bear Our Portrait. Those of a less value than 10 centimes will show Our Arms.

3.—The inscriptions on the new postage stamps will be in French and also in Flemish.

4.—The new postage stamps will be sold at their full values.

5.—The stamps of the designs now current will continue to be valid until supplies are exhausted.

May 14th, 1893.

(Signed) LEOPOLD."

This Royal announceemnt was followed by a Ministerial decree on the next day stating the colors and values of the stamps in the new series, etc.:—

"IT IS DECREED:

Art. 1.—The postage stamps of the new issue will have attached to them a label inscribed NE PAS LIVRER LE DIMANCHE—NIET BESTELLEN OP ZONDAG.

It is optional on the part of the senders to detach this label from the postage stamps before using them, or to leave it adhering.

Correspondence bearing this label will not be delivered on Sundays or holidays.

Art. 2.—The values and colors of the new postage stamps will be as follows:—

10 centimes, red.
20 centimes, reseda.
25 centimes, blue.
35 centimes, brown.
50 centimes bistre.
1 franc, carmine on light green.
2 francs, lilac on rose.
1 centime, grey.
2 centimes, orange.
5 centimes, green.

Art. 3.—The issue of the new stamps will commence with the 10 centimes value which will be put on sale on June 1 next.

Brussels, May 15, 1893.

(Signed) J. VANDENPEEREBOOM."

A further decree, dated July 7th, 1893, announced that the other values of the series would be issued on the following dates: the 2, 20 and 25 centimes on August 1st, the 1 and 5 centimes on September 1st, the 50 centimes and 1 franc on October 1st, and the 35 centimes and 2 francs on November 1st.

On October 24th, 1893, the color of the 2 centimes was changed from yellow to red-brown by official decree and in March, 1897, another decree announced that "the 50 centimes stamp now printed in bistre will in future be printed in grey".

One design served for all the denominations from 10 centimes to 2 francs inclusive, this being adapted from the 35c stamp of the last issue. Evidently the original 35c die was used, the value discs being removed, and then the secondary dies were inscribed with the desired denomination.

For the stamps of 1, 2 and 5 centimes a new design was drawn by H. Hendrickx and the die engraved by A. Doms, as shown by the initials "HH" and "AD", which appear in microscopic letters at the bottom of the design. The Royal Arms are displayed on a mantle on a ground of fine vertical lines with "BELGIQUE" at left and "BELGIE" at right, while at the top is "POSTES" and below is "POSTERIJEN". In the upper angles are ornamental wings while the value is shown on small squares in each of the lower corners.

The Dominical label is the same on all the values of the series and consists of an oblong inscribed in two lines "NE PAS LIVRER LE DIMANCHE—NIET BESTELLEN OP ZONDAG" with narrow ornamental border below and a wider one above. The label is separated from the design proper by a white space about the width of a hair. The ornamentation at top was supposed to receive the line of perforation so that the label could be easily removed if desired. The upper line of inscription is in French and the lower one in Flemish and both mean literally "not to be delivered on Sunday".

The plates were made at the Government Printing Works in Malines in the same manner as those for the preceding issues and we believe all the plates contained 300 subjects, as before, but arranged in six panes of fifty stamps each with margins between the panes. The label, of course, added considerably to the surface area of each individual stamp so that the plates were a good deal larger than any previously manufactured in Belgium.

PHILATELIC INDIGNATION.

By STANLEY PHILLIPS.

We think the attention of collectors should be drawn to the attempt to exploit them which is being made by the Governments of the Straits Settlements, and other dependencies, by means of what we regard as a totally unnecessary overprint.

During March we received circulars from the Crown Agents for the Colonies which stated that the Straits Government proposed to overprint certain stamps "MALAYA BORNEO EXHIBITION" for sale during the exhibition, which would be open from 31st March—8th April, and requested us to notify our requirements and to give the issue publicity in our columns. As we did not reply to this letter we were pressed for our requirements by 'phone and stated that they were nil. Following this, similar letters notified that North Borneo, Brunei and Trengganu were about to overprint their stamps in the same way.

The eagerness displayed in ascertaining the trade demand for these stamps and in attempting to secure publicity for them leaves no doubt in our mind that these issues were planned with the sole idea of extracting money from the pockets of stamp collectors. If they had been in use for some months before the exhibition opened, they might be claimed to be an advertisement, though a special postmark would have served the purpose just as well, but, issued at the time of the exhibition their advertising value is practically nil, and there certainly seems no reason why a colonial exhibition should be "commemorated."

It is time that the authorities throughout the Empire realized that stamp collectors refuse to be fleeced by the issue of these unnecessary varieties. We trust that the trade as a whole have refused to indent for such rubbish, so that the purveyors may realize that the game is not worth the candle. In any case collectors must realize that only by boycotting effectively such issues as these can they avoid having their albums and catalogues swollen with stamps which have not the faintest philatelic or historic interest. Perhaps the Philatelic Congress may think the matter deserving of serious action which would have the support of all who have the best interests of our hobby at heart.

We are glad to note that the leading dealers and the philatelic journals are setting their faces firmly against these stamps. We hereby give notice that we shall not catalogue or deal in them, and our friends, Messrs. Whitfield King and Co., have made a similar announcement.

HINGES AGAIN.

By L. H. BRIGHAM.

Being a firm believer in the defence of a principle as long as it has a leg to stand upon, the following is offered in rebuttal to the article by Frank L. Applegate which seems to point out that the matter of hinging is of minor, rather than of major importance and that the writer's method of "mounting 'em", is soon to be placed in the discard, for, says Mr. Applegate in part, "I observe that many, if not indeed a majority of careful collectors, use other methods, etc."

(1) If, as Mr. Applegate claims, the matter of hinging has already been much over-emphasized (which minimizes its importance in comparison with other details relative to the care of our stamps) why so prompt to, "take the stump", in reference to this very subject?

Difference of opinion is a highly desirable trait and much good has resulted in the philatelic world from it, but it certainly seems that inconsistency exists, in giving voice to one's variance when the speaker first claims that the ubject has already been over-emphasized.

(2) Although my worthy opponent claims to be "qualified to observe that a majority of careful collectors, etc.," use a so-called "better method", he has overlooked the very important fact that one of the most reliable guides to "how best to do a thing," is to observe how the majority of the high class dealers hinge their good stamps—unusually valuable pieces and rarities generally aren't and should never be hinged at all—which are submitted to discriminating collectors and to the condition crank.

(3) A little ingenuity and discrimination in the selection of one's philatelic accessories, with but few exceptions eliminates the necessity "of almost always having to remove the stamp entirely free of the page to make a satisfactory study of the watermark or to apply the perforation gauge," as Mr. Applegate claims.

A two-inch square of black japanned tin, slipped beneath a hinged stamp, which has been turned back on its hinge, will show up the average watermark in all its detail to great advantage.

The exceptions are: unusually soft, thick paper varieties; mint copies coated with non-white gums and some colored papers in extremely deep shades.

The use of a transparent celluloid perforation gauge also permits easy and accurate measuring of a hinged stamp, without necessitating its removal from the album page for this purpose.

(4) Mr. Applegate claims that a collector seldom has any further use for a hinge, other than to have it firmly hold a stamp in place, once the stamp has been properly classified and mounted. In other words, he maintains that a collector seldom, if ever, wants or has occasion to reverse a stamp on its hinge, even though it were mounted so as to permit doing this.

In reference to the above statement, it is only using a fairly logical argument when we say that no one carries fire insurance because they expect they're going to suffer loss by fire, but they do carry it because such a thing could and might happen and because they want to be protected in case it does.

It is just the same with the hinging of our stamps. We don't hinge a stamp a certain way with the express idea of intending to examine it at any definite time or perhaps ever, for that matter; but merely as a safeguard and as a ready means for so doing in case we do care to at some later date.

It is an exceptional collector, who, when viewing another's collection, does not here and there see a stamp which prompts him to wish to examine it for watermarking, gum or paper; therefore, although you may never want to examine any of your stamps after they are once mounted, perhaps some of your friends will. It is a poor collector who can't find errors in mounting in another's collection and it is likewise a mighty good collector who can correctly classify and mount up ten to twenty thousand stamps without misplacing one here and there for his keen-eyed philatelic friends to discover for him.

(5) Our opponent next takes up the matter of damage resulting to stamps which are hinged flush with the perforated edges, and calls attention to perforations which have adhered too closely to the hinge, becoming torn off and otherwise damaged.

It is not necessary to moisten the entire surface of that part of the hinge which faces onto the stamp. Let the moistening end slightly below the perforations and they cannot then, even lightly, adhere to the hinge. A little practice soon makes one adept in this respect and it then takes no longer to affix a hinge in this manner than in any other.

We thoroughly agree with Mr. Applegate in his statement, "that the center of a stamp is far better able to stand the strain of removal than the perforated edges," and it is the center or near center of the stamp that receives the strain in employing the method of hinging which the writer advocates.

We must all admit that a high percentage of the ordinary wear and tear on stamps, results from removals and handling of any variety. Why, then, plan to hinge our stamps so that it will be necessary to remove them for the purpose of examination and jeopardize their condition even minutely, when it is so simple a matter to arrange to have them easily turn over on their faces with a light lift of the stamp tongs?

(6) We next come to the matter of appearance or "sightliness" as our friend expresses it.

Mr. Applegate claims that a page of stamps which allows the hinges to project above the stamps or to show bet the perforations, are far less attra and neat in appearance than a page v hides all evidence of the hinges.

If the projection of the hinges a the stamps is not uniform in height is unquestionably so, but we can natu assume that the collector who take pride at all in the appearance o stamps will see to it that this cond does not exist.

If uniform in height, projecting h or those showing between perfora (but little of the hinge is seen in case) add rather than detract fron appearance of a page in the opinio many. At worst it cannot be j claimed that their appearance in any lends an air of untidiness to a page more than we would attempt to ad the idea that hinges detract from appearance of a door simply because happen to be of a type which s They are, in each instance, a nece which has been arranged and mad attractive as possible in keeping wit service which each class performs respective sphere.

(7) Stamps which have the full (not length) of the hinge adheri both stamps and page, even th hinged free of the perforations, wil "flap around," as Mr. Applegate presses it, even under unusually s handling.

The "flapping around" of h stamps is caused by the hinge h been moistened only on one side or the center to one side which lea certain amount of freedom and between the hinged stamp and the p if it is this half of the hinge whi at fault—or between the stamp an hinge if it is the upper half of hinge which has not been mois across its entire width.

The size of a hinge should also form to the size of the stamp mounted.

No satisfactory stability could r through attempting to use na slender, tea table legs to support a dining table.

Neither will a hinge suitable fo on a No. 57 Great Britain or a No Victoria serve its purpose if affixe such stamps as Bavaria No. 86 or Ve zuela No. 204, which are stamps n ten times the size of the first mentioned.

It is the neglect to use a large en sized hinge on a great many of stamps which is to blame for "rolling around" and getting out of original perfect alignment, rather the method by which they are mo having anything to do with it. A experimenting in this respect will both of these contentions correct.

(8) In conclusion, the best proc how really an important matter hi is and whether or not it has, or ever be, "over-emphasized," is shown b great amount of importance and s which the average careful collector upon this operation and by the eve creasing demand for nothing but best grade of peelable hinges by e serious collector (the matter of the ference in cost being a secondary sideration) the care taken in the m facture of these hinges and the re of some collectors to do business a dealer who sends out selections are not properly hinged with the kind of hinges, regardless of how his selections of stamps may be.

There is small profit in hinges fo average dealer because they all sell and the demand is fairly well distrib and yet there is no other item tha

SOME REAL THINGS FOR A CHANGE.

By LOWELL J. RAGATZ.

Friend Dealer had called me up shortly after my arrival home from a day's work on seventeenth century manuscripts at the library. "Come around to the office after dinner tonight", he had said, "I've got some junk I want to go over and I know that you always like to browse around". Seven-thirty, therefore, found me opening the door between Doctor Payne, the dentist's, and the Zum Zum Hop and Malt Extract Company's offices.

Junk it was. What had been four gunny sacks full of continentals lay in a heap upon the floor. Piles of half-filled penny approvals taken from a crate covered the counter. Friend Dealer was about to begin the emptying of a carelessly crammed trunk labelled "Packet Goods".

"Just got the stuff in", he said. "Remember the old Humbolt Company we used to buy our packets and sets from when we began collecting back in 1906? Well, here's what's left of it. Just out of curiosity I wrote to the old address some weeks ago inquiring if the company was still doing business. A bit later came a reply from one of Humbolt's daughters telling me that her father had been dead for ten years. She said that she well remembered how he used to have them all help him evenings, sorting stamps and making up packets. There were still several bags and a crate and a trunkful of things in the attic, but they probably weren't worth much as the man who had bought her father's stock-books hadn't bothered to take these thrown-ins along. If I was interested, perhaps twenty-five dollars would be a fair price. So, on a chance, I sent my check, and here's what I got."

From the top of the trunk came an armful of circulars. "Reliance Packets", in all their range from 50 to 4,000 variety ones is what they offered. How well I remembered having pored over one of these self-same circulars long years before, wondering how it would feel to be able to sit down and casually order the "Jumbo" 4,000 all different packet, while my spending money could let me hope but for the 500 one at most!

Then came bundles of ready-mades—the 50 variety ones, those of 100 varieties, the 250's and 500's, the 1,000 "no two alike", and a very few 2,000 "count positively guaranteed", all made up more than a decade ago. But not a single "Jumbo". Perhaps they had not been stocked after all, and had merely been offered in the vague hope that someone some day might somehow send in the asking price. In which event, of course, a "special" could be made up.

Filling the bottom half of the trunk was packet stock. There were sheets of Spanish colonials in both king and baby heads, Cuban and Japanese revenues, the Army Franks in three colours (to locate which I had vainly thumbed my first catalogue over from cover to cover!), Seebecks complete, Heligoland reprints, Guatemala parrots, San Marino 903's, Peru llamas, Nyassa giraffes, Mexican numerals, Prussian officials, Switzerland seated Helvetia remainders, Portuguese colonials 2½ reis, Carlos heads, Rapid Telegraph labels, 1c French colonies peace and progress type, divers Columbian issues, Chinese Treaty Ports, and low value Paraguays; there, too, were envelopes of Canadian maps and maple leaves, Brazilian lady heads, Belgian Leopold issues, Austrian Francis Josef numerals, 1892 Argentinas, Serbian 1901 and the like—perhaps 1,500 kinds all told, the typical "basic stamps" of packets of a decade or so ago. The continentals, of course, had been "fillers".

For some two hours we looked over the contents of that trunk, meeting again many of the friends of our early collecting days. Then, too, there were many which we had not had. What we would not have given then to have had some of these in our little albums—and now we called them "junk". At last the bottom was reached, and we arose from between the piles of things which had been formed about us.

"Well," said Friend Dealer in his practical way, "there's twenty-five dollars' worth, sure enough. Nothing much, but then, the continentals run way better than those of today and they'll tickle the pound folks who growl over what's imported these days, and as for this packet stuff—why, I've got it! I'll can the revenues and the like, and the rest of it's going into Reliance Packets and the kids will get things like we used to in the good old days. You don't find stamps like these in the packets of 1921; now they're on sheets, and a good lot of them are in stock-books. They're junk, sure, but try to pick up nice lots of them and see how you come out. That's the way it always is; today's packet goods are tomorrow's counter stuff. Say, but won't the kids be tickled over Reliance Packets, and won't they make a raid on them? They're sure filled up on Neurope, cheap though they be, and it will be a genuine treat for them to get some real things for a change. What say?"

I thought so too. And so must the "kids", for Reliance Packets have been slipping over the counter and through the mails at a rate which would make even the champion vendor of snake oil at a county fair gasp for breath. After all, aren't you and I, too, always looking for "some real things for a change"?
